The St. Anne Society acted as an escort from the church entrance to the sanctuary rail, with Mrs. Gederon Rose, Mrs. Pierre Cote and Mrs. Victoria Demers as banner bearers. Mrs. Joseph Lefebvre, Mrs. Cresantine Mallette, Mrs. Albert Cloutier and Mrs. Eloise Caillouette were canopy bearers. Mrs. Joseph F. Gaudreau, the organist, accompanied for special singing by the St. Anne Anne choir, directed by Mrs. Joseph Boucher. About fifteen hundred personal taxpayers of the town of Windham had failed to fulfill their obligation of paying the $2, when the last legal day for the payment of the tax closed, Saturday night. With about 6,000 persons eight hundred of these rushing in on table some 4,500 had paid up, over the final day to square themselves. There are more women than men liable for the tax. Collector Lester H. Blish stated that he would take into consideration the matter of giving a few days of grace to delinquents. Legal proceedings will be started against those who attempt to avoid paying the necessary two dollars.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen L. Wilcox were held at the home of her son, Welles S. Wilcox, 148½ West Main street, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. F. C. Williams of the Episcopal church, officiated. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Willimantic cemetery. The bearers were, Dr. George E. Wilcox, Edward L. Wilcox, Welles S. A band of energetic fire fighters organized in the neighborhood prevented another bad fire such as Scotland has suffered of late, when they extinguished a fire that was threatening the old Carlyle house, near the top of Carey Hill in Scotland, Saturday forenoon. The house is occupied by Byron E. Wilson, his sisters, Robert Browning and members of the Ransom family. When discovered, the fire had a good hold on the roof. Mr. Browning who made the discovery and Mr. Wilson fought the blaze from the inside with pails of water and had the fire practically under control when volunteers arrived. Some eight square yards of the roof were damaged.

DANIELSON

MOTOR COACHES MAKE GOOD THROUGH TRYING 3 MONTHS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Feb. 28—Motor coaches of the Connecticut company rounded out three months of service Sunday night, and in that winter period have been given a severe test as to their ability to furnish regular and dependable transportation along the route between Norwich and Putnam. The service may be rated as exceptionally good. Under trying winter conditions almost from the first day the coaches were put to work the service has been maintained with as much regularity as was formerly supplied by the trolleys, excepting during the snow blockades following the big storms of February 4, and February 10. These storms were of a nature and volume to raise the question as to whether the trolley cars would have been any more successful in combatting them. There is much to be said, pro and con, on this matter, but the fact remains that snowstorms of a greater severity tied up the trolleys in winters that come to mind, and one recalls an occasion when a trolley car was left stranded at Wauregan for weeks and when service by trolley was completely suspended between Danielson and Putnam for a period of more than two months, ice having sheathed the rails and make breaking out of the line prohibitive from an expense standpoint.

The motor coaches have made good. Having been kept in operation through an unusually severe three months of weather and bad traveling conditions, it is not to be assumed that they will not function with an even greater degree of perfection during the milder periods of the year. The service has been so regularly and so satisfactory that even those who had certain prejudices against them when they were first put upon the highways to replace the trolleys are now very generally admitting that the coaches can do the work. They have been operated with particularly good judgment and care and there are no accidents of record of anything more than minor incidents for those so inclined to hang a criticism on. The coaches have served well, and it seems only decent that the fact be mentioned in print.

JUDGE J. M. TUCKER PROVES FEBRUARY WAS EXTRA COLD

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Feb. 28—Judge James M. Tucker is probably as accurate a statistician as is to be found in eastern Connecticut. For many years he has religiously maintained a diary and has paid special attention to the weather and made notations relative thereto. He consented Sunday morning to give out certain facts about February weather, now a thing to be remembered only for 1926, for the first 28 days were the hardest. Judge Tucker's figures show that the month just closed was for the entire period, about ten degrees colder every morning at sunrise than February of 1925. The average sunrise temperature for mornings in February 1926, was 26.16, while the average temperature at sunrise during February 1925 was 30.46. However, February of 1924, showed a lower sunrise mean than either February of 1925 or 1926, the figures being 16.25, degrees above zero. The February of 1923 was even colder, with a mean of 15.74. However, the colder February of 1924 did not produce such uncommon storms as did the February of 1926, it being a month of exceptional pleasant, if unusually cold, weather. February said its farewell as to sunrise temperatures Sunday morning, with a minimum of 3 degrees above zero in Danielson. It was trying to the last, though there was promise of better things as the last day of the month wore on with sunny skies and steadily rising temperature.

FIRE IN BERRIS HOUSE STARTS IN CLOTHES CLOSET

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Feb. 28—Just before 11 o'clock Saturday morning an alarm from Box 31 called out the department for a fire in a house at Spring and Winter streets owned by George P. Berris. The fire originated in a clothes closet through which a chimney ran up toward the roof. It appeared to Chief A. P. Woodward as though a spark had blown out from an opening in the chimney and set fire to the contents of the closet. Chemicals were used at first by the firemen, who found the house stifling with smoke, and later water was turned on for a minute or so, to make certain that the fire had been wholly extinguished. The loss is not large and was chiefly chargeable against smoke and water.

Mrs. Emma Fitzpatrick, 51, died Sunday morning about 10 o'clock at a hospital in Providence, where she was admitted as a patient during the past week. Her death came as a shock to her relatives and friends in East Killingly, near which community she had lived for about ten years, coming there from New York and taking a small farm place that she had developed with relatives who made their home with her. Mrs. Fitzpatrick was a widow. The body was brought here from Providence Sunday evening by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy. Mrs. Fitzpatrick was dearly beloved by all who had come to know her.

Putnam lodge of Elks has named the following committee to make the arrangements for the annual charity concert and ball of the organization to be held at the state armory in Danielson on a date late in April: Chairman, W. W. Wheatley secretary-treasurer, Frank M. Bedard, Sidney P. Mariand, Louis E. Kennedy, Major Grennon, George Gendreau, all of Danielson; Allen Mopsick of Moosup, E. H. Kristek of North Grosvernordale, J. J. Cavanaugh of Dayville, John H. Bulger and Exalted Ruler James E. Muray of Putnam.

At the home of Mrs. Grace Hill in East Killingly Saturday afternoon, at one o'clock, there was a prayer service for Mrs. Caroline Olive Oatley, who in her 101st year, died the past week. At 1:30 at the Union Baptist church in East Killingly the funeral service, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. D. Hetherington, was held, numbers of relatives and friends attending. The body was entombed at the Bartlett cemetery. The bearers were J. Abbott Brooks, Claude Moran, Elmer Saunders and James P. Aldrich. A. F. Woods was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Sunday afternoon at 1:30 in the Congregational church at Chepachet, R. I. funeral services for Marcus Harris Place, 77, who died at East Killingly, were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Carl Pierson, assisted by Rev. W. D. Hetherington of East Killingly. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends at the funeral of Mr. Place, who was the oldest of a family of 13 children. Relatives acted as bearers. The body was entombed at Acote's Hill cemetery in Chepauchet. A. F Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

With the coming of March and the daily stories from the training camps of the big league teams in the south, there is a revival of baseball interest in Danielson. As for a number of years past, one hears talk of forming one sort or another of baseball leagues, a number of eastern Connecticut towns figuring in the forecasting. Maybe something will come of this—maybe not. There was a revival of baseball interest in the territory toward the end of last year's playing season. It was promising, but not conclusive, as to how much baseball this territory would like to see the coming season and as to how much support the public might be depended upon to give. Baseball is a grand old game, but there has been a certain loss of interest in its hereabouts since the end of the World war, for what reason or reasons is hard to set down. Possibly 1926 will bring a real revival of the enthusiasm that was so remarkable in days gone by.

In the fiscal year that will end with the coming of April the fire department has responded to 44 alarms, a record for Danielson for a period of twelve months. There has been an unusual number of alarms since the cold weather season set in, five months ago, and most of them have been for chimney fires. There are those who hold the theory that a considerable number of these alarms have been brought about through the use of substitutes for anthracite coal. Their idea is that wood, soft coal or semi-bituminous coal produces more soot than does anthracite and consequently, increases the fire hazard. This may or may not be true. It would appear in any case in view of the number of chimney fires in Danielson during the past eleven months that having chimneys cleaned is a good investment for property owners. Every chimney fire may result in serious damage to valuable property, though the rule is such fires are extinguished before any great damage is done.

Sportsmen regard the safety of wild game birds as assured from now on, as to their getting sufficient food to maintain their existence. Throughout the country side there is much bare ground and getting food is merely a matter of going through the usual routine of hunting it up. A considerable amount of grain was distributed in this and surrounding towns by bird lovers during the deep snow periods of February, and there is evidence that the birds did not fail to find it.

This is the day—March 1—on which all operators of motor vehicles are required by law to have operators' licenses good for the next twelve months. All licenses issued for the past twelve months became null and void at midnight Sunday. Officers charged with the enforcement of the motor vehicle laws make a practice of asking drivers from time to time to se their operating licenses. Failure to produce one that is in force means a presentation in court, and a fine and costs. That's why drivers who happen to be without new licenses will be taking a very considerable risk if they drive today or hereafter without being legally qualified to do so.

Two carloads of coal set in on a siding here over the week end aroused the hope that anthracite was again coming in after a long and worrisome strike. The hope died aborning. The coal in question was of another variety that has found a ready sale here during the winter as a substitute for the hard coal that normally is in such general use in this territory.

THE SPOOLING OF RAYON CITY'S NEW INDUSTRY

PUTNAM, Feb. 28.—A company has been organized in Putnam for the winding of "rayon" on spools for the use of artificial silk products. The factory building of the Eclipse Mfg. Co., which has been vacant for six years, has been leased, the necessary machines are being installed and under the direction of John H. Moss as manager active work will be begun within a short time. Twelve or fifteen operatives will be employed at first, but it is believed that there will be a steady increase in the demand for the product which will be turned out, and that this will double and treble this force.

The new concern, which is financed by local capital, will be known as the Cargill Textile Company, and arrangements have been made with manufacturers of rayon fabrics that will consume all the output. Mr. Moss came here from Athens, Georgia, ten years ago, and has been engaged in the textile business all that time, except during the war when he served as an infantryman lieutenant overseas, and won the Croix de Guerre for gallantry in action. He married Catherine Russell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John J. Russell.

SAYBROOK AUTO THIEF CAUGHT BY CAPT. JARVIS

PUTNAM, Feb. 28.—Darwin Morse, wanted by the police of Saybrook, Conn., for burglary and theft of automobiles, was taken into custody here Saturday by Captain William Jarvis of the Putnam police.

He walked into the captain's office at police headquarters and inquired about the formalities for securing an operator's license. Captain Jarvis had a picture of Morse with descriptive matter and he also had a tip that he might appear in Putnam. Recognizing them from his photograph, the officer showed it to him and told him he was under arrest. Morse made no resistance and made no attempt to hide his identity. The car in which he came here was located and it is believed that it is one or the machines that he is charged with stealing.

Saybrook authorities were notified and two police officers of that town arrived here today and took Morse and the car back with them. They also congratulated Upptain Jarvis on his clever work.

Mrs. John M. Dean is reported critically ill at her home on Mechanics street. Her husband, who died about five years ago came here from Lowell, Mass., and he and his two sons, Charles E. Dean and John M. Dean, Jr., established the Dean Pin company, and built a factory for the manufacture of phonograph needles and other small steel needles.

GILPATRIC'S EXAMINATION COMPLETED SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Feb. 28.—The examination of G. Harold Gilpatric by Receiver George M. Coffin of the First National bank relative to his transactions regarding the missing funds was completed Saturday. The result of this examination will be forwarded to Saul Herman, federal referee in bankruptcy at Hartford. Mr. Coffin says that he thinks the information obtained from the blind cashier has fully justified the action; he also declares that as far as he judges Gilpatric has given a truthful answer to all questions put to him, and he thinks that he, Coffin, as receiver of the bank, is in a better position to determine that than anyone else.

George E. Hughes, who brought Gilpatric here from Atlanta prison, and has had charge of him all the time while there, will take him Monday morning by automobile to Hartford where Gilpatric will appear in the bankruptcy court to be examined by the creditors of his estate. He will bring him back to Putnam Monday evening and Tuesday Gilpatric will testify as a witness in a suit brought by the trustees of his estate against Mrs. Rosa Lavine to recover $2,500. It is alleged that the defendant borrowed that amount from Gilpatric personally with which to make improvement to her home. She avers that the money was repaid and Gilpatric dnies it.

The hearing of the case, the attorneds say will take all Tuesday and may possibly extend over to the next day. After that it is assumed that Gilpatric will be taken back to Hartford for examination by the governor's commission in an effort to determine whether any of the Liberty bonds held by the state were paid for by money belonging to the First National bank of Putnam.

A large and enthusiastic audience was in attendance at the high school auditorium Sunday night, to hear the Bell-Ringers and Singers of the American Glee Club. This was the last in the High School Lyceum course. The course has been very successful in a financial way. This glee club has justly won for itself a most enviable position among the leading novelty quartets of the country.

The programme was full of interesting novelty features and these clever young artists with their various instruments got some splendid effects. The bell-ringing as always was interesting and was received with enthusiasm. The personnel of the club follows: Lancelot Button, second tenor, piano, saxophone, reader, bells; Ralph Barton, first tenor piano, xylophone, bells; Charles Pfau, basso, banjo, xylophone, clarinet, bells; Ben Myers, baritone, sapohpone, xylophone, bells. T. C. Nutting of Boston talked recently to members of the bar at a meeting held in the room of the clerk of the superior court. He was in Putnam some time ago to explain the Russell system of indexing land records and took a committee to a town where the system was in use. At this meeting the committee made a very favorable report. Since Mr. Nutting was last here a survey of conditions has been made and it was found that up until 1910 many discrepancies apper between the records and indexes.

The land records are of vital importance to property owners and prospective property owners. The index is the key to these records and without a proper index serious losses may occur. Lawyers especially recognize the value of records properly indexed, as they are responsible for any oversights that may occur in looking up titles. It is the intention to bring the matter before a town meeting at some future date to see if the taxpayers will vote to have the index books revised and perfected.

One of the oldest and most interesting houses in this section of New England is located in Pomfret, on the state road between Providence and Hartford. It was built by Esther Grosvenor of Roxbury, Mass., widow of John Grosvenor, who was one of the original proprietors of the "Mashamoquet Purchase." Mrs. Grosvenor came with her five sons and her daughter in 1700, the first settler on the Purchase, and a few years later built the house, which for years was known as the Grosvenor House.

The present owner, whose mother was Emily Adeline Grosvenor, is Ralph Sabin. The house is in excellent state of preservation, in almost its original form, and it is filled with antiques. One of the the original Benjamin Franklin Markers is located directly in front of the house. The inscription "39 M. to Hartford C. H." (Court House.) This house was half way between Boston and Hartford, and is where the stage horses were changed. This turnpike was given up in 1840.

PROVISIONS FOR AIRCRAFT

Regardless of the branch to which it is applied there is always a deep interest in the matter of national defense. Opinions vary concerning it. Some believe that we should disregard what others are doing and stop using our money for such purposes. Others are insistent that we should not be negligent, that we can do more in the way of peace through adequate protection than in any other way.

Without any question we have come within the last few years to place a greater value upon our aircraft forces. We haven't accepted the claim that our battleships are obsolete, but we can understand the importance and effectiveness of the service rendered by the aircraft. If such demonstrations as have been made outside of war activity are possible it is clear that such craft can be employed with a high degree of effectiveness in time of war, and most certainly it behooves us to have adequate and modern equipment in order to offset such operations as an enemy might undertake.

Thus there is bound to be deep interest in the report which has been made by the house naval committee which supports the Butler aircraft bill for a five year building program. This bill is one which has the support of experts and calls for the carrying out of its recommendations over a period of years with a certain number of the various types of planes each year and the construction of two monstrous rigid airships. The plan is not so different from that which has been mapped out for the building program by the army, so far as the planes are concerned.

That the plan to build two large dirigibles will occasion some debate is to be expected. And the recommendation come before the Shenandoah disaster approval might have been more easily obtained, but with that in mind and the argument set forth that if such an airship could not be operated against the elements, the feeling may be that larger ones would be even less successful. That does not mean, however, that the Shenandoah furnishes an adequate excuse for denying further appropriations for such aircraft.

THE CONSUMER AND FUEL

Now that the coal strike has been settled and the mining of anthracite resumed, it is to be expected that there will be a curtailment in the consumption of bituminous and a return to the old love. But will the experience that has been had with bituminous go for nought?

There are those who are through with coal for good. They are using something else and will have no more use for anthracite.

There are those who have been trying out bituminous and coke, as well as some other substitutes. They have had varying experiences but there are those who have been most favorably impressed by the results obtained. They have found out how to use the low volatile fuel, gotten more heat from it and they are aware of the fact that while they have been paying strike prices for it a decided reduction can be expected under normal conditions.

Without any question those who have been employing substitutes have learned something. If they have found out how to cut their fuel bills they are likely to make good use of that information in the future. Already the representatives of the bituminous mines, especially those of the higher grade, are putting forth their product, in what might be regarded as sample packages, for the purpose of interesting the fuel burners, and who can say they are not going to get business as the result of the demonstrations made with their coal?

Henceforth substitutes are going to play a bigger part with the consumer. He not only knows that he can use it to soften the effect of a hard coal strike but he has likewise found out that he can bring it into use to prevent the exaction of an unwarranted high price. The consumer has not only contributed greatly to winning the coal strike but he has obtained a most valuable insight into fuel which is available, and has been for a long time, but which has been only slightly employed.

TREATYING WITH TURKEY

Not so long ago there was complaint over the manner in which rates were fixed in Turkey discriminating against American goods. It was easy to regard it as a case of penalizing the country for the failure on the part of the United States senate to ratify the treaty negotiated between the two countries, or as the means adopted for forcing this country into action.

Senate action, or failure to act, is sometimes hard to fathom, but it has the excuse in this instance that the treaty is not one that makes a favorable impression. The fact is that the treaty would probably never be called perfect, but the question now is whether it is the best that can be obtained under existing conditions and whether it should be ratified under that recognition for the present with the hopes of bringing about improvements in the future.

Just as long as no treaty exists, even though the agreement is not all that could be desired, there are bound to be handicaps for Americans who have interests in Turkey. In recognition of that fact, and the recent apparent intention of Turkey to discriminate against Americans and American goods, this government has recently concluded a temporary commercial treaty. This meets the situation for the time being. The very fact that it is a temporary treaty makes it evident that it is expected to be followed by something else.

It was a matter of three years ago that the treaty which has not been ratified was negotiated. Were it possible for this to be changed in any substantial manner by new negotiations it is believed that this government would have made such a move before this. Conditions in Turkey apparently do not warrant any such effort now, but it is a question whether the refusal to ratify anything in the way of a permanent treaty until an ideal one can be obtained is justified.

There are times when a half loaf is better than none, and we would not deny our desire for the ideal treaty by accepting the best that could be obtained.

LESS REVENUE, MORE ECONOMY

That the president should continue to point out the necessity of economy in government activity and the need of giving due thought to the amounts involved in appropriations is no more than was to be expected. President Coolidge has given his approval of the tax reduction bill. The amount involved is considerably in excess of what was favored. It is greater than it was claimed the treasury could stand without inviting a deficit, although it is less than the senate had voted to make it.

There is no question but what the administration is desirous that the country get as great a benefit from tax reduction as possible, but it doesn't favor making so great a reduction in the revenue that it would wipe out any surplus and leave the country in a hole the filling of which would call for an increase in taxation. That would be the height of folly and it is in recognition of it that the president directs attention to the wisdom of keeping down the appropriations wherever possible. Instead of rushing into needless expenditures it is a time to give heed to the conditions that exist.

We stand in the way to receive much relief from tax reduction. Our revenues will be curtailed in certain directions and yet there are hopes that they will increase in others. As for the latter there is nothing certain. It will depend upon conditions but we cannot afford to make the mistake of going blindfolded into the spending of federal funds without regard for revenue cutting that has been voted. The president is reminding congress of the importance of sticking to good business principles and he is thoroughly justified in such action. Much has been accomplished by it already and there is still much that it can do.

THE WOODLOCK NOMINATION

As a rule nominations which are recommended, or bills which are approved, by congressional committees are usually approved. Likewise an adverse majority report is not often accepted. But there are exceptions.

What will be done with the unfavorable report by a majority of one by the senate committee on the nomination of Thomas F. Woodlock of New York to be a member of the interstate commerce commission is a bit uncertain. Here is a case where a combination of democrats and disgruntled republicans has made the adverse report possible. An attempt has been made to show that Mr. Woodlock is not qualified for the commissionship, or that his utterances and activities have disqualified him, and yet through those statements he has made to the committee and the experience he has had it would seem that he not only gives due weight to the importance of the service of that commission but has the ability, experience and qualifications for making a strong member of that commission.

Without a doubt he is the man that the commission needs, or whose services it should continue to receive for he is now serving thereon through a recess appointment. It will certainly be most unfortunate if recognition of this is not displayed by the senate when the time comes for it to vote upon the appointment. It is a gross mistake to handicap a president in the selection of the strong men for positions of responsibility and trust, and in this case one who is especially qualified for wrestling with the large and intricate problems of interstate commerce.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Forward March.

Only a matter of about ten weeks to the grand opening of the straw hat season.

By this time you must have decided whether March came in like a lamb or a lion.

The man on the corner says: Once we get by the anniversary of the big blizzard all will be well.

It is a desperate effort which some of the democrats are making to create an issue for the congressional campaign.

Many are interested in the new federal tax bill, but how many of them have taken the time to read it through?

The year thus early has produced an altitude record for fibs. It is not improbable that we'll yet see a new altitude record for fliers.

From New York it is reported that fines for bootlegging are falling off. Does that mean that the courts are trying to stimulate business?

The departure of the winter month's wasn't marked by any strong remonstrance being filed on the part of those suffering from chilblains.

Remember you are interested in taxes, and fixing the rate of town taxation is the business before the adjourned annual meeting tonight.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Furniture must be carefully wiped clean before polish or wax is applied.

Canned berries must be thoroughly drained before adding to muffin batter.

Vivid East Indian cotton print makes delightful curtains for the kitchen windows.

Washing soda is a necessity about the kitchen, for scrubbing shelves, refrigerator and greasy pans.

Silver will be as bright as new if it is covered with sour milk, allowed to stand for half an hour and then washed and rinsed.

Doeskin and chamois leather gloves become stiff and harsh unless washed in tepid suds, and rinsed in slightly soapy water.

When lettuce is being prepared for the table it is always advisable to break off a little of the midrib as that is likely to be bitter.

After the oven has been used, leave the door open so the oven can thoroughly air and dry out. Otherwise the warm moist air will cause it to rust.

When making baked custard, pour boiling milk onto the beaten eggs. It will then bake beautifully firm.

Eggs are expensive now. In recipes calling for several some may be omitted if a tablespoon of flour is added for each egg.

Use granulated sugar in the rinsing water when washing laces, instead of starching them. The result will be more satisfactory.

Preserved fruit or meat should always be opened an hour or two before it is to be eaten. The flavor will be much better than if the contents of the jar are eaten at once.

When preparing a room remember that large patterns and dark colors will make it appear smaller, while a plain or striped paper, if a light hue, will give an impression of increased size.

JUST COMMON SENSE

If you find you can buy nonperishable foods in bulk and obtain better prices do so. You will probably find a number of friends and neighbors who will gladly go in with you and thus save you all quite a lot.

By careful cooking and planning many inexpensive cuts of meat can be used and result in better flavored, better cooked and more wholesome meals at a smaller cost. This may mean a little more time devoted to cooking for the housewife, but she will find it interesting in the long run.

THE CLUTTERED CELLAR

The upset cellar is largely a matter of indecision on the part of the housewife. She is uncertain whether she wants to keep this or that and it is put in the cellar until she comes to a decision. It is always thrown out later on and if given away in the first place it might have benefited someone. Don't harbor trash.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Damp soda is an excellent quick first aid for a burn.

Rub a little vinegar into the hands after you have finished washing clothes. It will soften the hands and take away that dry after-washing effect.

For shampooing use castile soap for blond hair and tar for brunette, in each case the soap shaved and melted into hot water to form a thin sirup. Soap three times and rinse four or five, with a hose if possible. The more oil you have used, the hotter your water should be and the more thorough the soaping.

The only way to make the skin clear and keep it so, is to begin from the inside. In almost all cases the trouble is with the stomach or the bowels. Laxatives will help to a certain extent though their habitual use is not to be recommended. Mineral oil is better, agar agar still better, and many people find that the very best results are obtained by using compressed yeast.

WASH PHONE TRANSMITTERS

A telephone may be a harbor for germs if it is not properly taken care of.

Persons with colds talking close to the mouthpiece, children with sticky hands touching it, and the dust in the air settling on the surface, all combine to make the telephone a possible source of danger in this respect.

Frequent washing with soap and water, however, is all that is necessary to make it quite safe. Make a rich suds of soap and lukewarm water. With a soft brush or a cloth scrub the mouthpiece. At the same time wash off the entire surface of the phone. Rinse with clear water and rub dry with a clean cloth.

This treatment should be repeated at least once a week in order to keep the telephone really clean.

CEDAR DUST KILLS COOKING ODORS

Nothing is more disagreeable or unpleasant than the odor of a previous meal. And it seems that regardless of everything that is done to eliminate this difficulty, the odors persist in permeating the rooms, and this is especially true, if it happens to be a tiny flat or apartment. Now comes an idea which is practically new and guarantees to rid the house of these offensive cooking odors. Sprinkle a little cedar dust on the hot stove and immediately a delightful aroma pervades the house and overcomes the other odors.

GIVES ADDITIONAL COLOR TO ROOM

Transparent tapestries make lovely portieres and curtains. They can be secured in choice designs and not being opaque light comes through them. This gives additional color and life to the room. They are especially pretty with a deep fringe at the bottom.

CUTS HOT BREAD

Try cutting hot brown bread with a string, it is much easier to do it this way than with a knife.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Bright red played quite a strong role at a fashion show held in New York recently.

Some of the newest negligees are of shaded or two-toned chiffon over slips of gold or silver cloth.

A new and distinctive note in the ensemble is the harmonizing of stocking shades with the trimming on the hat.

Top coats for spring are rather full in silhouette, and should be allowed to swing straight from the shoulder.

A very smart example of the new vestees features the narrow turnover collar and metal clasps.

Gloves become more ornate, with stitched cuffs and cutouts and embroideries and beads. Every color in the rainbow may be bought in the up-to-date shops.

One of the newest umbrellas on the market is made of slicker material in colors to match the new raincoats, and has a painted design in the modern manner.

Fans never were more gorgeous. Among the most striking is a huge one made of ostrich feathers in seven pastel shades. Each feather is a different color.

Stockings in shades of gray, especially in the tones of rose taupe and mauve taupe, are more in evidence at the moment than the lighter tones that have been popular for so long.

The two or three-piece ensemble and frocks giving the ensemble effect are the smartest models seen on the streets now. For either street or afternoon wear they are charming.

Coats now, instead of being trimmed with mink and ermine are trimmed with the rounds, moisten edges with fad is not confined to coats, as squirrel are frequently used to fringe voile or chifton frocks or to decorate the small, tight-fitting hats. On the latter a cluster of tails hangs over one ear.

MORE FULLNESS IN SPRING FROCKS

The new spring dress models are showing increased fullness. In the lighter materials, godets have been replaced by gathers which are hidden at the waist line. Similiar fullness is given bodies and sleeves by gathers at the yokes and wrists. For woolen materials the godets still are employed and the godets are frequently longer than the remainder of the skirt.

LACE EXTENSIVELY USED

Lace is being more extensively used today than for many years, probably because it goes so wonderfully with velvet. Velvet frocks for the younger girls now are nearly all adorned with collars, cuffs and flounces of rose point valenciennes or other types of lace.

TAFFETA LINING FOR DRAPERIES

Taffeta makes an exceptionally good lining for draperies because of its lustre and durability. The taffeta lining can be extended over the edge of the curtain and folded back and caught. This will make an attractive border on the draperies.

LAUNDRY HINTS

When ironing lace a soft flannel cloth should be laid over it, and a linen cloth between that and the iron.

Chamois leather gloves should be washed in lukewarm suds and rinsed in slightly soapy water or they will dry stiff and hard.

Should the ironing board warp prove annoying, put the coverings on the other side. In a short time the board will straighten out and remain straight.

If one cup of vinegar is put with the water in which colored fabric clothes are washed it will prevent the color from running. Iron while still damp, and they will look splendid new.

TO FRESHEN VELVET

A splendid way to freshen velvet is to meet a failure very low and turn it upside down. Lay over it a wet cloth, and tighten this by drawing its ends under the iron. Hold the wrong side of the velvet taut against this, and draw the velvet back and forth slowly across the covered iron. The steam and heat will remove creases, obliterate pin holes, remove dust, and restore the color amazingly.

CLEANER EGGS

Always wipe off eggs with a dampened cloth when you get them from the farmer and put them away. There is nothing so ugly as a bowl of soiled eggs in an otherwise clean refrigerator.

WHEN THE PEN RUNS DRY

If your fountain pen runs dry and you have no ink on hand, half fill the pen with water. There are usually enough dried ink crystals in the barrel to make a writing fluid sufficient for your purpose.

TO CLEANSE PORCELAINS

It is simple to remove the dingy rim that mars the exquisite daintiness of gleaming white porcelain, if one but use the right cleansing materials.

In some cases dirty porcelain means carelessness in rinsing the tub after using, but in other cases, especially where hard water is used, it is almost impossible to prevent the accumulation of a deposit on the smooth surface.

A quick daily cleansing with a good soap and water, aided by a few drops of kerosene, will be found effective in such cases. Put a few drops of kerosene on a wet cloth, rub it with the soap and go over the solid surface with the cloth. The dirt and grease will disappear immediately without any hard scrubbing. Rinse thoroughly with clear water and dry with a clean cloth.

RETURN THE JARS

We are so often sent good things to eat in jars, dishes or glasses, which we entirely forget after the good things are eaten and in consequence, they are never returned. It is a good idea to write the senders' name on a slip of paper and tuck inside the container. Then it will stand a chance of being returned—and soon.

From Small Beginnings

Samuel Gompers, the Shoe-Factory Boy, the Great Labor Leader

A London cigarmaker put his 10 year-old son at work in a shoe factory, so that the boy might help in the support of the family and at the same time learn a trade. After a short time the boy, boy-like, turned his interest to his father's work and learned the gentle art of rolling tobacco leaves into fragrant cigars for those who could afford them. It was no joking work for the lad, for the hours were all the hours that he could crowd into the day, almost twice the time now recognized as suitable for labor. Still he stuck to it, and what is more wonderful still, he found time and strength to go to evening school and learn something besides the use of his hands.

For 25 years Samuel Gompers worked with tobacco, and for 26 years and all the time up to the present, he has continued to study. He held the commanding position he did because he educated both his hands and brain.

At the age of 13 Samuel Gompers came to New York City, where there were better opportunities. Here he continued the cigar-making trade and the hours of patient reading for the sake of self-education. His natural force, strength and wisdom made themselves felt in the meetings of the labor union to which he belonged, and he won the admiration of all his fellow workmen. It was only natural that they should make him their delegate to what is now the American Federation of Labor.

In the larger organization he displayed even more force than in the smaller, and quickly became a commanding figure and finally president. His work was to cause one to see, not alone how to vote on the most prominent labor leaders in the world, in addition to public speaking, and to innumerable conferences with men of power, he wrote many articles, and acted as editor of a labor paper. Short and powerful, vigorous, fearless, the cigarmaker's boy made himself into a great champion of the rights and privileges of labor. He was a rare combination of muscular skill and mental power.

CHILD TRAINING

TALES OUT OF SCHOOL

Nellie Hinds Hammer

My little son, who is in his third year at school usually begins an account of the day's happenings as soon as he bursts open the door on his return. I have encouraged him in this as I like to have him confide in me and hope to retain his confidense as the years pass. I am never too busy or too tired to be interested, and by questioning, I can usually bring out both sides of a story if it relates to an incident in which he himself is involved. So far, I have reason to believe that he has always given me an accurate account of events even if he himself is somewhat discredited by the recital. If he has been in the wrong I do not scold or punish but say to him, "Do you think you were in the right about that?" or "Couldn't you have avoided the trouble?"

During his first year at school, he came running in one afternoon with the eager exclamation, "Say, Mom, I got even with James today for some of the tricks he's played on me!"

Questioned, he explained, "Well, he said he'd give me a piece of candy for a piece of my cake, and I didn't say anything but just took the candy when he held it out to me, and then I laughed and told him my cake was all gone."

"But, Little Son," I said, "that wasn't fair play, was it?"

He protested that James had treated him in the same way a number of times, but I finally persuaded him that he must play fair regardless of the behavior of others, and I put an extra piece of cake in his lunch box the next day to be given to James.

A great many of the things he tells me do not concern him directly but they give me an insight into the character of his little playmates so that I can more easily help him choose his friends wisely. He is, in his childish way, learning to distinguish between characteristics that matter and those that do not. He was very much disturbed recently because he found that a little girl whom he admired very much was cheating in school. I myself had already discovered that the child was sly and inclined to be dishonest in little things but allowed him to make the discovery for himself.

I do not believe that the habit of confiding in Mother is conducive to tattling or talebearing. My son knows that I do not discuss with others the things that he tells me, and I frequently say to him, "Now we'll say nothing about this to any one, as you might be mistaken," or, "Perhaps John will tell his mother all about it, and she will tell him that he was in the wrong." I certainly do not want him to be a talebearer, but how proud I shall be if in the years to come I can always come to me, unhesitatingly, to discuss with me the problems of his daily life.

Stories That Recall Others

Couldn't Find It

Claire and his papa had just finished freezing the ice cream for Claire's fifth birthday party.

"Well, Claire, we better carry it up the basement steps for mother," said father. "Let me help," was the enthusiastic request.

"No, daddy will carry it, and you can bring up the rear."

Father was soon washing for dinner when a frantic call came from the basement. "Daddy, where is that rear, I can't find it."

She Believed Everything

Mrs. A. had a flat tire and was surveying the situation when two boys came along and offered to help her. One of the boys soon after seized her purse from the front seat and the two then ran down the street. She gave chase and seized one of the boys. She said she was going to call the police and they are said to have replied that it would be all right if she did. They promised to wait right there on the curb while she went to a phone. She sped away to get police assistance and as she did the boys sped away to the tall timber. Mrs. A. insists that she is now much less gullible than she was.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

General the Earl of Craven, whose retirement from the British army is announced in a despatch from London, is a famous soldier of the World war who for the past four years has been chief of the imperial staff. He was born in 1865 and in early manhood entered upon a military career. From 1891 to 1892 he was aide-de-camp to Lord Stanley of Preston when the latter was Governor-General of Canada. He fought with distinction in the South African war and later saw service in India and other parts of the empire. During the greater part of the World war he commanded the British 14th Army Corps. In the closing stages of the great conflict he was in charge of the operations of the 16th Italian division on the Piave front, his command including Italian troops. After the war he served as one of the British war office representatives at the Washington conference. In 1923 the Earl married Lady Jean Mulholland, personal friend of Princess Mary and one of her ladies in waiting.

Cats of St. Ives

The old nursery rhyme about the cats of St. Ives is based on a solid foundation for St. Ives, England, is the cat kingdom, as is evident to any visitor. Cats are encouraged to the limit. By an old resident it is thus explained:

"This is a very old town—500 years some of the houses, leastways their cellars and parts of the foundations are. Now we keep our fishing gear in the cellars and there is a terrible lot of rats and mice about in an old place like this. Well, the rats, and the mice, too, would eat the nets; they'd eat us out of house and home if it were not for the cats.

"A characteristic of the cats of St. Ives is that they do a little fishing for themselves. These sleek, well-fed and exceptionally friendly animals delight in a romp over the sand and in dodging the waves. Afterwards they will watch for hours by some shallow pool for some unsuspecting fish or small crab which ventures from its retreat from a bunch of seaweed or a rock."

POLICEMAN WAS WAITING FOR MAN AT BOAT

NEW LONDON, Feb. 28.—Ephraim Budnick, formerly of Norwich, now engaged in the automobile service business at 311 East 96th street, Brooklyn, N. Y., was taken into custody Saturday night by Patrolman Augustus Ray on a warrant charging Budnick with violation of the automobile law, in operating his machine in a reckless manner. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning, having furnished a surety on his bond for his appearance at that time.

Budnick, who formerly conducted a public service business in Norwich, was in the act of driving to New London last August 9th and had as a passenger Rachael Chosen, Norwich. When on Williams street, near Mohegan avenue, Budnick's car came to grief and it is the claim of the Chosen woman that the accident was the result of Budnick's reckless driving. Following the accident, and which resulted in the Chosen woman being injured, Budnick went to Brooklyn where he and his brother started in the garage business.

Mrs. Chosen endeavored to locate Budnick, but without success. Saturday Budnick went to the residence of his mother in Norwich to pay a brief visit. While he was there Mrs. Chosen became aware that Budnick was in Norwich and that he was intending to board the New London line steamer Chester W. Chapin for New York Saturday night. Mrs. Chosen came to New London and placed her charge with Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky, who issued a warrant for Budnick's arrest. The warrant was given to Patrolman Ray and that officer went to the New London line pier where he waited until Budnick arrived to take passage on the steamer. He then placed the accused under arrest.

In accordance with a nation-wide movement in the interests of Eagledom and old age pension, the organization department of the order is sending speakers to every aerie in the country, hoping that in the near future every state in the Union will have an old age pension law upon its statute books.

YOUTH FOUND HELPLESS WITH GASH IN HEAD

A 19 year old Norwich boy was found laid out on a sidewalk at Taftville early Sunday evening dead drunk and with a bad cut on his forehead. Constable Disco was notified that the youth was down and out and he took charge of him and brought him to police headquarters. Dr. Clarence G. Thompson was called by Sergt. Matthew Delaney to attend the injured youth, sewing up the gash in his head.

The youth's name was found in one of his pockets and his father, notified of the boy's condition, took him home. The youth was booked on a charge of intoxication. No one seems to know how he came to receive the cut on his forehead. It is thought that when the liquor he had been drinking caused him to collapse in the street he struck his head on some sharp object in falling.

SUGGESTS BRIDGE ACROSS RIVER AT MONTVILLE AS IMPROVEMENT

Norwich council, No. 309 United Commercial Travelers of America, through their executive committee, are earnestly interested in the development of eastern Connecticut and have arranged a joint meeting of the common councils of Norwich and New London as an initial movement to sound out the views of these two bodies.

The Eastern Connecticut U. C. T. Monthly, published by Norwich council, in its March number presents the following in the editorial section of their magazine: Something specific in the way of united effort to push eastern Connecticut to the front is outlined. Members of Norwich council and all civic association executives will be mailed a copy of the March number of the monthly, also members of the common councils of Norwich and New London. The Monthly with reference to eastern Connecticut says:

Norwich council long since adopted the following slogan: Eastern Connecticut Community Development.

With the above slogan as our fixed and guiding star, the United Commercial Travelers, Norwich Council, No. 309, have placed their hands to the plow, and eyes to the front, are steadily forging onward, in tackling civic problems of real worth-while moment, to this whole section of eastern Connecticut.

Instead of pitting eastern Connecticut communities in a mad struggle for supremacy, against each other, it has ever been our contention that there should be a greater amalgamation of eastern Connecticut's civic forces, into one great cohesive unit for the upbuilding of this grandest section of our splendid commonwealth.

Geographically, eastern Connecticut has an area of 30 by 60 miles (1800 square miles), a little garden spot in comparison with some of the developments, of a civic nature, that are being undertaken and successfully carried forward, by sections of other states, through the agencies of all organizations, stimulated by pride in seeing their state and community take its place in the front rank of other states and communities when placed in comparison.

California, Florida, or even Missouri, have got to show us that they have a monopoly of people, citizens possessed with a greater civic spirit, for crested with a greater sense of loyalty to their section of these United States, than have the business men, commercial men, manufacturers, bankers and other interests, who are getting their livelihood in New London and Windham counties.

While we may be called visionary, it is through the aid of citizens with vision, that communities are developed—that real progress is made. Vision, faith, action, are the three great lights that illumine the pathway of community development in every instance where such development has taken place.

The United Commercial Travelers are a self sustained organization, and because of the scope of work engaged in, we believe are peculiarly fitted to aid in the development of civic progress in this and all other communities.

It is another of our beliefs that no one organization should have patent rights in a matter of such far reaching importance as community development. We have, and do still contend, that there cannot be too many organizations, in any community, engaged in advancing the civic interests of said community.

It is human nature for men to work for those things that are of interest to them: "many men of many kinds and many cats of many kinds" is just as applicable in civic affairs as anywhere else. "As out of the mouths of babes cometh wisdom," so, out of all interests in a community, all organizations, there may come a thought that will prove just the thing, at the right time, to set the wheels of community development in action.

Highway program: It is safe to say that within the next two years, the federal highway, running north from New London across New London and Windham counties, will come into its own, as far as the building of a modern, concrete highway can bring it about.

With the completion of this wonderful piece of highway engineering, the Mohegan Trail will become more prominent and correspondingly a greater asset in helping to feature eastern Connecticut as one of the best industrial, commercial and scenic sections of our commonwealth.

One of the outstanding features of eastern Connecticut lies in the fact that here there is absolutely no level country.

Starting from Long Island sound, the old Indian trail of the Mohegans follows over hill-top after hill-top, with valleys between them. For fifteen miles, the valley of the Thames, in all its placid, picturesque beauty, opens, not awe inspiring, but beautiful. There is no prettier, no finer hill-and-valley scenic gems to be found. Following the Quinebaug river, from Norwich north to Plainfield, carries the tourist or commercial traveler across New London county, 30 miles from the sound.

From the moment you enter Windham county, that section of state made famous by General Putnam, the hills begin to take on greater significance. "The Hills of Windham." How often do we hear that oft repeated sentence? The hills of Windham are rounded and covered with verdure, and the valleys and towns, villages, farms, streams and lakes, make a lasting and pleasing impression on the visitor to whom it unfolds. So, with the entire length of the trail, eastern Connecticut must be seen, studied, lived with, loved.

One of the efforts of Norwich council is to see that the Mohegan trail is modernized, is embellished along its [illegible] in keeping with the future public happiness of all who travel over this old historic pathway of the red man. Embellishments that [illegible] with the huge outlay of money by the state, in order that commercialism, added pleasure and safety may be coordinated.

Highway don't to have landscape artists There are many ways that lend themselves to the embellishment of highways, but the planting of shade trees, perhaps, is first on the list. Connecticut has a law that gives to the highway commissioner the power to plant trees along the road side, when in his judgment, such a procedure is warranted. It is not expected that trees will be planted or that any form of embellishment will be found practical or necessary for miles along much of the way. We cannot see how the highway between the tunnel, at Taftville, and Jewett City, could be improved by the addition of more shade trees. Yet, from Jewett City north to Bishop's crossing or Plainfield, there is a wonderful opportunity to improve conditions as they exist today. What greater embellishment could possibly be needed than rows of nice trees on either side of this stretch of roadway, say, 30 years after they were set out.

We rejoice and commend the action of the state highway commissioner in recommending to the board of control, and the board appointing for the department a landscape artist, who is a practical state forester. We trust his hands will not be tied, and that the next session of the legislature will appropriate a sufficient sum of money to carry out the work in a manner in keeping with the recent expenditures on the highways themselves.

Our reason for suggesting that a double row of pine trees be planted along the highway between Jewett City and Plainfield, was First: Because the pine is indigenous to eastern Connecticut.

Second: The pine will flourish in the sandy soil along this section of the Mohegan Trail.

Third: The pine is an evergreen tree and will guard and perpetuate the memory of the Mohegan tribe of Indians, whose foot-steps blazed the way for the trail, into a model highway for vehicular travel. Ever keeping green the memory of their fearless leader and Sachem, "Uncas," the friend and defender of the homes of the early founders of eastern Connecticut.

Your committee has already taken the matter up with the state highway department and will follow up the urge for tree planting at other open spaces, the entire length of the trail.

Mohegan Trail illuminated—Now that there is a continuous system of street lighting from New London to Tatville, 17 miles north on the Mohegan Trail, Norwich council will work for a continuation of a street lighting system its entire length.

With the cities of Putnam, Danielson, and the borough of Jewett City already cared for, it remains for the towns of Killingly, Plainfield and Lisbon to fill in the uncompleted link.

What a splendid piece of publicity for the trail and for eastern Connecticut. With the completion of the plans for improving this great thoroughfare already in the works, and the landscaping by the expert foresters, the sixty miles, together with a continuous white way—across the state—will prove, once again, that "Dreams do come true."

Eastern Connecticut and the Mohegan Trail will soon become synonymous terms. Eastern Connecticut, with its cities and villages, will be united in a strong bond of friendly helpfulness—one towards the other—an intercommunication, only made possible through a community of interests.

The Thames river valley—Some of the wonderful industrial opportunities awaiting development on either shore of the Thames river.

Miles of factory sites, with unsurpassed railroad and deep water transportation facilities on either shore.

Low tax rates in these towns bordering the Thames river: Montville, Preston, Ledyard, Groton, Waterford.

New London has one of the best harbors in the world and the Thames valley is merely an extension of said harbor.

Norwich and New London are at either end of the Thames valley, fourteen miles apart, connected by a well lighted boulevard, thirty miles in circumference. Served by trolley and bus lines over the Mohegan Trail and ultimately highway.

A million dollar state pier at New London, where vessels of the deepest draught can be accommodated and cargoes discharged. No other like it in the state.

Because of the above facilities the following industries and institutions have located on the Thames river:

Every industrial plant can have its own dockage accommodations and railroad spur track.

The Eastern Connecticut Power Co., has its Central Distributing plant on the Thames river, at Montville, and is doing business in 32 towns in eastern Connecticut. This is one of the biggest factors causing industries to consider favorably the Thames river valley, when seeking plant locations. Cheap electrical energy is at the service of all. The engineers of the power company will gladly give their time to your problem.

Overlooking the beautiful Thames river are the numerous buildings of the Connecticut College for Women, the Odd Fellows' Home, Uncas-on-Thames (tuberculosis sanatorium), Norwich state hospital, etc., and there are many more healthful and sightly available sites for institutions of every sort.

Twin Cities—The twin cities of New London and Norwich, because of their equality in size, approximately 30,000 population each, their splendid schools, miles of unsurpassed seaside and hillside recreation grounds, civic organizations, religious organizations, and both blessed with progressive mayors and common councils, composed of forward looking members. What would happen if both these cities united in one common purpose, viz: to promote the development of the Thames valley? Backed by the powerful civic organizations of these two cities, as well as the industrial and commercial interests. Well! The United Commercial Travelers are going to make a break towards that end, let the results be what they may. It's time for action.

Intensive publicity needed—Proper publicity, we believe, is the answer to the development of this superior section of New England. Publicity backed by keen visioned, forward looking men. Publicity such as eastern Connecticut has never seen. Publicity modernized to meet present day conditions. Not the kind our Puritan ancestors employed, but the kind backed by good, round dollars, that will roll all over the United States and direct the attention of hundreds of industries to the outstanding fact that eastern Connecticut and the Thames river valley has something to sell. The kind of publicity that you climb a tree, and holler. $25,000 expended in exploiting our many excellent reasons why the Thames river valley predominates all other sections, when placed in comparison. First: Map of the Thames valley, with industrial sites located and all information concerning same. Second: Signs placed on each side of said industrial sight, large enough to be seen and read with information bearing on each site. Third: Page advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post, with its two million and a half circulation, telling the story in terse, convincing language, neatly gotten up brochure, depicting the beauties of nature in eastern Connecticut, the hills and valleys, the highways and by-ways, the fields and streams, the Mohegan Trail, etc. Thousands of these worth while booklets would be eagerly snapped up and preserved by automobilists. The A. L. A., and the N. M. A., service stations will gladly see that they are dispensed in any section of the United States desired. They are eager for just such publicity. Page ads in the leading papers of Chicago, Seattle, San Francisco, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New York would help some. Fourth: A joint committee composed of every civic, commercial, banking, industrial, town, municipality, school and church interests. Fifth: Everybody back up the committee 100 per cent., and another every available prospect with every attention and courtesy. We'll get 'em and get 'em good and plenty. And, after all, what is $25,000 or $50,000 for all these interests to pledge, when you consider the wealth and importance of the Thames valley; when you think of a population in the Thames valley of one hundred and fifty thousand compared with seventy thousand, as now is?

The members of Norwich council have faith that this can be done. Are there any other organizations that are willing to pitch in and help? If so, start talking it up in your weekly or monthly meetings and after the roll is called, we'll hold another joint meeting, of all, each and everybody, and boost. We'll put it over. Let's have less talk and more action.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Holy Name society of St. Patrick's church held at 6 o'clock Sunday evening, the president, Michael J. Murphy presided. There was a large attendance. Mr. Murphy has made an able head for the organization for the past four years and he inspired his hearers, as he set before them the aims and obligations of a member of this society. He stated that the local branch has a membership of 549 and he urged all to be faithful in going to holy communion monthly or at least quarterly and in a body. Mr. Murphy stated that the organization has over 4,000 branches in America, out of the 10,000 parishes, therefore the Holy Name society flourishes in nearly one-half of the countries parishes. He expressed pleasure at the hearty cooperation existing between the priests of St. Patricks and the society, touched upon the matter of attending when visits are made to the homes of deceased members, and made many other valuable suggestions. He read the necrology list for 1925, as follows:

Dennis J. Twomey, died Jan. 20; Dr. Thomas A. Crowley, Jan. 21; Cornelius Driscoll, April 11; Michael J. Berberick, Aug. 20; Manuel Damas, Oct. 15.

After appreciation had been expressed for Mr. Murphy's excellent work as president and for his practical address, officers were elected as follows: President, Patrick M. Coleman; vice president, Alexander H. Disco; financial secretary, John P. Corcoran; recording secretary, William J. McKnight; treasurer, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May. The chaplain is Rev. Myles P. Galvin, who opened the meeting with prayer. The report of the year was read by the treasurer, Monsignor May.

GAVE DRAMATIC READING OF POLLOCK'S PLAY

OBITUARY

Henry Russell Woodward

Following an illness of five weeks, Henry Russell Woodward, well known Norwich jeweler, died Sunday night about 8 o'clock at his home, No. 58 Spalding street. He had been in poor health for some months and had been confined to his room for five weeks. Henry Russell Woodward was born in Elwood, Kansas, Feb. 21, 1853, the son of Russell Gardner Woodward and Cordelia C. Burgess Woodward. He came to this city with his parents when a child. He attended the local grammar schools and the Norwich Free Academy and in 1876 graduated from the East Greenwich (R. I.) academy. In 1877 he started his career in the jewelry business as a traveling salesman. He had been working in the old Allen Pistol shop and had saved up $100 with which he bought his first stock. He had a route from Norwich to Grosvenordale for ten years. In April, 1888, the year of the big blizzard, Mr. Woodward opened a jewelry store at No. 163 Main street where he conducted a successful business for 12 years. Then he moved his store to No. 134 Main street where he continued in business until 1923. He also owned stores in Gardiner, Maine, and one in Stonington, this state. While conducting his store on Main street he also had a jewelry route in Taftville, Baltic and Voluntown. In partnership with Hiram B. Beckwith under the firm name of Woodward & Beckwith, he had been conducting a jewelry store at No. 324 Main street for about a year.

Politically Mr. Woodward was a republican and fraternally a member of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Woodward married April 28, 1880, Louise F. Wilbur, a native of Providence. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. C. D. Hewitt of Hamden, this state, and Mrs. Milton Macdonald of this city and one sister, Alice H. Woodward of Long Beach, Cal. He also leaves a stepmother, Mrs. Russell G. Woodward of this city. He was a member of the City Bible class for men of the Central Baptist church.

Mr. Woodward was widely known throughout eastern Connecticut, having made many friends while engaged in selling jewelry on his routes. He was recognized as a good business man, and was a loving and considerate husband and father. The news of his death will be learned with regret by his many warm friends and acquaintances.

Isaac Gallup Geer

The Bulletin's Ledyard correspondent writes:

Deacon Isaac Gallup Geer, 78, a lifelong resident and prominent citizen of Ledyard, passed peacefully away at his home Sunday morning at 3 o'clock three o'clock. He had been ill only about two weeks.

Deacon Geer was the son of Jacob Allyn Geer and Julia Gallup Geer. He was born July 24, 1846, in the house in which he died and was of the fourth generation of the Geer family living in this house. His father died when he was nine years old and at 16 the son took charge of the farm. He was very successful and the two farms which he owned at his death are in a high state of cultivation. He had held many important offices of trust in the town, had been a member of the school board, selectman, assessor for many years, represented the town in the legislature in 1913, took the census for the whole town in 1890 and 1900. At the time of his death he was a member of the Ledyard Ecclesiastical society, trustee of the Bill Library association; senior deacon of the Ledyard Congregational church, also clerk and treasurer of the church.

He was an honest, upright God-fearing man, loved and respected by all who knew him. His passing away is a great loss to the church which he loved so well and to the town where he was valued as an honest and upright citizen. A kind word and a helping hand were everyday traits of his life and the community grieves at the loss of such a friend. He was represented by old and young and his life was such that all could take an inspiration from it for honest, upright living.

He was united in marriage with Miss Amanda Ursula Belden of Gales Ferry, Jan. 4, 1868, the ceremony being performed by Rev. William Taylor assisted by Rev. John Avery. Deacon Geer is survived by his wife, a son, Earl Belden Geer, a daughter, Mrs. Florence Allyn Sadler, wife of Ernest Smith of Franklin, three grandchildren, Elizabeth Chase Smith, Isabel Gallup Smith and Isaac Gallup Geer 3rd. He leaves his sister, Miss Nellie W. Geer who resides at the Geer homestead.

J. T. BLOSSOM TO RESIGN HIS POSITION AS GRADUATE DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 28—(AP)—John T. Blossom, graduate director of athletics at Yale university, will retire from his position at the close of the present college year to re-engage in business in Cleveland, Ohio, Professor George H. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the Yale Athletic association, announced tonight.

Mr. Blossom, completing his fourth year at head of Yale athletics, is largely credited for the athletic successes that the institution has had during his control. In that time, Yale has won or tied for the eastern football championship twice, developed a crew that won the Olympic championships and been represented by a track team that captured the national intercollegiates.

During his junior and senior years at Yale, Mr. Blossom, who was graduated in 1914, was captain of the university baseball teams. He prepared at Taft school. With the completion of his fourth year as graduate director, he will return to Cleveland where he has become a member of the firm of Morley, Blossom, Morse and company, doing a general investment business.

In announcing the coming retirement of Mr. Blossom, Professor Nettleton said:

"The Yale University Athletic association announces with deep regret the retirement of John T. Blossom, at the close of the present academic year, from his position as graduate director of athletics.

"Mr. Blossom's original appointment was for a term of three years, ending in June, 1925. It was understood that he might then or subsequently definitely plans to do. His consent to remain at Yale throughout the present college year has helped largely to assure continuity of direction of general athletic interests and effective solution of various special problems of unusual difficulty.

"To his loyalty, energy and intelligent judgment, the board of control was long been indebted. His continuance in office until the close of the college year postpones full recognition of his exceptional services to Yale. But the board claims the present privilege of voicing for itself and for those whom it represent the general regret that will inevitably follow the news of Mr. Blossom's coming retirement from Yale and the equally widespread respect and regard for his significant service as the first graduate director of athletics appointed at Yale under the present system."

FIRE IN KANE BUILDING CAUSES LOSS OF $35,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 23—Another ...destructive early morning ... wooden structure ... Bank street, owned ... estate, was discovered ... ... contents. How the ... started is not known, but ... that it started in a bas... in the center of the build... It is estimated will be ... During the combatting ... flames three firemen, Edward Connors, driver of the Allen Hook and Ladder company; George Gilbert, driver of Niagara Engine company and Clifford Smith, a member of that company sustained burns, Connors getting the most serious of the burns, which were on his face and head.

The fire was discovered about 2.30 o'clock when Henry Ong, proprietor of a Chinese laundry and one of the occupants of the store, detected the odor of smoke. He investigated and found a lively blaze in progress in the baker shop of Sam Miller at 193. Ong rushed to the corner of Bank and Truman street and had an alarm sent in from Box 45. When the department arrived the entire building was ablaze and because of a high wind that prevailed Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman caused a general alarm to be sent in. On the arrival of all of the city's fire companies, two hook and ladder apparatus, seven pumpers and hose companies, the building was a mass of flames and the structure appeared doomed. Twelve lines of hose were stretched to the building and the laundry and bakery, as well as the restaurant conducted by Treat and Farrell were deluged with water as were the living apartments above the stores, occupied by Sebastian Lagrua and Vincenzo Mariano, the families of whom had been compelled to leave the premises scantily clad, when the flames broke through the floor. The firemen worked hard in their efforts to subdue the flames, but it was not until three hours after the blaze was discovered that the fire was under control.

An investigation was made by Deputy Chief Shipman, who stated that he was not in the slightest doubt but that the blaze started in the baker shop and further stated that the flames were most fierce in the extreme rear of the bakery when the first of the fire companies arrived at the burning building.

Byron Ames of Salem; Axel Carlson of Waterford; Donald Joseph, 613 Main street; Clarence Barber, United States Coast Guard destroyer Mojave, state pier; Mrs. Carl Bahm and infant daughter, 15 Garfield avenue and Allen McIsaac United States revenue cutter Bear, state pier, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated Hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Simon Hess of Hotel Mohican, is a patient at Home Memorial hospital and in a critical condition as a result of an operation undergone recently. Mr. Hess' condition, however, was reported today as being very slightly improved.

The funeral of Louis Flesher, formerly stationed at the United States coast guard academy was held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at 8 Ocean avenue, the services being conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of the United States Coast Guard academy acted as bearers and cadets furnished an escort to the union station. The body was forwarded to Mr. Flesher's former home in Birmingham, Wash.

Walter J. Corkey, 24, son of Mrs. Julia and the late Joseph Corkey, died Friday night at the residence of his mother, 77 Lincoln avenue. Mr. Corkey had been ill many months. He was employed by the New London Ship and Engine company as machinist and is survived, besides his mother, by three sisters, Misses Gertrude, Mabel and Hazel Corkey and by a brother, Samuel Corkey, all of this city.

David W. Ferrier, 55, died Saturday morning at his home, 1 Starr St., Mr. Ferrier had been ill but about a week with grip, but had also been a sufferer with asthma. Mr. Ferrier was employed as an instructor at the New London Business college and had been a resident of New London about 10 years, moving to this city from Westerly, where he was employed as a business college instructor for a number of years. Mr. Ferrier is survived by his wife and one son.

An officer stationed with the United States Coast Guard reported to the police at 1.20 this morning that he had observed the entrance to the Howard Street Coal company open a few minutes before. Lieut. James C. Sullivan, and Sergeant Patrick Murphy went to the coal office and found the place open. A search of the place was made, but no one was found there. One of the proprietors of the coal company was communicated with and informed of the condition of the coal office, and to the surprise of the officers the owner declared that the office was frequently left unlocked, as there was nothing of value in the place. Naturally the officers allowed the place to remain in its open condition when the owner did not interest himself to the extent of causing it to be made secure.

The New Haven police today requested the New London authorities to be on the lookout for two automobiles stolen from the streets of New Haven Saturday night. Both cars are Fords and of the 1925 coupe model. One car bore registration A-6260 and the other carried registration A-9783.

James Mack was presented in the police court Saturday morning charged with intoxication. He escaped penalization, for Judge S. Victor Prince suspended judgment in the case. Mack will not fare so well probably Monday morning when he will be in court again on a charge of breach. Reason for he was found drunk in the vicinity of North Bank street late Saturday afternoon by Patrolman Augustus Ray and was locked up. He, however, obtained a surety on his bond of $25 for his court appearance tomorrow morning. Three other intoxicated men were also arrested Saturday night and today, Henry Healy, John Hanaway and John Yusmond.

J. T. Erickson, 54 Barber street, Fair Haven, has communicated with the New London police requesting information as to the present whereabouts of Erickson's brother, Alfred Erickson, who formerly resided in New London. The man being sought left New London some time ago.

Complaint has been made by an employe of an out of town baking establishment that supplies of bread and cake left at the entrances of stores on Montauk and Ocean avenues early, prior to the places being opened for business, are being stolen. It is a practice of delivery clerks to deposit food-stuffs in the store entrances of many places of business throughout the city while the employes of the stores are out and because of the practice the bakery has received many complaints because of the theft of the goods.

Mrs. Elias Wentworth has returned to her home, 202 Vauxhall street, having spent several days with her daughter, Mrs. S. J. Wood in Middletown.

Herbert Swanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Swanson, 55 Raymond street, spent Saturday and today as the guest of Chandler Holt, son of City Manager and Mrs. William A. Holt, who is a student at Dean academy, Franklin, Mass.

Patrolman Frank Philopena is temporarily off duty having been stricken by illness, not of a serious nature, today.

An automobile owned and operated by Joseph Farolosi, 44 Pratt street, in rounding the corner of Reed and Bliss-man streets into this afternoon collided with a traffic sign and damaged it. Farolosi had the sign taken to a mechanic where it will be repaired and then placed back in its position.

Two burglaries were committed Friday night and from the nature of the breaks it is apparent that both were perpetrated by the same party.

One of the breaks occurred at the residence of William J. Murphy, 25 Blackhall street during the absence of members of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy absented themselves from the house from 8 until 10 o'clock. While they were away from their home the thief gained admission to the place. The crook went to two or three windows in an attempt to force one of them, but he was unsuccessful until he tried the window of the bathroom. This window he jimmied and then entered the house and made his search for plunder, which was money or jewelry. He found a baby's bank, which contained less than 50 cents, which he stole, together with a lady's opal ring, Tiffany setting. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy returned home about 10 o'clock and upon discovering the burglary reported it to the police. Mrs. James Spellman, who resides in the same house as Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left her home about 8:30 o'clock and as she entered the yard she saw a negro running through the yard and it is believed that he was the crook.

Later in the evening, the Misses O'Connor, residing at 28 Mountain avenue, informed the police that their home had been entered and that the only plunder the crook obtained was an old fashioned gold watch. Entrance to the place was gained in exactly the same method as that at the Murphy residence. The third used a jimmy, or similar instrument and pried open one of the living room windows. He made a search of the house, but did not find any plunder of value other than the watch.

The Salvation Army lodging house, corner of State and North Bank streets, which is frequented almost entirely by soldiers and sailors, was the scene this evening of a fistic battle and one that attracted the attention of several hundred pedestrians, for the encounter occurred just as throngs of men and women were leaving the Crown and Capitol theaters. The fight was between a United States coast guard sailor and a sailor attached to the submarine base. The two bluejackets were among several sailors that congregated in front of the lodging house and they soon became involved in an argument. The two sailors started battling and went into the street where they were swinging their fists with rapidity, but not doing much damage, when patrolmen appeared upon the scene. With the arrival of the officers the battle ended for the two sailors were separated and were chased inside the lodging house.

Miss Wilder, 468 Bank street; Mrs. Thomas Manice and infant son, 36 Center street, and Mrs. Benjamin Nelson and infant son, 475 Broad street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Moosup Well Child Conference

The Well Child conferences which have now been carried on throughout Connecticut for three years have proved to be a great power for good. In the large cities, such conferences form a daily part of the health centers which have been established by various organizations. In the smaller towns, however, they have become the monthly event for thousands of mothers.

At the Breed

If one were to tell in detail the plot of Zander the Great, which opened yesterday at the Breed theater half the enjoyment of future audiences would be spoiled, for the situations, incidents and climaxes, as well as the comedy and drama packed into this human interest screen offering, have the flavor and surprise qualities of an O. Henry story.

"Zander the Great, starring Marion Davies, a Cosmopolitan production released by Metro-Goldwyn, proved a complete surprise to those who have grown accustomed to viewing Miss Davies in the elaborate period costumes of Little Old New York, Yolanda and Janice Meredith.

In this picture, Miss Davies envolves from a little orphan girl in an asylum to a young woman of strong character, great beauty and charm of manner, but it is not on this slender thread that the picture is based. Rather it is upon the exciting incidents and unusual situations that rise from the fact that as Mamie, the lovable, whimsical heroine, Miss Davies finds herself the center of a hotbed of plot, counter-plot, adventure and romance generally.

The drama whirls and vibrates around Mamie's adopted child. The comedy touches are supplied by such noted artists as Holbrook Blinn, Harry Myers Richard Cole and Harry Watson Jr., while the many serious and dramatic incidents are enacted by Harrison Ford and Hobart Bosworth.

Connecticut College Concert

For the second time, the king of Italy has paid signal honors to Giovanni Martinelli, the celebrated tenor who will appear at the state armory Friday night under the auspices of Connecticut college. Eight years ago, before Martinelli had won his enviable reputation abroad, he was already recognized as a "great voice" in Italy and at the conclusion of the Verdi centenary held at Parma in 1913 King Victor Emanuel made him a chevalier of the order of the Crown of Italy. This order, which corresponds to the Legion d'Honneur in France, is the highest obtainable by men in civil life.

Last year, by way of recognizing the position Martinelli had taken in the world and rewarding him for continuing the high traditions of Italian song, the king raised him to the second highest rank in this order and Martinelli may, if he wishes, sign his checks "Cavaliere officiale della Corona d'Italia." The special occasion chosen for the bestowal of this honor was the fourth time in four years when Martinelli gave his services in aid of a hospital fund for the Italian poor in and about Jersey City. The Italian people in Italy feel that their great singers abroad are their best ambassadors for friendship with the United States and a success like Martinelli's duplicated by him in South America as well, is almost of political importance to the government.

Baby Fretful?

Avoid Constipation

Remember your baby is helpless, unable to point out that constipation is making its life miserable. You must be able to recognize the symptoms.

Convulsions, night terrors, grinding the teeth in sleep, feverishness, fretfulness—all indicate that poisons from baby's stagnant intestine are flooding the little body.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Lyceum Theatre

"90 Horse-Power" a high pressure, eight cylinder comedy, by Francis De Witt, and produced by the Marwaldean Productions of New York City, will bring the original Broadway cast intact to the Lyceum theatre, New London, for two nights only, March 2nd and 3rd.

It is some years since we have had a real "honest to goodness" automobile play, and, from reports received from the Windsor theatre, New York City, where the play was tried out, it is the genuine article. The cast includes a number of popular favorites including Ramsay Wallace, Miss Allyn King, Miss Alice Fischer, Violet Dean, Wallis Roberts, Gerard Willshire, Guy Hitner and Guy Milham.

There are three rather elaborate scenes, and two high powered automobiles are used almost continuously on the stage. The play was produced by Walter Wilson and is scheduled to open a Broadway run on the Monday following its appearance here. As is usual at The Lyceum, a $2.30 price will prevail for the best seats.

Broadway's Two Features

The Broadway theater is now presenting one of the truly worthwhile comedy-dramas of the season in "Peacock Feathers," a Universal-Jewel in which Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis have the stellar roles.

The story is from the novel by Temple Bailey, being adapted by James O Spearing, former dramatic editor of the New York Times. All of these facts were blended by Carl Laemmle to give one of the finest achievements of the current season.

There is not a dull moment in the picture. When the plot hesitates in its ceaseless trend, a bit of comedy is injected to round out a complete play which is a splendid family picture.

Besides those mentioned others in the cast are George Fawcett, Edwin J. Brady, Carolyn Irwin, Ward Crane, Emmett King, Aggie Herring and Dunbar Raymond.

The story deals with the problems of a young couple, both poor, who had hesitated before marriage because of their poverty. When they think they have inherited wealth they marry, but find they have nothing but a neglected Western ranch which has been deserted for years. The girl accuses the boy of tricking her into the marriage and their troubles begin.

The second feature on the program is Wally Wales in "The Fighting Cheat" and a new up to date News completes the program.

Tuesday night is going to be another great event in Norwich. Another aggregation of the best in local talent will do their stuff on the stage including Cad Graves Charlestonians.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—(AP)—The downward readjustment of stock, bond and commodity prices this week coincided with a further seasonal slackening of business and trade activity. Meanwhile, money rates stiffened, presumably in reflection of the heavy withdrawal of funds to meet month end and tax-day requirements. New security offerings again exceeded $150,000,000, about half of which will be offered in the New York market.

The declining tendency of stock prices, which carried both the rail and industrial averages to new low levels for the year, was featured by a series of sweeping declines in so-called specialties, which had been bid up to exaggerated values by pool manipulation.

Since the publication of figures on the huge volume of brokers' loans by the New York Stock Exchange and the Federal Reserve bank was started, banks have substantially marked down the loaning value of securities, necessitating larger margins to carry them as collateral on the loans. This has decreased the buying power of pools financing them, and has made them vulnerable to bear attacks. Many of them are now selling 20 to 60 points below the high levels established only a few weeks ago.

The decline of over four cents a bushel in wheat prices reflected to some extent the selling of bear traders, who took advantage of the lack of aggressive buying in the face of a large decrease in the visible supply of this commodity below that existing at this time last year. Cotton futures, after having fluctuated within a narrow range for nearly two months, dropped over $2 a bale as a result of the lower spot markets and the lack of new outside business. Coffee closed about 25 to 40 points net lower, and sugar prices eased slightly.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Curious Cat

They say that curiosity
At one time killed a cat.
But I can tell you that I don't Believe a word of that!

These flowers smell just like the ones
My mistress had today
Upon the dining table when
I jumped up there to play.

She scolded me because I did,
And boxed by ears a bit—
I couldn't see a reason small
Why she should throw a fit

About a little thing like that!
And when I tried it here
She said, "You darling little cat!"
Now, aren't these women queer?

Cora M. V. Preble.

White-Throated Sparrow

When other birds have hushed their song
And huddled sit—sad, sweet and clear,
Down in the thicket by the stream,
You sing mass for the dying year

Plaintive, unearthly pure, your song
Tears my bruised soul apart—and then
You stop your song and sing anew
And mend my shattered soul again.

Oh, wistful singer! Do you to
This world or to the next belong
Down in the thicket by the stream,
Breaking your heart and mine in song?

—Edith Mirick.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Some people have an idea that opportunity knocks but once at the door and that settles it for all time. Boys and girls there isn't a word of truth in that belief. Opportunity is always knocking at somebody's door, begging admittance. The trouble is that people do not recognize him when he speaks, and if they do recognize him they are indifferent or too lazy to let him in. For this reason opportunity does not call for them as often as they do not call themselves.

Opportunity isn't going to take hold of you and make you a shining success socially and financially. Not by any means. He simply gives you the chance and it is up to you to make good with his help.

Opportunity demands that a boy get up early in the morning, when he doesn't want to, so that he can get a good start on his day's work or his studies. Opportunity means a lot of other disagreeable things, or what are looked up as disagreeable things in life. Obedience to the demands of opportunity leads to success in life, and that is what we all are hoping for.

The great men of history, the great men of our nation, our great military and political leaders, are men who recognized and welcomed opportunity to get ahead in life and took advantage of this chance. Success does not ordinarily fall into our laps, great men rise above others through their energy, accomplishments and activity.

GILPATRIC FALTERS AT HEARING IN HARTFORD

Former Banker Admits That Perhaps There Were Irregularities in the State's Purchase of $750,000 of Victory Loan Bonds—Confessed Cutting Coupons From Bonds Placed in His Bank for Safe Keeping—Gilpatric Denied That He Had Any Knowledge of "Fixing" the Books of the State Treasurer's Office—Hearing in Bankruptcy Court Will be Held Thursday Morning in Hartford.

HARTFORD, March 1.—(AP)—Looking old and weary and appearing bewildered at times, G. Harold Gilpatric, defaulting cashier and wrecker of the [illegible] National bank, of Putnam, again faced referees in bankruptcy court [illegible] faltering in his speech but declaring over and over that he was going to straighten out the affairs of funds he left behind him when he was sentenced to Atlanta penitentiary for 15 years, the former banker admitted that perhaps there were irregularities in the state's purchase of Victory loan bonds. He confessed cutting coupons from bonds which he took for safekeeping to his bank pressing in upon him and [illegible] removed "through absorption" [illegible] items from the books of the institution.

This was the fourth time that Gilpatric has been forced since his exclusion at Gardone, Gabriele D'Annunzio has arrived here to listen for a few days to echoes of the days when all Italy as well as other countries buzzed with talk of his exotic poetry and affairs of the heart. He came here principally to attend a performance at the Scala theatre by Ida Rubinstein, famous French actress, who will give this week, for the first time in Italy, "The Martyrdom of San Sebastian," which D'Annunzio wrote for her in Italy and which was performed in Paris in 1911.

Gilpatric, who came here this morning from Putnam by automobile, was taken back to the home of his father in that place tonight and will appear tomorrow in a court action growing out of the wrecking of the First National bank.

Question of Victory Loan Bonds

[illegible] question of the purchase by the [illegible] in Victory loan bonds, perhaps the most important question brought out today, had been touched [illegible] questions that [illegible] not get far with the subject [illegible] that there were [illegible] and indications [illegible] investigation of this issue [illegible] completed.

[illegible] perhaps all is not right [illegible] purchase of bonds [illegible] the commonwealth by [illegible] as state treasurer near the close [illegible]

[illegible] former banker said, "I would [illegible] said that transactions involving [illegible] purchase of the Victory loan were [illegible] but I would not say so now."

Adding out that he is now checking [illegible] transaction with George M. [illegible] cashier of the wrecked First [illegible] bank of Putnam, Gilpatric said, "We are now going over this [illegible] progress is being made. But [illegible] make any definite statement [illegible] I would prefer to have [illegible] there is evidence of de[illegible] delivery, there is no doubt of [illegible]

No definite knowledge of irregular[illegible] this purchase of [illegible] has ever been found, [illegible] matter was brought up today by [illegible] H. Scovell, accountant engaged [illegible] Comptroller Gay [illegible] of state funds while [illegible] department of the com[illegible]

[illegible] by Mr. Scovell [illegible] treasurer's office [illegible] the Putnam [illegible] Victory [illegible] $750,000 of them were [illegible] from the Victory issue to [illegible] Questioned regarding [illegible] Scovell said that at the time [illegible] "Liberty" on the Fourth [illegible] loan bonds and that he probably transferred the bonds to take advantage of the difference in market [illegible] the two issues.

Denied "Fixing" Books

Gilpatric denied on the stand today [illegible] had any knowledge of "fixing" [illegible] books of the treasurer's office. [illegible] question was brought up when [illegible] was shown that records show delivery [illegible] Liberty bonds of the Fourth issue on January 4, 1920, a year and a half earlier than, according to Gilpatric's statement they were actually delivered. He said he never made such entries in the books of the state and could give no explanation how such [illegible] were made.

It was brought out by Attorney Lawrence A. Howard that the date January 6, 1920, was made in the state's records with a rubber stamp, while the [illegible] date on a card was by pen and [illegible] former treasurer again maintained that he could throw no light on [illegible] declared that he could remember a single entry made on the books of the state and said that if he had his eye sight he would not [illegible] to the treasurer's office [illegible] entries made on books or [illegible] He was using safety as an excuse, he declared. He was of the opinion that the date, January 4, 1920, [illegible] records was wrong, but could [illegible] no explanation how such a possible error could have been made.

Admission from Gilpatric that he had loaned coupons in his own bank to meet the interest due on a $200,000 purchase of Liberty bonds for the state, which he was holding up, was brought by questioners.

Made Interest Payments

Gilpatric, in holding up the state [illegible] bank, was forced to make three separate interest payments himself, the first payment of $4,350.03, he believed was met by the clipping of coupons on bonds held at his bank. The second and third payments were met [illegible] week. Mr. Scovell pointed out that [illegible] fact that the first payment involved [illegible] bonds indicated that Gilpatric had clipped coupons from bonds of smaller denomination than $1,000, the denomination of those purchased by the state. The former banker again pointed out that these latter bonds had been exchanged for bonds of smaller denominations brought into his bank by Putnam [illegible]

Attorney Richard Dana, of New [illegible] representing Blair & Co., was the questioner who brought out that [illegible] had caused several items to be [illegible] from the records of the Putnam bank. The item in question involved the purchase of securities by Gilpatric for Samuel Bradley, of Putnam.

The testimony showed that on March 21, 1924, Bradley had turned over to Gilpatric $19,000 for the purchase of Dallas joint stock land bank stock. The purchase of the stock was made by Gilpatric in July and the former banker expressed the opinion that delivery was made some time during the week of August 7. It was on that date that Gilpatric attempted to take his own life when his thefts were discovered.

Attorney Dana brought out that the transaction was placed on the bank's "scratch book" and that this item with several others disappeared from the books in the "absorption" of cash items. This, it was shown, was done just prior to the arrival of a bank examiner.

At the opening of the hearing this morning, Receiver Coffin, made his report on the results of the two day hearing in Putnam and the re-check of the records of the Putnam bank. According to this report, the receiver succeeded in discovering the disposition of $251,657.72 of the proceeds of $333,000 representing claims admitted or pending against the bank, and in accounting for $37,000 of some $121,000 of Liberty bonds involved in the bank's claims against the state.

FINED $1,500 ON CHARGE OF POSSESSING LIQUOR

NEW HAVEN, March 1.—(AP)—Rocco Diorio, Waterbury restaurant proprietor, was fined $1,500 on a charge of possessing liquor with the intention of selling in the disposition of one of eight cases before Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the United States district court here today. He pleaded guilty to the charge of possession and nolle contendere to that of maintaining a nuisance.

John A. Danaher, assistant United States district attorney, requested that a maximum fine be given on the evidence of about $5,000 worth of liquors which were found in the place when raided by twelve federal agents on February 24. Diorio being a first offender, neither costs nor jail sentence was imposed.

In urging a lighter sentence for his client, Attorney Mezzacola told the court that Diorio had recently lost $27,500 in various business ventures, and had entered the liquor business in order to pay his creditors in full. He stated that the liquor sold was of the best and that his client had never been the object of complaint to either state or city authorities.

The raid on Diorio's establishment disclosed that the kitchen was filled with a bar and all accoutrements where drinks were mixed for serving in the dining room.

HOW WOOLWORTH HEIRESS ESCAPED LOSS OF $2,000,000

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—Barbara Hutton, 15-year-old Woolworth heiress, has escaped the loss of $2,000,000 by what the Evening World describes as a Wall Street coup accomplished by the trustees of the estate.

Barbara inherited 175,000 shares of Woolworth stock from her grandmother, wife of the late F. W. Woolworth, founder of the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent stores. Last January her trustees privately sold 50,000 shares at more than $200 a share when it was quoted at 218. Since then the stock has been declining and now stands at 181 and the shares Barbara sold have depreciated $2,000,000. Her remaining stock, however, has depreciated $5,000,000.

DRIVE IN NEW YORK STATE DESIGNED TO CHECK CRIME

ALBANY, N. Y., March 1.—(AP)—The first step in a concerted move by various agencies of the state government to check crime was taken by Governor Smith tonight in the submission of a special message to the legislature proposing immediate creation of a joint legislative civilian commission to study the possibility of making a sweeping revision of the criminal statutes of the state.

The commission would consist of four members of the legislature, to be selected by the two houses, and of five citizens to be appointed by the executive, an appropriation of $50,000 would be authorized.

From the republican side there will come some time this week a resolution, sponsored by Assemblyman F. Trubee Davison of Nassau county, virtually carrying out the governor's proposals.

In comparison with foreign countries, the governor declared in the message, the rate of crime in this country, and in New York state, is appalling, and should be made the subject of an immediate inquiry by the state government.

"In regard to punishment," he continued, "it seems necessary for us to ascertain whether or not our existing crime statutes need revision and whether our penal systems, including imprisonment, probation, parole and the bonding system, are yielding the best possible results in adequately punishing the criminal or preparing him to take his place in society after he has offended against it."

SUPREME COURT DECISION ON INHERITANCE TAXES

WASHINGTON, March 1—(AP)—Two decisions were handed down by the supreme court today defining the rights of states in imposing inheritance taxes.

In one case, from Wisconsin, the court held that [illegible] fixing of any arbitrary time as a basis for determining [illegible] should be considered made in expectation of death and subject to state inheritance taxes. Value, the opinions said, can and ought to be determined for the purpose of such taxation [illegible] the time of the donor. Justices Holmes, Brandeis and Stone dissented from this opinion.

In the other case, from North Carolina, the court decided that a state in which a non-resident company has property cannot tax the whole of the value of the property within its borders to the total property of the company.

The Wisconsin case was brought by the executors of the estate of Ferdinand Schlesinger and the supreme court's decision overthrow rulings by state courts sustaining a law which declares all gifts made within six years of the death of the donor subject to an inheritance tax.

In the majority opinion by Justice McReynolds, the supreme court declared statutes which would determine the intent of the donor by fixing such a time limit as arbitrary and unreasonable. Justice Holmes, in his dissenting opinion, argued that the statute in question [illegible] was not necessarily invalid because a definite time limit was imposed, and declared that "a majority of the court see unduly [illegible] practice that a law should be held inoperable to all phases of the large gifts involved in the Schlesinger case, some of which had been made within a year and a half of his death, when he was in ill health.

The North Carolina case was brought by the Rhode Island Hospital Trust company, to get aside an inheritance tax imposed upon the transfer of stock of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, under the will of George Briggs, who died leaving a large estate.

SETBACK FOR BRIAND'S FINANCIAL PROJECTS

PARIS, March 1—(AP)—The smooth progress of Premier Briand's financial projects from the senate back to the chamber met with interruption tonight when the chamber finance committee referred its original dictum and rejected M. Doumer's stamp tax on industrial transactions. The vote was 15 to 3, with 11 abstentions.

This action was foreseen by the government supporters, who maintain the real test will come on the floor of the chamber, and not in the committee room. The profess the belief that the measure as returned from the senate will receive a majority when the deputies are given a chance to take it or leave it.

Result of "Weeding Out" of Speculative Accounts Which Had Been Carried to Extremes.

NEW YORK, March 1.—(AP)—Speculative markets stocks, grain and cotton, broke to new low levels for the year today in one of the most drastic shake-outs of impaired marginal accounts in recent months.

Stocks slumped one to 15 points despite the fact that banking support, running into the millions of dollars, had been provided before the opening to take care of over-extended speculative groups in three stocks, American Brake Shoe and Foundry, Foundation company and New York Canners—which had sustained violent declines in Saturday's brief session. Total stock sales run over two and one half million shares, the largest of any session this year.

Wheat futures sold off 3 3-4 to 6 1-2 cents a bushel, the many options closing at 1.59 as against a high of $1.65 1-2 in the closing days of last year. Other grains yielded in sympathy. Cotton closed 24 to 32 points net lower, with all the options, except March, in new low ground for the session, and contracts for December delivery selling below 17 cents a pound.

While the drastic nature of the decline in stock prices gave rise to all kinds of rumors, Wall street generally was inclined to look upon it as a "weeding out" of speculative accounts which had been carried to extremes. Many issues, it was pointed out, had been bid up far beyond their intrinsic worth on expectations of mergers, recapitalization plans, increased dividends and larger earnings, few of which materialized.

Public participation in the market has been dwindling for the last two months. This has been attributed to a variety of factors, including the flood of new security offerings which have been put out at the rate of $100,000,000 a week since the first of the year and have eaten up a large volume of surplus funds, the failure of spring business to come up to expectations and the uneasiness caused by the revelation that over $3,000,000,000 is outstanding in the New York market in brokers' loans on stock and bond collateral.

Bear traders knowing these conditions, have been hammering at the market since the first of the year but have been successful in only a few issues due to the strong buying support provided by pools for stocks which they were sponsoring, and special buying in a number of high priced issues such as American Can, and General Electric.

REPUBLICAN FACTIONS IN CHICAGO AT LOGGERHEADS

CHICAGO, March 1—(AP)—With the city's crime conditions and hints of political significance formally aired in Washington, in the petition of the Chicago Better Government association for a congressional inquiry, Chicago republican factions are at loggerheads.

Intense feeling here today centered about two photographs circulated in connection with the petition charges that State's Attorney Crowe was a guest at a 1924 banquet given by the Genna brothers and other gangsters.

One of the pictures was printed by the Chicago Tribune today and was a reproduction of the spenkers' table at the banquet referred to in the petition presented to the senate Saturday by Vice President Dawes. It showed Mr. Crowe, Secretary of State Emmerson, Lieut. Governor Sterling and other state and municipal officials seated at the table.

Friends of the state's attorney pointed out that several representatives of the opposing faction, headed by Senator Deneen, were also in the photographs and a second one circulated of a party given in 1925 by "Diamond Joe" Esposito, Italian leader and alleged bootlegger, at which Senator Deneen and others as guests.

Rev. E. L. Williams, law enforcement director of the Better Government association, returned today from Washington, and issued a statement denying that the petition for a senate investigation of conditions in Chicago was drawn with the assistance of politicians.

"The banquet picture pointed by the Tribune," he asserted "shows the best reason why I would not have conferred with either side. It shows men from both factions seated at the table. I conferred with neither Senator McKinley, nor Senator Deneen."

The association issued also a warning to Crowe that it was prepared to produce evidence to substantiate the charges made in the petition.

LARGEST SUM EVER WRITTEN INTO LEASE IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, March 1—(AP)—Three buildings on Chapel street and two on Church, just around the corner, from the Chapel street property, all owned by Henry F. English, the largest real property holder in the city, were today leased to the F. W. Woolworth company for 42 years for a consideration of total payments of $3,350,000. It was the largest sum ever written into a lease of this kind in the history of the city. The lease, filed with the town clerk today, becomes operative May 1, 1927.

The Woolworth company for years has been operating in the Hubinger building on Chapel street. The store was wrecked by fire recently and the interior had to be renovated.

The lease provides that the Woolworth company tear down the present five structures and in their place erect one six-story brick building at a cost of not less than $450,000. The new structure would form an L about the Cutler building on the corner of Church and Chapel streets. The plans must be approved by Mr. English. The first ten years the annual rental is fixed at $75,000 to be increased by periods until the last seven years the annual rental shall be $95,000.

3,000 Persons Made Homeless By Fire

Approximately 20 Blocks of Dwellings Were Burned at Newport, Ark.—No Estimate of Loss.

NEWPORT, Arkansas, March 1.—(AP)—Approximately 20 blocks of dwellings were laid waste, several manufacturing plants were destroyed and upwards of 3,000 persons were made homeless today by a fire which, driven by a high wind, swept through the residential section of Newport.

Fighting appartus from Little Rock and Batesville aided in subduing the flames and state troops with tents and other equipment, were en route from Little Rock to aid in caring for the homeless.

No estimate of the property loss was available early tonight. B. L. Boyce, mayor, announced that a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce would be held at once to take stock and systemutize relief work.

The electric light plant was put out of commission and the city was without light tonight other than the glare of the dying fire.

CHANGES RECOMMENDED IN NEW YORK STATE GOV'T

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—Sweeping changes which would affect virtually every branch of the New York state government with their thousands of employes, are recommended in the final report of the state reorganization committee, made public today. The approximately 180 departments, bureaus, boards and commissions now in existence would be whittled down or consolidated into 16 departments, under the committee's program.

These 16 departments would be run as cooperative business offices, making this state's government one of the most up-to-date in the nation.

The committee, which undertook the work after adoption of the reorganization amendment by the voters last November, was headed by Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state.

Centralization of authority and responsibility was the main purpose in changing the government machinery. Probably the most important change suggested by the reorganization committee is that concerning the state budget.

The committee recommended that the governor should have responsibility and authority for formulating the state budget, with the senate and assembly represented at sessions of the budget estimates. Budget estimates of the legislative and judiciary branches of the government would be included in the state budget without revision by the governor. There would be a director of the budget and assistant appointed by the governor.

The committee recommended the changes should take effect January 1, 1927. Numerous changes advocated by Governor Smith are included in the committee's recommendations. Lengthening of the governor's term to four years and an increase in his salary were advocated.

CAPT. HEINEN WORKING AS SURVEYOR AT $6 A DAY

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 1—(AP)—Captain Anton Heinen, former German dirigible expert, construction engineer of the Shenandoah and hero of that craft's battle with a January storm in 1924, when winds tore her loose from her mooring mast at Lakehurst, is working as a surveyor at $6 a day.

Mrs. Heinen, discussing her husband's new vocation, said that it was a matter of "work or starve."

Captain Heinen's connections with the government were severed in July, 1924. He then organized a company to operate a line of dirigibles between New York and South America. Funds for the undertaking were well in hand when the Shenandoah crashed last September. Confidence in this mode of transportation was shaken and, according to Captain Heinen, it was decided to proceed no further until the Los Angeles, sister ship of the Shenandoah, had proved her worth.

GIGLI HAS DECIDED TO SING IN DETROIT MAY 6

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—Benino Gigli, tenor with the Metropolitan Opera company, announced late today through his manager that he would sing in Detroit May 6. Gigli cancelled a concert in Detroit February 22 and left the city hurriedly, after he said that a warning had been received that enemies would "cut his canary throat."

Gigli's decision to return to Detroit followed a number of conferences between his manager and Mrs. Isabel Hurst, who arranged the ill-fated concert, and how came to New York to persuade him to hold it at another date. He also asserted that she wanted to collect $1,700, which he had lost on the cancelled concert.

Gigli had said that although the cancellation cost him "a lot of money", he would never go back.

Plans for his reappearance, as announced by Mrs. Hurst, include his reception in Cleveland, O., May 5, by the mayor of Detroit and a committee which will accompany him to the latter city.

Gigli will make his last appearance of the season with the Metropolitan Opera company at Cleveland May 4.

DELAYAL SOUGHT BY COUNTESS OF CATHCART

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—The official status in this country of Vera, countess of Cathcart, assumed new complexities today, when Arthur Garfield Hays, her attorney, announced she would try to postpone her first court hearing tomorrow.

He proposed a continuance until Friday. Federal Attorney Buckner is not expected to object.

Meanwhile, the countess is free from Ellis Island under $500 bond made with with the immigration authorities. Her period of freedom ends Wednesday. There is a possibility she may have to go back to the island where she was held because of her admission of "moral turpitude", until her petition for a writ of habeas corpus is heard in federal district court.

BELIEVES PROHIBITION PROBE WOULD BE FUTILE

Secretary Mellon Declines to Approve Proposal Sponsored by Assistant Secretary Andrews, Chief Prohibition Enforcement Officer—Sec'y Mellon Contends That the Public Has Made Up Its Mind and Will Not Accept Any Conclusions of a So-Called Impartial Commission—Wayne B. Wheeler Presumes to Tell What Congress Will Do.

WASHINGTON, March 1—(AP)—Appointment of a presidential commission to conduct an investigation into the general effects of the prohibition [illegible] was proposed today by Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of enforcement, but it was immediately frowned upon by Secretary Mellon.

Expressing the hope that the inquiry started today by the house alcoholic liquor traffic committee into prohibition would result in such a recommendation, Mr. Andrews, speaking informally, said it would do much to quiet the public mind and aid enforcement work.

Secretary Mellon took an opposite view on the proposal of his chief enforcement officer, however, expressing the opinion that the public has made up its mind either for or against prohibition and such an investigation would be of little help.

Mapping out plans for its study of the effect of the operation of the eighteenth amendment, the house committee today decided to call Mr. Andrews as its first witness, probably next Monday. Chairman Hudson indicated the proposal of the assistant secretary might be endorsed after a preliminary inquiry by the committee.

Another viewpoint, however, was expressed by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

"Congressional leaders are not inclined to authorize any new commission to investigate the results of prohibition," he said. A congressional committee is the usual one to investigate conditions on which congress acts. The alcoholic liquor traffic committee is making an investigation and this is all that will be done at this session."

Nevertheless, the senate judiciary committee has decided to to hear next Monday the proposals of Senators Edge, republican, and Edwards, democrat, of New Jersey, and Bruce, democrat, Maryland, for amendment of the Volstead act. These senators are insistent on a general public hearing by this or a select committee on the whole subject of prohibition enforcement.

Unwilling to make an estimate of the effect of the prohibition law himself, Mr. Andrews deplored today the "increasing number of wild statements" and expressed the opinion that if proper enforcement were to be possible, they public mind must be quieted. Mr. Mellon, on the other hand, held that the public generally know the facts about prohibition and was in a position to obtain any information which a general commission might.

The inquiry outlined by Mr. Andrews would take into consideration all phases of the effects of the prohibition amendment, which he described as a "tremendous sociological experiment." He would have particular attention given to the economic and sociological effects of the amendment.

This is the first proposal from a [illegible] for an investigation into the [illegible] the prohibition amendment [illegible] since it went into effect [illegible] six years ago. Representative Celler, democrat, New York, in a statement today described the alcoholic liquor traffic committee as composed of "thunderheads" dry as."

FEDERAL COURTS BUSY WITH PROHIBITION CASES

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—The machinery of the federal courts was thrown into high gear today to dispose of prohibition cases, with the following results:

Padlocking of five public places, including the Metropolitan supper club, for one year; padlocking of three places for six months and locking of two others for $1,000 in bonds each.

Indictment of five men and three corporations for illegal diversion of alcohol by a federal grand jury.

Opening of the trial of four men charged with having conducted from New York a huge mail order bootleg business.

The men indicted for illegal diversion of alcohol were Leo Blume, Nathan Sanders, Jesse Seligman, Joseph Rizzo and T. C. Martino, heads of corporations which handled a total of 15,300 gallons of alcohol monthly under feredal permits. The corporations headed by Blume, Sanders and Seligman were also indicted.

The government had on hand 58 witnesses from various parts of the country when trial of the alleged mail order bootleggers began before Federal Judge Hickenlooper. Joseph L. Freidman pleaded guilty when the case opened, Lewis P. Shayer was granted a severance of trial because he was too ill to be in court. Albert H. Shayer and Charles P. Sax were on trial.

The government charged that the men did business as the Walker Mercantile company and sent travelling salesmen through the country, obtaining orders for liquor. The first government witness, the postal agent for the premises occupied by the Walker Mercantile company, said he was instructed by the building's owners to examine the contents of the waste baskets of the firm and that he pieced together many papers showing prices the company charged.

The government's witnesses include persons from 11 cities and towns in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Missouri, Virginia, Michigan and West Virginia.

FUGITIVE FROM CALIFORNIA WAS CAPTURED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 1—Walter Carney, who told police he escaped from California and New York prisons, was held with two other men in $100,000 bail each today in connection with thefts of jewelry valued at $100,000 from wealthy homes in Philadelphia and New York state.

Carney confessed, police said, to posing as a wealthy business man under one name and then forging recommendations for himself as "butler" under other names. As a "butler" he affected an English accent.

The two other men were Phillip E. Zinner and Louis Halpert who admitted buying jewelry from Carney but protested that they did not know it was stolen.

Carney told police, he escaped from the Blackwell's Island penitentiary where he was serving a term for grand larceny by swimming the East River through the rocks of Hell Gate. Other prisons from which he said he escaped were the Clinton prison at Dannemora, N. Y., and the city jail at San Francisco. His New York record shows six convictions, police said.

He said he had obtained a place recently as butler in the home of Mrs. J. C. Clark of Philadelphia. He worked one day and then disappeared with $15,000 worth of jewelry from the Lake Placid, N. Y., home of E. F. Hutton, wealthy New York broker.

STATE HAS 700 ACRES OF LAND IN KILLINGWORTH

HARTFORD, March 1.—(AP)—A purchase of 700 acres of forest land in Killingworth as an addition to the Cockaponset state forest was announced today by Elliott B. Bronson, field agent for the commission on forestry and wild life. The new addition is about six miles from Hammonasset beach and in view of its many natural accommodations should prove a useful auxiliary to the state park there, Mr. Bronson says.

Situated in Chatfield hollow, the land has many beautiful camping spots, he says, besides wonderful cliff and odd rock formations and fine stands of timber. The east branch of the Hammonasset river runs through the purchase for about a half mile. There are also several natural caves on the territory. The total acreage of the Cockaponset area is now 5,000 acres.

ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF MERIDEN SCHOOL SUPT.

MERIDEN, March 1—(AP)—The resignation of Dr. David Gibbs as superintendent of the public schools here, was accepted tonight by the board of education, effective March 19. Dr. Gibbs tendered his resignation about a month ago, when the board, over-riding the school rules, went over his head in permitting high school dances, which had been forbidden for several years.

The school superintendent ruled out the dances when he found that scholars attending them had engaged in "petting parties" and joy rides. He held fast to his opinion that modern dancing was harmful to high school students.

BURGLAR ALARM SYSTEM EVADED BY ROBBERS

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—Robbers circumvented an elaborate burglar alarm system to a tunnel, from which they removed nine tons of earth and stole furs worth thousands from the Julius Klugmann's Sons Inc. fur establishment, it became known today.

Working within a hundred feet of a police station across the street, they are believed to have required a week for the operation, it was said, they made a deep perpendicular hole and then went horizontally for more than 25 feet, piercing the foundations of two buildings.

The robbers, an investigation by the police disclosed, rented a vacant store in the rear of the fur establishment. A partition was erected which cut off the view of the rear of the store from the street, and the tunnell, six feet wide and six feet deep, was dug from the shop, while dirt and rock was piled on the floor at the base of operations.

The passageway was planned so that when the men broke through the last wall the loot was easily accessible. The tunnel was completed early yesterday morning and the furs removed during the day.

Nine other robbers acted more impetuously than the patient diggers and today held up 35 employes of the Applebaum and Cohn Fur Dressing company's shop in Brooklyn, taking furs valued at $50,000.

Five of the men, wearing handkerchief masks, lined up the employes while four others loaded the furs on a truck, and escaped.

FOUR MEN HELD FOR THE CLINTONVILLE LIQUOR RAID

NEW HAVEN, March 1—(AP)—The four men arrested Saturday by federal prohibition agents following a raid on a "vinegar and cider" manufacturing plant in Clintonville, which was found to be a huge distillery, waived examination on charges of violation of the liquor law when arraigned before Commissioner Bernard E. Lynch today, and were released in bonds of $1,000 each for appearance in the United States district court on May 28. They were Thomas Carroll, Frank A. Doyle, Herbert Doyle, and Salvatore De Nicola, all of New Haven.

The place which was raided is known as Doyle Brothers cider and vinegar works and is a two story building. Agents found a thousand gallon steam operated still, 20,000 gallons of cider and 2,000 gallons of cider brandy. The collected evidence on the place filled eight five-ton trucks.

The death of Mrs. Frank H. Gallup, 55, occurred at her home, 49 Spring street, Monday morning, after a few days of illness. She was born in West Suffield, November 9, 1867, a daughter of Timothy and Margaret Broughton Mullens. She leaves her husband and three sisters, Mrs. Chauncey E. Macfarlane of this city, Mrs. Thomas McNally of Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Lavern Carrol of Boston, Mass., and two brothers, William Mullens of Providence, R. I., and Peter Mullens of Natick, Mass.

Fire Chief Henry J. Kelly issued a general warning Monday for local people to tend to their house chimneys in co-operating with the fire department to avoid conflagrations which might prove disastrous, especially when occurring at night and when they are not likely to be discovered for some time. Soft coal and substitutes, which have been used in almost every household in the city, are one of the worst enemies of a clean chimney. These substitutes when used in quantity form a heavy soot which quickly gathers on the inside of the chimney and not only badly affects the passage of air currents and smoke but is given over to kindling. There are also many local owners who have been purely negligent in tending to their chimneys. All this adds to the danger by fire and to the cost of operating the fire department. In less than five hours Sunday morning the department responded to four alarms for chimney fires. Every call represents an expense in the chemical used and the wear on the apparatus.

WESTERLY

CLAIMS CITY OFFICER SHOULD BE GENTLEMANLY

WESTERLY, R. I., March 1—Westerly town council, John Di Nichola, president: Rogers E. Trainer, Harry H. Coleman, Peter Nardone, Isaac G. Smith, A. Clifford Holdsworth, and Thomas F. Moore together with Council Clerk Everett E. Whipple and Town Solicitor John Ferguson met Monday morning in the council chambers of the Westerly town hall for the March meeting.

Previous to the voting of the monthly bills there was added to miscellaneous account the amount of $190 in the payment of the Wall and Co., for months of November and December at $95 a month. To Michael J. Burke, collector, was added the payment of $42 in the collection of poll taxes. In this connection it was stated there were 160 names on the list of persons who had either left town or were not properly listed. To Lewis Stanton as moderator of the last town meeting was voted $10

Frank W. Coy appeared before the council just before the councilmen retired for their executive session. He said that he came before them with two requests, one that he be permitted to speak uninterruptedly and the other to make a statement of facts in the case. I have taken interest in tax liens put on property in Westerly, he said. In every interest in request of mortgagee. With but one exception notice had been had. I think it an unjust thing. But when I was in the Westerly town clerk's office, the Westerly town solicitor came in and I asked him to give me the costs in the cases. Immediately he hunched into me with insolence as a butter-in, always making trouble.

I don't ask for your sympathy. I am interested for the town and think the town officers should be. In that capacity the town council should request the town clerk to instruct the town solicitor to act as a gentleman while carrying on town business.

President Nichols asked Solicitor Ferguson what he had to say.

I have been over the matter with Mr. Coy, said Solicitor Ferguson, and realize that I may have used expressions that were not gentlemanly, but Mr. Coy is responsible himself. Statements were made and few would sit quietly by and hear such statements made without replying. Mr. Coy called me to his office where his attitude was not proper. Furthermore Mr. Coy felt the matter demanded expediting. If he was unreasonably impressed he did not call for the costs. I accept self ament. I asked Mr. Coy if he was liable for a tax and he said no. I would not give him a fist.

Mr. Coy said that he had been looking for Mr. Ferguson to ask him about the costs on the lien on properties and added that he had his doubts right now as to their legality. It was easier for people to pay the enormous costs charged than to fight the cases.

Following this exchange of ideas the council went into executive session.

John D. Traggis, proprietor of the St. Clair, having the endorsement of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, was voted a victualizing license by the council, as was John F. Garandelis, 7 Main street, and Peter Magris, 23 Canal street.

Licenses were voted granted the following 48 dealers for milk licenses: Carl E. Mitchell, John W. Wilkinson, Torres B. Dagolo, Charles L. Fontana, Elisha Hall and Son, Lyle C. Gray, Fred W. Clark, John T. Edmond company, Jaque H. Hoxie, Arthur C. Akers, James Vito, Earl W. Norman, Howard F. Langworthy, Alfred Lepkike, C. B. York, Rinaldo Sussea, Antonio DeFanda, Joseph B. Clark.

Heintze, pastor of Trinity Evangelican Lutheran church of Westerly in behalf of the Young People's society of Trinity Lutheran church, asking for permission to show an eight reel motion picture in Westerly on some Sunday evening, the film being entitled Martin Luther, His Life and Times. The letter stated that the firm was religious and educational, not commercial and that the financial consideration preventing its exhibition on any week day.

Town Solicitor Ferguson told the council fathers that they had no authority or power to grant the request and that it was absolutely prohibited by Rhode Island statute, which the town clerk was directed to inform [illegible] of [illegible]

Here's simple new way to gain them

Please accept full 10-day tube free. Note the great difference in the color of your teeth and gum firmness when dingy film is removed as dentists urge

RESTORING dull, off-color teeth to polished whiteness is a recent dental achievement.

It's been found that dingy teeth come simply from a film that forms on teeth. A stubborn film old-type dentifrices did not successfully clear off. That's why brushing fails you.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel that film now—a sort of slippery coating. Beneath it are the dazzling white teeth you envy.

It keeps your smile unattractive because it absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. It invites tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea because it breeds bacteria by the millions.

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, a scientific combatant has been found. Leading dentists widely urge it. All druggists have it. Works wonders on dingy teeth. 10-day test sent free.

The commission's judgment has been accepted without question in connection with the other countries, and yet there is no reason to suppose that it has been guided by facts in all cases but one and in that has displayed an unjustified leniency.

There seems to be no good reason for refusing to support the commission's verdict in regard to Italy. It is time that such debts were funded and payments on them started in keeping with the financial conditions existing in the respective debtor nations. The commission has been convinced by its investigation and the representatives of the Italian commission that we can expect no better terms from Italy than have been arranged. It believes it is for the best interests of all that the settlement be carried out as arranged and unless those in the senate who are opposing it can furnish a substantial explanation to the contrary there is no justification for the obstruction being raised in the senate.

Such a claim as that which insists the leniency to Italy was done for political purposes is ridiculous, and springs solely from those who are endeavoring to make a political football out of this debt adjustment. Some senators are always ready to respond to such an appeal but the number should be few rather than many.

LAME DUCKS AND NORRIS

Just because the Norris bill calling for a constitutional amendment whereby the date of inauguration would be changed from March fourth to the first of January, has been passed by the senate does not necessarily mean that it will get the approval of the house. There is nothing obligatory about it.

Senator Norris deplores the effect of lame duck government, such being applied to those who hold over from November until March after their successors have been appointed. He points out that they continue to exert their policies even though they have been repudiated at the polls, and there can be no appreciation of what he has to say upon this point.

But the bill would undoubtedly have received much more spontaneous support were it fathered by someone other than Senator Norris. He may point out how lame ducks, as he calls them, seem to interfere with the proper running of the machinery, but there haven't been many lameducks who have done more in this particular direction than Senator Norris himself. He has been kicking over the traces and doing his bit in the obstruction of legislation quite as freely and persistently as he next one, and this in spite of the verdict at the polls in November. Thus when he undertakes to have legislation passed to correct the faults displayed by others it would not be surprising if there were quite a strong sentiment prevailed to the effect that he stands in a decidedly exposed and vulnerable position. What he has to say may be entirely correct but it would have much better effect and come with better grace from someone else. Perhaps one of the strongest objections to the bill is Senator Norris himself.

GETTING SOVIET FUNDS

Soviet Russia is looking for money. It is willing to get it where it can, and it is interesting to note that it is appealing to France for credits. Asking for it does not necessarily mean that it will get it, but from the difficulties which are being experienced in dealing with certain French financial problems, France would not appear to be the place for obtaining such help.

But while the representative of the soviet government is busy with the negotiations in France one might suspect that those negotiations would extend to the point of getting an adjustment of the debt which soviet Russia owes France. France is interested in bonds of the old czarist regime to the amount of 10,000,000,000 francs and now is the time when good use could be made of that money. Certainly if it is impossible to get payment on those bonds the soviet government ought not to expect to flout other loans in France, and yet that is just what seems to be planned at the present time.

Bond buying is something which French people are much interested in, but the idea of putting money into bonds when there is no prospect that they will be paid is poor business. One experience with the Russian bonds would seem to be enough for most investors but soviet Russia apparently doesn't think so. Possibly the French people will hasten to throw good money after bad but their own good judgment and their present financial standing should cause them to hesitate and take a long and serious look ahead before they leap. France isn't so flush with funds that it can be expected to throw its money about promiscuously just for the asking.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Memories of February will not be forgotten for some little time to come.

The bland and familiar entrance of March bids us be prepared.

The man on the corner says: Pin back your ears for the first peep frogs.

For the next few days attention will be concentrated on the income tax blank.

It may be well enough to urge France to be an ally of Italy in the next war, but it would be better not to have any next war.

The worse the railroad crossing the less attention some drivers seem to pay to it. But only others are left in such cases to profit from it.

It is a bit too early to get out and spade the garden, but there will be a chance to display plenty of such enthusiasm in a very short time.

The reckless driver can easily check up on himself but there is no attempt to do it until something happens. Even the lessons that others teach are ignored.

In Boston the experiment of excluding all trucks from two residential streets is to be tried. How many residents of other residential streets will envy those living on such streets!

If Germany wants to get rid of Bergdoll all it needs to do is to give him to understand that he will soon be expected to take up arms in behalf of that country.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1—The Constitution requires a census, on which representation and direct taxes are based, shall be taken within every ten years. The custom has been in the past to take such census and reapportionment soon after the time at which it may legally be made, but the last census was taken in 1920 and thus far no steps have been made by congress to make a reapportionment of representation. Many bills have been introduced but none has passed congress. The committee on census of which Congressman Fenn of Connecticut is chairman has been conducting hearings on pending bills and an effort is being made by certain western states to bring a reapportionment bill out of committee and get it before congress for action at the present session. That move comes largely from the west, eastern and especially New England members seem to be inclined largely to the view "we want to be let alone." In other words, reapportionment means redistricting a state, and that invariably leads to confusion and rearrangement of political affairs. This is usually dreaded by men involved even if they may possibly profit politically by the result. Some of the bills before the committee reduce the total number of representatives in congress, and others either keep it at 435, the present number or decrease it to make the behind closed doors, but rumor has it advocates and its opponents and to predict the outcome of the present agitation would be merely guesswork. Under some of the bills Connecticut would gain one representative. No vote has yet been taken in committee, which is holding sessions behind closed doors, but rumors has it that a desire is evident on the part of influential eastern members that the matter go over to another session.

A number of members have expressed privately their opinion as to what ought to be done, but invariably coupled with the admonition "we are not to be quoted."

Floor Leader John Q. Tilson, however, is not one who hides behind a subterfuge. Col. Tilson said today in answer to questions by the Bulletin correspondent, "I do not believe a reapportionment that mean redistricting of states should be taken at a moment when a part of the country has already held its primary elections, as will be the case if any of the pending bills are acted on at this session, unless the time of such a measure taking effect is put forward until after March 4th, 1927. A change of districts would make confusion to many states which had their primaries yet to hold. It could not help bringing about a bad mix-up and cause grave injustice to some states, where the primaries had been held. I do not object to such a measure at a later date, and of course if it was reported out of the committee it would at once be given a place on the legislative program, as a Constitutional measure in fact it would be a privileged measure through coming under the Constitution. What the bill will be, if any is reported, I have no idea, and I think no harm will come to the country by having the matter postponed until the short session next winter."

It is the custom of members of the cabinet to give each season a dinner in honor of the president and his wife. They are usually formal state affairs and somewhat dull owing to the limited number of guests and keeping within certain social circles, whose members meet so frequently that there is little novelty in the way of entertainment or conversation.

Not so the dinner given Tuesday by Attorney General and Mrs. Sargent in honor of President and Mrs. Coolidge. Not a Washingtonian appeared on the original list, not a member of the cabinet, and it was only owing to the serious cold contracted by Mrs. Coolidge, which enforced her absence, that the cabinet was represented at all. As Mrs. Coolidge could not attend, the president asked Mrs. Jardine, wife of the secretary of agriculture, to accompany him, and she thus became the high honor guest.

The sergeant dinner was typical of the sergeants. It did not lack ease or dignity, but it was unique. A state dinner without the presence of a cabinet member, senator, member of the house or noted diplomat is something that probably never before occurred in the annals of Washington high official life.

It is evident the attorney general made out his own invitation list to please himself and the President and Mrs. Coolidge, realizing he could not accomplish this more fully than by inviting to a genuine New England function with "home folks" as the star guests sitting around a beautifully appointed and lavishly spread table.

E. B. Bellew, superintendent of the Middletown public schools was here attending the National Education association convention and also appeared before the congressional committee holding hearings in the so called educational bill now pending. Mr. Bellew took the position that the bill was detrimental to the interests of the state and that it would put public schools under the power of the federal government. He added that Connecticut did not want the aid or the domination of the federal government in the conduct of her public schools.

Floor Leader John Q. Tilson was called to Tennessee Saturday by the death of his brother Dr. Leroy Sands Tilson of Erwin, Tenn. Dr. Tilson had been a practicing physician for 45 years and attained much prominence in his profession. Col. Tilson made a quick trip on account of pressure of legislation before the house and was back in Washington Monday morning.

The milk producers of Connecticut have appealed to their congressmen to have the tariff in imported butter raised. They complain that imports from Holland, Denmark and other foreign countries are let into the United States at so low a tariff, that their trade is interfered with.

Acting in sympathy with the department of commerce and requests from New England the house appropriation committee has provided for a survey of New England markets. The request was brought before congress by efforts of the New England council.

An interesting Connecticut problem put up to the internal revenue commissioner this week, was in regard to the tax returns of the Yale university press, which is an organization organized and maintained by George Parmley Day, treasurer of the university. Its purposes is entirely educational and charitable, so it is not taxable under the law, and its only object is to publish books of value written by Yale men which otherwise would be published and so made available to readers. Mr. Day believes he should not be forced to make a detailed return under those circumstances and came to Washington this week and explained the situation to Commissioner Blair. The making out of a detailed tax return is expensive and troublesome, and the government gets no benefit as it is exempt from taxation. Mr. Blair informed Mr. Day that he would have one of his assistants look the case over and see if there is not some way to prevent the unnecessary work.

Congressman Tilson, floor leader of the house, was one of the six men asked by the president to witness the signing of the tax bill this week.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Edgar Masters could be excused for feeling a bit cocky. When a kid has struggled and worked as Ed had and has finally been made business manager for the Society of Associated Farmers, of course he feels that the old world is his oyster.

"Next thing you'll be doing, Kid, is getting yourself a girl," his older brother and partner on the farm told him laughingly. Ed blushed and said nothing as he drove off in the big truck which belonged to the association, to deliver the 50 or 60 hampers of vegetables ordered semi-weekly by the housewives along the route to the city.

Edward didn't dare to tell his brother that he had already selected his girl, but that he hadn't dared to let her know about it until his new job had given him courage. He was going to call on her on his way home that evening and let her in on the secret.

Sut Eldridge, red-headed and dimpled, had always been cordial enough whenever she had met the handsome boy-farmer for whom everyone was predicting a bright future. She was invariably sympathetic over his business troubles, more than once furnishing him a clew from her clever wits to help him out of a tangle. But when she had invited him to come and see her he always got "cold feet." It had seemed presumptuous for a young farmer without a prospect in the world outside of what he dug out of his half of the little farm, to aspire to a girl who had graduated from Smith and who ran a whole department in a country newspaper even if her father did own the paper.

He loved the little verses that she wrote, and read every line of the woman's page which she edited.

But somehow now that he was business manager of the up and coming farmers' association, things did look a bit more promising for him. So that night he stopped his huge shining truck in front of the Eldridge home on Main street.

"Well, how's the new business coming on?" Sue asked when they were comfortably seated in the wicker chairs on the hospitable porch.

"Oh, fair. I'm having a hard time with carrots, just now. Every one seems to have too many. Just the way they had too many tomatoes last year. Remember how they rotted away by the carload because it didn't pay to ship them? All the men in the association have many more carrots than they need and they seem to feel it's up to me to get rid of them."

"Well, why don't you?" Sue demanded calmly.

"Great guns! Haven't I tried? They say there is no call for them."

"Seems to me," Sue laughed across at him tantalizingly, "Seems to me, Ed Masters, if I were business manager I could find a simple thing like a market for carrots easily enough."

Her boyish grin deepened the dimples in her smooth young cheeks, and made her blue eyes twinkle impishly. It was the most provocative grin that Ed had ever seen. Suddenly he leaned over her and kissed her full upon her provocative, teasing, smiling mouth. The feel of her soft, warm, little shoulder through her thin rose organdie suddenly sobered him and awed him. And it did not need the indignant protest of her whole body to make him realise what he had done. His feeling of cocksureness left him ashamed and mortified.

She rose from her chair and stood for a moment staring at him, a deep red stain on either cheek. Then she walked to the door. "Good night," she said coldly, and went in, closing the door very firmly and conclusively and relentlessly behind her.

On Ed's next trip to town with the hampers and the vegetables for market when he stopped at the first house where he was to leave a hamper he was detained by the mistress. "You don't happen to have extra carrots with you, do you?"

"Yes, I have some," Ed replied.

"I wish you'd bring me in a few, and bring me a bushel next time you come by," she ordered.

At nine of the 20 houses where he stopped with hampers carrots were ordered. Ed thought he was dreaming. There didn't seem to be any point to every one without any apparent reason, suddenly demanding carrots. It was as if his customers had started out to play a silly game with him.

When the hampers were delivered and he went on to the city, the first merchant asked him, almost before he had entered the office, "Got any carrots with you? There has been quite a call for them this morning."

"Say, what's the matter with every one today, that they all seem to have a hankering after carrots? I couldn't give 'em away last trip."

The merchant grinned. "See today's Clarion?"

The boy shook his head.

"Well, you get a copy when you go out. And bring me a few bushels carrots tomorrow. I want them right away."

Ed bought a copy of the Clarion at the news stands. On the first page was an article on carrots for live stock. Then he leafed through the paper till he came to the woman's page. There it was!

An article eulogizing the medicinal qualities of the despised vegetable. "More than one beautiful woman," said the writer, "owes her fine complexion to her daily carrot, and it is small wonder that it has become so popular." Then followed recipes for the preparation of carrot dishes—carrot salad, carrots browned in butter, carrot jam, pickled carrots, carrots boiled with bacon. Then came menus, with carrots forming the piece de resistance. And the article ended with the succint suggestion that the thrifty housewife buy in the fall when the vegetables were cheaper and store them in her cellar for winter use.

"But," was the thought that flashed through Edward's mind as he finished. "Why did she do it?" When she was so angry with me." Then came another thought, perfectly dazzling in its significance. She wouldn't have done it if she had been angry. Then his eye caught a paragraph that was apparently stuck on the bottom of the carrot article by mistake.

"The man who is going to succeed is the man who refuses to let obstacles and setbacks elbow him off his path."

Then the boy farmer smiled happily as he read between the lines much that was not printed there.

He had intended going back for another load of carrots that very afternoon. He had other business that evening.—Detroit News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Foreigners and Americanism

Mr. Editor:—In recent discussions in your esteemed paper, the main idea of certain writers has been to display foreigners in this country as detrimental to American ideals. The fact that a certain profundity and plausability attended these discussions, does not establish them as high-minded and meritorious. On the contrary it illustrates a peculiar mental attitude bordering on snobbishness, which an increasing number of imaginery Americans mistake for patriotism. These so-called patriots, through a wrong conception of true Americanism, are spreading throughout the land the germs of intolerance and hate. These "savers of the nation" as they style themselves, would have us believe that all the crime and mischief in the country may be laid at the doors of people of foreign birth. On this account, the following answer to a question in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of a recent Saturday is quite interesting:

"According to Warden Thomas (Ohio penitentiary), 83 per cent of the prisoners are native Americans." Being an American myself, I do not relish that statement. It certainly does not jibe with the pet ideas of those who seem so concerned about the danger of America's ideals.

Let us set ourselves deliberately to see straight, to look at things without either rose-colored or smoke- dimmed glasses. Let us try to find the cause of this distorted sense of superiority of which so many Americans of the present day are victims. For one thing we will see there has been grounded into them a certain prejudice called by some "patriotism". Because of it they are disposed to look upon our nation as standing alone on star-crowned heights and to regard all other nations and peoples as being in the gulf of ignorance, poverty and dispair. So they get a one-sided impression. Blinded by national self-love, they see all good in their own people and little but evil in others, except those others be their allies. As may easily be seen, carried to excess, that kind of thing often results in hate. Not carried to such lengths, it means the ridiculing of others, and in addition, the fooling of themselves. When we wonder how far this thing is carried, let us consider the so-called "comic sheet" and the cheap vaudeville stage where the Frenchmen, Germans, Jews and Irishmen are used as laughing stock. The reverse of the situation is seen in common, cheap literature where the American stands as the type of all that is admirable. Some teachers even teach their charges that there exist very marked national characteristics, such as the Dutch are very clean, the Mexicans very treacherous, Jews very much given to cheat, Germans to villainy, Italians to idleness, the French to immorality, the Irish to wit, and so on; all of which is idle and pernicious clap-trap. For each and every man in his experience has known among his own countrymen those who were clean and those who were dirty those who were honest and those who were dishonest, those who were lazy and those who were energetic.

Real Christian sentiment, not the Christian sentiment of exclusivism and privilege, is what we need in our American life, private and public. To put any section of mankind beyond the pale is not Christian.

Work Not Steady

An old couple lived near a large factory where the husband had been employed 50 years. On the last pay day, however, the faithful employe came home very discouraged. His wife asked him what was wrong, and he sadly answered that he had been laid off to make room for younger men.

"I told you when you first went there the work wouldn't be steady," his wife angrily replied.

From Small Beginnings

Andrew John, the Tailor-President of the United States

In 1826, an 18-year-old tailor in Tennessee married a 16-year-old girl. The tailor was poor and uneducated, but the young lady took him and made him over into the 17th president of the United States. Many a great man, if the world but knew it, has been made by his wife.

From the time when he was a small boy just old enough to work at all Andrew Johnson had been a tailor. He had learned his trade from an older man for whom he had worked for several years. Then he had set up for himself, and had measured and cut and sewed with real skill. He had been so busy with shears and needle and the heavy charcoal-heated "tailor's goose" that he had no time for school. He had picked up the ability to read, and had puzzled out the flowery speeches, but he was practically ignorant until he married. Marriage is always an education, but for Andrew Johnson it was school itself. His wife, Eliza McCardle (her name deserves to be held in honor, took the tailor in hand and made him sit down evenings and learn how to write, and how to do sums in arithmetic. She taught him all that she knew, and she gave him her wit and cleverness, an exed him as long as he lived—and example of lovely and devoted womanhood.

The young tailor stood up for the rights of the common people and was honored by being a town office. He represented the people so well that he was sent to the state legislature of Tennessee. Once more he upheld the cause of the poor and humble, and his delighted wife saw him sent to the state senate at the age of 33. Then it was the same story over again. He was sent to the national house of representatives, became governor of Tennessee and then a United States senator.

No man upheld more boldly in congress the cause of the poor and the unfortunate. He was a southern man, but ardently believed in the union. Therefore, he was made vice president on Lincoln's second election, and became president when Lincoln was assassinated.

If Johnson's plans had been followed it is probable that much bitterness would have been avoided. He tried conscientiously to carry out many of Lincoln's generous feelings toward the south. His political enemies endeavored to drive him from the presidency, but were not successful. In many respects Andrew Johnson was an unusually great man.

Quaker Oats "stands by" you through the morning

Feel hungry and "fidgety" before lunch?—try this

TO feel right through the morning, you must have well-balanced, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals—that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder; 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

Russian Priests

Russian priests are bobbing their long hair after the fashion of the American girls. Some of them are also discarding their beards. This is done for reasons of hygiene and convenience, but more particularly to render their appearance on the street less conspicuous, for among atheistic bolsheviks a priest is looked upon with disdain. Formerly members of the Russian orthodox clergy wore long flowing hair which fell loosely over their shoulders, giving them a patriarchal appearance. Many of them cultivated bushy whiskers which reached almost to their waists. Ever since the soviet government separated the church from the state, large numbers of priests and bishops have been discarding their clerical robes. They found if they wore their ecclesiastical garb they could obtain neither employment nor recognition.

Plain clothes men were on guard outside the Century theater when Benjamino Gigli gave his first New York concert since he filed an alleged black hand threat in Detroit last week. There was no disturbance.

This table, prepared at the treasury department, reveals the taxes which will be paid by the largest classes of taxpayers during the calendar year, with the first payment beginning March 15, 1926.

The taxes above were computed on the basis of allowing only personal exemption and credits for dependents on "earned income," such as the $1,500 allowed single persons and $3,500 allowed married persons, or the head of a family, with additional $400 for each dependent. Other exemptions, such as taxes, interest on indebtedness, contributions to church and philanthropic agencies, were not included.

All persons having an earned net income of $5,000, or under, should make returns to the deputy collector of internal revenue, Norwich, or the collector at Hartford, on form 1040A, while persons with earned incomes of more than $5,000 should make returns on form 1040.

A single person having a net income of $1,500 and a married person having a net income of $3,500 must file a return, regardless of whether a tax is due.

The vocalists were Robert A. Gray, tenor, Mrs. Louise Schwenk, contralto, and Mrs. Josephine Stewart, soprano, each of whom was in fine voice singing with charm and artistic expression.

COUNCIL NAMES TWO SUPERNUMERARIES FOR THE NORWICH POLICE FORCE

On recommendation of the police commissioners Alfred W. Patterson and Clarence D. Simpson were appointed members of the supernumerary force of the local police department by the court of common council at its March meeting Monday evening in the council chamber. Mayor Milo R. Waters presided at the meeting which was called to order at 8:15 o'clock. The minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading according to the regular procedure.

City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read the return of service on those assessed at the February meeting of the council for benefits due the construction of the Geer avenue sewer and the return was accepted. Petitions were then received and disposed of as follows:

From J. E. Hafner, et al., for the acceptance of Garfield avenue as a public highway. Referred to the public works committee.

From John J. Panek for removal of a dead tree at the corner of Cedar and Happy streets. Referred to the public works committee.

From Tomaso Vigilante for a street light near No. 13 Ruth street. Referred to the police committee with power.

From William H. Murphy, et al., for a street light on Broadway between the little park and Slater avenue. Referred to the police committee with power.

Franklin Street White Way

From the Connecticut company, plans showing the proposed re-location of poles on Franklin street, between Franklin square and Boswell avenue, in connection with the white way for Franklin street. Referred to the public committee and the police committee.

The monthly reports of the street commissioner and city treasurer were received and accepted, after which the police committee reported that the petition of J. J. Corkery, et al., for a light at the intersection of Fowler avenue and Main street and the petition of Rhineholdt Thoma et al. for a light on Lorenzo street had been granted. The report was accepted.

Report on Sewer Assessments

The following report of the committee on sewer assessments was then read the report being accepted and the resolution contained therein adopted:

Your committee appointed to make and report proposed assessments on account of public sewers in Geer avenue, Summit street, Hickory street, North street, Pratt street and Brook street, beg leave to report that since the hearings and assessments made John Senetski, owning property on Geer avenue at the corner of Woodmansee avenue has called the attention of your committee to the fact that his house on the said corner has and has had for some time adequate sewerage facilities into the public sewer on Woodmansee avenue and has asked for relief.

Your committee believe that Mr. Senetski should not have been assessed on account of the Geer avenue sewer for sixty feet of his lot adjoining Woodmansee avenue as it has adequate sewerage into the public sewer in Woodmansee avenue and therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, that upon payment by John Senetski of the sum of $62 of the assessment of $123 on account of a sewer in Geer avenue made against him and his real estate on Geer avenue by this court of common council on February 1, 1926, the mayor of the city abate the balance of said assessment, to wit; the sum of $60.

Your committee has also had brought to its attention the claim of Antonio Skane on Hickory street that he was assessed for ten feet more frontage than he owned. Upon investigation your committee believe Mr. Skane to be mistaken in his claim and therefore recommend that no action be taken upon it.

Your committee has also had brought to its attention the claim of Mikolai Galkowski on Brook street that he was over-assessed but upon investigation belief that his claim is not correct, considerable allowance having been given him in the assessments already made this assessment if figured on frontage would have been $236 while he was assessed $88.64) and therefore recommend no action on his claim.

The police committee, through Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, recommended the names of Alfred W. Patterson and Clarence D. Simpson for the supernumerary list of the local police force. The city clerk was instructed to cast one ballot collectively for their appointment.

Claims for Damages

A claim from Theodore Golkowsky for a broken brake bracket was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel. The bill rendered him by the Imperial garage is for $36.90.

A claim was also received from Mrs. Catherine Donnelly (Tobey) of No. 33 Franklin street, through her counsel, Charles L. Stewart, for damages due to a fall she had on Broadway Hill. Claimant claims the sidewalk was icy and had not been sanded by the street department. The claim was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel.

Department bills were approved as follows: Fire department, $6,018.22; recreation dept., $15; park dept., $234.90; finance dept., $15,924.91; public works dept., $11,776.56; police dept., $5,041.79; street lighting, $5,754.20; cemetery dept., $402.13; gas and electric dept., $46,690.98; water dept., $2,492.18; Deep River reservoir, $4,621.05. The council adjourned at 8:30 o'clock.

TOWN TAX FOR NORWICH LAID AT 24 1-2 MILLS

It took the score of voters assembled in town meeting Monday evening at the town hall just two minutes to lay the town tax on the grand list for this year. The tax laid is 24 1-2 mills, the same as last year. The meeting was called to order promptly at 8 o'clock by First Selectman William S. Murray, who explained that it was an adjourned meeting for the purpose of laying the tax. The annual meeting was held last October and at that time the meeting was adjourned until the first Monday in March to lay the tax on the last perfected grand list of the town. Selectman Murray asked if anyone had a resolution to submit.

Town Counsel H. H. Pettis presented a resolution fixing the tax at 24 1-2 mills, one mill to be applied to the sinking fund and the balance to be used for the payment of the expenses of the town for the year, the tax to be payable May 10th.

The resolution was unanimously adopted and the meeting quickly adjourned having been in session two minutes.

POSTPONES RETURN TO PARISH AT YANTIC

The return of Rev. Robert B. Day as rector of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, is indefinitely postponed, according to word that has been received here from him in England.

The announcement was made in the church on Sunday that Rev. Mr. Day had at last booked passage for Feb. 18 but cancelled this and had taken passage for March 4. However, he has been obliged to cancel this also because he could not leave his charge in England until some clergyman could be found to relieve him. Added to that as a reason for postponement is the fact that his sister has suffered a nervous breakdown, so that Rev. Mr. Day has indefinitely postponed his intention of returning to Norwich.

The church has decided to defer further action on the proposal to secure a rector until Rev. Mr. Day sends definite word of his plans.

NEW HAVEN PASTOR SPOKE AT MEN'S SUPPER

"Playing the Game" was the subject of an inspiring address by Rev. Harold B. Camp, D. D., pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New Haven, when he was the speaker last Friday night at the men's supper at the Central Baptist church. There was an attendance of about 125.

President Shepard L. Palmer of the City Bible class presided and welcomed the gathering, while the speaker was introduced by Judge J. H. Barnes, vice president of the class.

The New Haven pastor spoke of five cardinal points in playing the game as follows: To do more than your part, realize the value of the sacrifice hit, ability to keep your head in crises, get fun out of the game, and find the good in the other player.

COURT ENTERS NOLLE IN POOL ROOM CASE

When Fred Morin, one of the two proprietors of the Palace bowling alleys, was presented in the city court Monday morning on a charge of allowing minors to frequent the alleys, the case was nolled by Judge H. H. Pettis, on recommendation of City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins. The recommendation was made as the facts in the case did not warrant further action in the opinion of Mr. Robbins.

Morin was arrested Saturday night at the alleys after some trouble arose between two brothers, John and Joseph Koptejna, No. 53 Second street, as to the age of one of the brothers who was told to leave the alleys as he was not old enough to play pool there. A complaint was made to the police and as a result Morin was arrested.

The liquor violation case against Mrs. Stecia Teszcar of Sherman street was continued until Tuesday. Her case had been pending two weeks owing to the fact that when she was arrested one of her children had the measles. The case was continued until Tuesday by Judge H. H. Pettis who did not wish to dispose of the case as Judge Arthur H. Libby was the presiding judge when the case first came up.

One local man was fined $10 and costs on an intoxication charge and a local youth, 19 years old, had his case continued for six months. He was charged with intoxication.

TELEPHONE CO. TAKES LEASE IN SHETUCKET ST.

The Southern New England Telephone company has just signed a five year lease with James L. Case of the offices which Mr. Case has recently vacated on the main floor at 49 Shetucket street, to which the telephone people are to move their commercial offices from the exchange building on Union street.

Growth of the telephone business in this exchange has been so great that more room for plant equipment and traffic department must be arranged for at the Union street building. This will be accomplished by moving the commercial department out of the Union street building to the new offices that have been leased from Mr. Case. The tract of the exchange building which the commercial department will vacate will then be available for the plant and traffic departments. The commercial department will move as soon as the required alterations can be made in the newly leased office location, but it may be more than a month before these can be accomplished.

FORCED ENTRANCE INTO HAYES' LUNCH CART

Some one, apparently in search of a good meal, made entrance into James P. Hayes' pullman lunch cart at the entrance of the New Haven railroad depot some time early Sunday morning, but got no money as Mr. Hayes leaves none in the cash register over night.

The break was discovered by Officer Barney Keenan when he went on duty Sunday morning and when he opened the front door of the lunch cart, he found the place filled with gas. One gas burner under the stove was lighted and the other was turned on but not lit, allowing the gas to escape into the cart.

The intruder got in through the front door, taking a big chance of being seen as he was prying it open, since the door is in plain sight of the street.

WOMEN PLAY WHIST FOR CHARITY FUNDS

A bridge whist arranged by the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women was held in their rooms, 126 Main street, Monday afternoon. Mrs. J. Edward Driscoll was in charge. The prize was awarded to Mrs. John Foley. Plans have been made to have these parties every Monday afternoon in their rooms at 2:30. The proceeds are devoted to charity. The council has also arranged for bridge classes for which a nominal fee is charged.

Attendance such as Walter Johnson sends the ball from the pitcher's box to the plate in less than half a second, quicker than the wink of an eye.

MAKES STIRRING APPEAL FOR OLD AGE PENSIONS

A ringing appeal for support for an old age pension law in all the states of the Union was made by Thomas E. O'Donnell of Kansas City, the principal speaker Monday night at an open meeting held by Norwich aerie, No. 367, at the Eagles home on Cliff street. Mr. O'Donnell was accompanied on his visit here by Edward Foley of Waterbury, grand worthy state president, William Kelly of Naugatuck, connected with the organization department, and Mathew Smith of Waterbury, grand worthy conductor, all of whom spoke also. William H. Hastedt, state treasurer, a member of Norwich aerie, was also on the list of speakers.

Vice President August Hastedt presided and introduced Mr. O'Connell, who sketched the great growth of the Eagles in the last two years from a membership of 450,000 to nearly 600,000 and spoke of the financial stability of the order, which has a surplus of $39,000,000 and assets of $9.53 on hand for each dollar of insurance that is carried by the membership.

The Eagles have to their credit, Mr. O'Donnell said, the inception of workmen's compensation, which has now been written into the law of 37 states, and of widows' pensions, which are now operative in 20 states. The Eagles are now throwing all their strength into support of the old age pension movement. In their intimate contact with human needs, the more thoughtful ones have had it borne in on them that next to being sick and without funds, the most pitiable plight is life to be old and without funds. The poorhouse looms sinisterly for more than two million of hon ble workers who never have been paid more than enough to meet the simplest daily needs and who as they approach 60, 65, 66 see the door of the factory, the shop, and the office closing inch by inch, on their fear-drawn faces. This is not sentiment! Innumerable investigative commissions of the state legislatures have collected experience data showing conclusively that poverty in old age is on the increase and not to be ascribed to any personal shirking of duty, but is chiefly due to the practice in industry of scrapping the worker grown too old.

THOMAS E. O'DONNELL

Three states now have old pension laws. In twenty-six other states bills are pending, and two victory of the old age pension in Montana, Nevada Pennsylvania and Wisconsin has fired the Eagles with a zeal that cannot die, but will keep them pushing the old age pension until it takes its place with workingmen's compensation and mothers' pensions on the statute books of every state, the speaker declared.

The gathering gave Mr. O'Donnell enthusiastic applause and the Eagles pledged themselves to renewed effort to make substantial additions to the membership of Norwich aerie.

NATIONAL GUARD AND POLICE CALLED OUT TO QUIET CROWD AT HARTFORD FIGHT

HARTFORD, March 1.—(AP)—Solidly jamming every door at the state armory, a milling, exasperated crowd some 10,000 fight fans ran riot at the state armory where the Kaplan-Petrolle bout was held in attempts to overcome by brute force the ticket selling arrangements which kept them outside for more than three hours.

More than forty policemen besides squads from the national guard companies at drill in the armory were called to keep in check the throng at first which was good natured in its attempts to get to the scene of the bout between Kid Kaplan and Billy Petrolle but later surly and then angry as they found themselves unable to get into the building.

Nobody could give a coherent explanation of how the jam at the doors began. An official gate put that there had been a mixup in tickets, a score of duplicate tickets, while others freely admitted that the crowd was greater than expected and that many had come without tickets. Tickets were on sale here today in Hartford, and when the sale was transferred to the armory.

In the seventh, during a brief exchange of blows, both connected with hard blows to the chin. Kaplan was the quicker to rally and he had Petrolle on the retreat.

The featherweight champion, whose title was not at stake, forced the fighting throughout, with Petrolle retreating but always looking for an opening.

The decision was popular with the crowd.

In the semi-final, Chick Suggs, New Bedford, Mass., outpointed Jack Snyder of New York. It was a ten round bout. They weighed 125 pounds.

Harry Goodwin of Boston and Ruby Bradley of Holyoke, Mass., two 3-4 middles, opened the card with an eight-round draw.

EPHRAIM BUDNICK'S CASE GOING TO COMMON PLEAS COURT, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 1—Ephraim Budnick of Norwich and New York was presented in court today for reckless driving of an automobile last August. He was in the public service business then and brought Rachel Cohen to New London. On the way the Budnick machine met with a mishap and the passenger was thrown and injured. She claimed that Budnick was reckless in the operation of the car and she would have landed safely in New London. The more she thought of the injury she sustained the more she believed Budnick should settle with her. She watched her chance and when she found him in Norwich she asked for his arrest, knowing that he intended to leave here on the New York steamer last night. Budnick was not locked up when he was taken from the steamer Chester W. Chapin, for he gave bond with the endorsement of Jacob Goodman and he was released. The parties to the case had a long talk in the retiring room of the police court and finally agreed that a civil suit for damages would result. As that solution of the matter was sought, the court nolled the complaint for reckless driving upon the payment of costs by Budnick. How the case will be taken up in the common pleas court and there be fought to a finish unless a settlement is reached before the next session of the court.

USING ANY OLD MARKERS DOES NOT GO WITH THE LAW

NEW LONDON, March 1—Louis Kochansky, a junk dealer, just escaped a fine in the police court this morning for permitting the operation of his auto truck with number plates that did not belong to it. He has been using an Atterbury in his business and that machine has been mangled and a driver named Bishop, Saturday. State Policeman Albright came to the White truck and saw at a glance that the plates in use upon it were issued for an Atterbury. Kochansky had no excuse to offer except that he was using the old plates he found upon the machine. He asked the officer to take the matter up with Lieutenant Tracy. This was done on the way the driver made the acquaintance of Kochansky had made no attempt to remove the proper plates. He denied that statement in court today and represented that he instructed Bishop to put the truck in the garage until proper plates had been secured. Judge Preece was inclined to let a penalty on the owner of the truck but finally decided that there was room for doubt and after he had lectured Kochansky on the pitfalls he was likely to carry if he continued in the use of suspected judgment.

Tony was the fellow who was drunk and Tony admitted that Healey spoke the truth as to that. It was so apparent to the court that the pair were intoxicated that judgment was suspended in view of the fact that Busca was not complained against. "I use knives so much as a butcher," Henry told the court, "That I never carry one around with me." He was told to stick to that practice and he would never cut anyone.

CITY COUNCIL GIVES UP BIG SEWER PROJECT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 1—The city council this evening adopted the report of problem and made Broadway to Cedar street. Eventually abandoned the lateral sewers in Cedar Grove avenue, Oakland street, Leonard street and adopted street because of the terrific cost and also a storm drain in Coleman street. It was estimated that the cost of the work would be some $55,000 and if the abutting property was forced to pay the amounts assessed against them they would be liens placed on the property which would stand there a great many years and perhaps never be released. One owner, Eliza Bishop would be compelled to pay some $8,000 and others would pay from a few dollars to several thousand for sewers and the storm drain.

The city manager was directed to have a survey made and provide estimates for sewering the Riverside section. That work will cost, some $40,000, but the work can be done and the council is disposed to find out just how it can be accomplished and get an estimate of the cost that will be accurate.

Councilor Streeter desired that before permission was given to the Kane estate to rebuild property recently damaged by fire the property should be viewed by the building inspector that it might be known whether the buildings were damaged to the extent of more than 50 per cent. of their value. Manager Holt announced that such an examination had been made and the damage was estimated at less than 50 per cent. It was announced that the owner of the property proposes to build the upper part of the burned structures with fire proof material. A contract for furnishing the pipe to the city at a cost of $355.40 was awarded to the Thames Lumber company.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Texas observes today the 90th anniversary of its declaration of independence.

The day is also observed in Texas as Sam Houston Memorial day, being the birth anniversary of the great leader in the struggle for independence.

One hundred and fifty years ago today the American encampment on Dorchester Heights began a vigorous cannonade to dislodge the British in Boston.

If President Coolidge were at his old home in Vermont today he would attend town meeting, this being the annual town meeting day in the Green Mountain state.

Brig. Gen. J. B. Glenfan, of the Medical corps, U. S. A., in command of the Walter Reed General hospital at Washington, will be placed on the retired list today.

Home and foreign missions and Christian education will be the principal subjects of discussion at the tenth biennial meeting of the general council of the Presbyterian and Reformed churches in America, which opens a two-day session today in Atlantic City.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Richard Dix in Womanhandled, a Spat's family comedy, four special acts of vaudeville, is the program at the Palace today. The vaudeville features, "The Weighing Bell Revue", which is an exceptionally good dance McComville does a little bit of dance and tells a few stories, and ends up in giving an impersonation of Charles Chaplin. It is an exceptionally clever performance and deserves all the applause he gets for it.

Marion & Viller, who offer an unusual novelty act, which includes wire walking, head balancing, some fancy and tricky shooting, opens the show, and Harrison & Vaughn crowd enough comedy into fifteen minutes. The Spat's family comedy is one of the best of these series that the Palace has shown in some time. It is a good all around bill.

Lyceum Theater, New London

90 Horse-Power dubbed by the author, Francis DeWitt, as a high pressure comedy of auto-suggestion comes to the Lyceum theater, New London, for two nights only prior to the beginning of its Broadway premier. As the cast suggests, it is the real thing. Ramsay Wallace is the featured player and his character is said to glorify the name of Smith. Miss Allyn King, who can well claim though she does not) to be the most beautiful young actress now before the footlights, Miss Alice Fischer, who needs no introduction, lends dignity and, exquisite art to any character she is cast for. Miss Violet Dean an English actress of prominence. Gerald Willshire, Wallis Roberts, Guy Hitner and Guy Milham, round out an eight cylinder cast. Walter Hibson staged the production. New London theatergoers are to be congratulated upon the opportunity to see this attraction before instead of after its Broadway run.

The Lyceum theater reasonable scale of prices will prevail. The best seats may be had at $2.50 each.

Popular Series of Union Meetings

Beginning with Wednesday of this week, the annual series of union meetings under Y. M. C. A. auspices with the church unified will be held, and Norwich is highly favored on this occasion with the privilege of hearing a nationally known minister, Dr. Charles O. Judkins of Glens Falls, N. Y., whose messages are always inspiring to the large audiences to whom he speaks. Dr. Judkins is in great demand all over the country, and it is gratifying to us that our new star of Norwich can secure his services. Dr. Judkins has had three years experience as a pastor, twenty-four of which have been spent in Glens Falls, N. Y. He is a specialist in reaching the youth, and every Sunday of his present pastorate he has preached to what he terms his youth's church as well as to large audiences of adults. The schedule of the meetings arranged for this series is as follows: On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 1:45 p. m. Dr. Judkins will deliver special addresses to the youth of the age, and that it may be convenient for the academy students these meetings will be held in the parish house of Park church. To these meetings all the youth of the city of the teen age are cordially invited, and it is hoped that very large numbers will take advantage of this very rare opportunity of hearing a man who knows youth and knows how to interest them. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 7:30 Dr. Judkins will speak in the United Congregational church, and to these services the public generally is invited. On Sunday, March 7th, Dr. Judkins will address two meetings: One to young people only at 4 p. m. and the final meeting of the series at 7:30 p. m., both of these meetings to be held at the United Congregational church. These meetings are made possible by the fund for religious work left to the Norwich Y. M. C. A. by Miss M. Louise Starkevant.

A large Paris publication is carried on without the use of a telephone.

NOANK

Harry Park attended the turkey supper given Saturday evening by the hook and ladder company of Mystic.

A large number of sorrowing relatives and friends, including many from Noank, attended the funeral services for Miss Charlotte King, held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred King of West View, on Saturday afternoon.

The services were conducted by Rev. F. Werse of the Baptist church. The floral pieces were beautiful. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery, Mystic. The bearers were Eugene Butson, Nelson Chesebro, Carlo Bracci and Harry Ashby. The honorary bearers were members of her Sunday school class, Vivian Meister, Luella Bogue, Evely

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS WEAK

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—Acute weakness developed today in all the principal securities and commodities markets. Stocks broke 1 to 15 points, wheat sold off 3 3-4 to 6 1-2 cents a bushel and cotton futures declines 24 to 32 points, most of them touching new low levels for the year. Total stock sales were 3,501,600 shares, the largest of any session this year.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the reactions in the speculative markets, which Wall Street was inclined to regard as an overdue correction of speculative excesses that have been taking place since last fall, and which have been strikingly revealed in the sensational collapse of recent stock market pools. As a matter of fact most of the day's news was favorable, including the publication of several 1925 earnings reports and the reduction of the tobacco products dividend from $8 to $7.

The announcement before the opening that banking interests had taken over the holdings of certain groups which had been operating in American Brake Shoe and Foundry, Foundation Company and New York Canners, all of which had recorded violent declines on Saturday, insufficient short covering to give initial transactions a firmer tone. Bear traders, encouraged by their success in uncovering weak spots and presumably taking advantage of the uneasiness of investors, continued, however, to unsettle at supposedly vulnerable issues, meeting with marked success. International Combustion Engineering, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth and a number of others.

As a result, scores of stop loss orders which had been placed by frightened holders were touched off, and sweeping declines took place in many sections of the list. Such high grade issues as U. S. Steel common, American Smelting, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Mack Trucks, New York Central, Atchison, Union Pacific and Southern Railway were driven down to new low levels for the year, although closing quotations, in many cases, were above the low levels for the day. U. S. Steel common rallied from a low of 123 1-2 to 125 3-4, where it was off 1 1-4 net.

American Can dropped from 334 1-2 to 321 and then rallied to 326 1-2, off 2 1-2, but Foundation company dropped more than 5-8 to 1-8 but snapped back 1-2 of 1 point, Woolworth 1-4 point lower at 183 3-4, after having been as low as 180 1-2. Extreme declines of 3 to nearly 10 points took place in Allied Chemical, Atlantic Coast Line, Cocoa Cola, Lone Threading Machine, the Commercial Solvents issues, General Electric, Hudson Motors, McCrory Stores B, Mack Trucks common, Pan-American Petroleum, Remington Typewriter, Rossia Insurance, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse Air Brake and United Drug.

Call money renewed at 5 1-2 per cent but funds became more plentiful during the afternoon, and the rate eased to 5 per cent. Time money which was quoted at 5 5-8 for some of the shorter maturities up until recently was quoted on a flat 6 3-4 per cent basis. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were slightly reactionary. Demand sterling ruled around $4.85 9-16 and French francs around 3.87 cents. Norwegian kroner were off 3 points to 21.30 cents, and Swiss francs a bit forty points to 19.30 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 1—(AP)—The bond market today shared in the general depression which marked trading in securities and commodities. Activity was restricted by the diversion of speculative interest to the drastic decline in the stock market and the accentuated firmness of money rates. Trading also was affected from the counter-demand for funds for March tax payments and other purposes.

The most notable exception to the downward trend lay in the strength of the third liberty 4 1-4 bonds, which were aided by the announcement that the treasury would buy up $100,000,000 worth for sinking fund purposes on the lowest tenders received by March 10. Other liberty issues moved up in sympathy, some of them now touching the old 4 1-4s into new high ground for the year.

Reactionary tendencies prevailed in all groups of corporation bonds, railroad issues were freely pressed for sale, with moderate recession taking place in Atchison, Chesapeake and Ohio, Central New England, St. Paul, Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago and Eastern Illinois,

START COW TESTING ASSOCIATION WITH 25 MEMBERS IN THIS COUNTY

The New London County Cow Testing association held a meeting recently at which 30 interested men were present. This was a meeting called to hear a report of the committee appointed at a previous meeting to form a plan of procedure. At this meeting it was announced that William L. Spencer had been employed as tester for the association. Mr. Spencer has had a very wide experience in cow testing work and the association was fortunate in employing Mr. Spencer. He run a cow testing association of 30 members in New Jersey for two years. He also is familiar with the advanced registry work conducted by the Storrs Agricultural Experimental station, being employed with them for one year.

At the meeting there were 21 farmer dairymen who contracted to go into the association and since there have been four, making a total of 25 which is as many as the tester will handle in any one month. Mr. Spencer will visit each farm once per month, taking samples of milk night and morning and computing the amount of butter fat per cow and per herd so that at the end of the year the dairymen will have the production of the cow and of the herd.

The tester also computes the amount of feed consumed by the cow and figures the returns above feed cost per cow. The officers elected by the association are as follows:

President, George G. Grant, Taftville; vice president, Thomas W. Wood, Waterford. The directors are: E. W. Brown, Old Mystic and J. E. Lathrop, Montville. The herd of Thomas H. Wood of Waterford is the first one to be tested.

The members of the association are as follows: H. MacKenzie, Waterford; Thomas Wood, Waterford; G. Peabody, Waterford; E. W. Brown, Groton; C. B. York, Stonington; Fairy Lake Farms, Salem; F. B. Ames, Salem; J. E. Lathrop, Montville; G. G. Grant, Taftville; Will Lathrop, Norwich; A. D. Barrett, Ledyard; Charles Armstrong, Griswold; J. B. SIN WAS PREACHER'S THEME FOR LENTEN SERMON

Thou hast broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands; and thou saidst: I will not serve. Jeremiah, second chapter and 20th verse, was the text selected by Rev. Matthew Brady, spiritual director and professor of St. Thomas' Seminary, Hartford, for his Lenten sermon at St. Patrick's church Sunday evening. In illustrating his text Rev. Father Brady told of the scribes and pharisees questioning Jesus concerning a man who received sinners and had eaten with them, particularly mentioning our Lord's answer to them, the parable of the prodigal son.

The story of the prodigal son, said Rev. Father Brady, is one most often referred to to illustrate the danger of sin, for the departure of the younger son after having received his portion is like to the sinner leaving Almighty God through sin. We know of the dangers which befell the prodigal son and we know the consequences of sin and because of this we detest it.

When the prodigal son left home he enjoyed life to the utmost for a short time and so it is with the soul, but gradually it sinks down, all fountains of life do not dry up at once, but later it awakens to find that truth and virtue have been lost. There may be no outward sign that this soul is suffering, worldly wealth may come, bodily health may be enjoyed, but that soul knows the hunger of the heart and mortification. Just as the prodigal son rejected those husks because he refused to return to the open fields and refused those temptations to return to God's service, by degrees the soul gradually loses its devotion to its master. It has become slave, just as every soul is a slave to sin. It goes down to the level of the swine. It becomes fed by former sins. It loses its freedom and liberty for the service of sin and finally has to feed on the husks which the demons and sins set before it.

The father must choose between the lowest pleasures or serving God who he chooses for me. What is best for him, for his happiness and welfare. Should God say, I have given you life, intelligence, I free with the price, the blood of my divine Son for the redemption of your sins, for which of these things do you despise Me?

All religions portray the danger of sin, yet some would do away with confession. Then for all eternity God offers us love and all are noted from taking fear or love.

We should be moved by one of these two things, either love or fear. Love of God or fear of eternal punishment. Choose one or both but never allow sin to find a dwelling place in your heart for by not doing so you incur only that peace of God which passeth all understanding, the preacher continued.

The Rosarian music of ... with its Lenten variations was repeated at the ... with the same soloists and ... Tom Lafontaine Peart, with its ... and rythmic ... was sung with telling effect. The whole performance was a finished work and the choir is to be congratulated upon a thoroughly musical interpretation of the service. Next Communion Sunday by Frederick W. Sumner, of Salisbury by Frank R. Murdy were ... two we," rendered solos of the ... Reflection. The following soloists did effective singing during the evening: Mrs. Bernard Chase, Mrs. Edward Mowbray, Miss Cynthia Bartlebaugh, Walter Lafontaine and William Lamson.

A feature of the service was ... male chorus of 15 voices singing the 103rd Psalms.

RELIGIOUS SERVICE WAS HELD AT LOCAL JAIL

The regular religious service held every two weeks at the local jail was conducted Sunday by Y. M. C. A. representatives. Hugh Kinder furnished piano music for the hymns and also rendered vocal solos which were greatly enjoyed by the prisoners. Edmund A. Prentice read the scripture and offered prayer. Edwin Hill, the "Y" secretary gave the address of the morning, taking for the foundation of his talk the story of the prodigal son, which was told in modern language in order to make it real to the men. The speaker pictured the home, consisting of father and mother and two boys. The home was evidently a most happy home and all went well, until the first great sorrow visited it and there was for the first time a vacant chair; it was an awful vacancy for the mother had been claimed by death. 'Tis said that no words are sweeter than "home and mother", and the mother, if she is the right kind usually contributes the larger share of love to the home life, and when she is taken there is a sad void in the home life. After mother went away the home was not the same again, and to the younger boy home was very lonesome evidently; he could not stand it, and after a while he decided to leave home and shift for himself. It is a very serious moment when a boy decides to leave home for the first time. Many sons have left home before mother died and while they realized that mother has left for heaven, wondering where the boy was. This boy by going away from the home, especially for the father and mother, though he evidently had little concern of his boys, yet his great mother heart was made sad when the boy left. Well such have had a part in crucifying your Saviour which you have seen and did the things that you should not have done and broke up your home. The boy in the story found himself far away from home, lonely, and when short, color of having plenty of money, he went out to seek companionship, he found it but it was the wrong sort; the friends he made were worthless, easy going to him, so long as he had money and these chums supplied him as usual. He lost his innocence, all he had lost something more valuable by far than money, he had lost his manhood, his character, the purity that had been taught him by his sainted mother. Here he was, lonely, no money, ragged and homeless, and the sad thing about it was that there was no need of his being in that condition. The saddest thing about your being here is that there was the means to do all. Sin brought you here and you need not have stayed.

Finally the boy, being flat down, and out, began to think and this was the wisest thing he had done since he had left his home. His thoughts ran back to a reformatory where he was taught and the home he had left, and he wisely decided to go back home. He went and would know the warm welcome he received from the mother, as Heavenly Father will welcome you home if you will only seek Him and come back to Him.

Pictures and Reader at Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. large gymnasium was well filled on Sunday afternoon when Miss Pauline Magner of New York read in a very impressive manner the story by Ida Tarbell, "He Knew Lincoln" and "The Man Who Obeyed God", two very appropriate selections for Sunday afternoon. A reel of Burton Holmes travelogue and a two reel feature on "Hope" were shown and proved of real interest and inspiration. The latter picture portrayed a fisherman's daughter, who though she had many disappointments and heartaches, manifested hope through it all and finally was rewarded by the realization of her hope. The opening exercises consisted of a hymn, scripture reading by Secretary Hill, prayer by E. A. Prentice and a vocal solo by Hugh Kinder.

INCOME TAX FORMS MAILED TO THOUSANDS

Forty sacks of mail, representing 25,000 letters were taken from the internal revenue office at Hartford at closing time Friday, a few hours after the office had been officially notified to send out copies of individual income tax return, form 1040, to those in the state whose incomes during 1925 were large enough to warrant their filing returns.

Major Fred L. Appleton, chief office deputy, said he was informed by telegram that the forms should be mailed out. In order that those filing may have as much time as possible to do so, he said, the work of putting them in the mails was started at once and continued without pause during the remainder of the day. By noon the entire 40,000 forms which the office sent out to Connecticut residents was started on their way.

He stressed the importance of making early returns, calling attention to the fact that March 15 is the last day on which returns may be made.

Major Appleton said that although form 1040A was mailed out some time ago, returns have been coming in extremely slowly. He said that 100,000 of these blanks were mailed out, and urged that those who have not done so, send them in at once by mail, rather than coming to the local or branch office.

According to the revenue act of 1926, just passed, form 1040 must be filled out by every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen thereof, whose gross income for the calendar year 1925 amounted to $5,000, or whose net income amounted to $1,500 if single or if married and not living with husband or wife; $3,500 if married and living with husband or wife; or regardless of amount if the net income exceeds the personal exemption and credit for dependents.

SUIT OVER NOTES WAS SETTLED BEFORE TRIAL

When the case of Herman Fisher of Hartford against Nick Sotirhas of Norwich came up in the court of common pleas in this city Monday morning before Judge Charles B. Waller, attorneys in the matter announced that it had been settled out of court.

The plaintiff sued to recover $600 damages, alleging that the defendant endorsed a series of notes amounting to $450 due and payable to the plaintiff on Dec. 1, 1925. He claimed that when the notes were presented for payment they were not paid, due to insufficient funds on the part of the defendant. The court then adjourned until Saturday in New London.

Edward C. Kundle, D. D., of New York city, who filled the pulpit in the absence of the pastor who preached at the Northfield schools Sunday.

The selections by the girls chorus were: Send Out Thy Light, Gounod Lynes; Hark! Hark, My Soul, Baines

Rev. Dr. Kundie spoke upon The Psychology of Pentecost making his sermon an answer to the question as to what was the state of mind of that group of early Christians upon whom the power of the Lord came in such a remarkable manner. He declared that this Biblical record is a challenge to the church today and that such an outpouring of God's power is not at all beyond the possibility of realization today.

There were four elements in the psychology of pentecost and we may have a pentecost today if we are ready to meet the conditions. In the first place these early Christians were in the pathway of obedience, a primary condition to enter the pathway of power. Secondly, they were expecting something to happen, they believed something was going to happen, but we today are a doubting people. Thirdly, they were a united people, and lastly there was the element of concentration. Today we don't know how to concentrate spiritually upon the problems of life. These four elements mentioned are the four great spiritual essentials to pentecostal power.

SUPPLYING NUT COAL FOR BROADER USES

The state department of agriculture, cooperating with the state coal merchants committee appointed by the governor, has secured a quantity of nut coal which it is hoped will be sufficient to supply the poultrymen who are running brooders until such time as shipments may be received from the mine.

This coal will be distributed by dealers in Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, New Britain, New London and Norwich. In order to procure this coal it will be necessary to secure a written order from this department which will be issued for 500 lb. lots upon receipt of the information indicated on the enclosed application.

Notice of this is being sent to those on a mailing list furnished by the extension poultryman of the Connecticut Agricultural college and approved by the Connecticut Poultry association. Should there be others who need coal for brooder purposes, they may communicate with the state department.

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. James R. Aldrich, preached from I Samuel 15-22. And Samuel said: Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

The Sunday evening preaching services at this church, have been discontinued for an indefinite period, owing to the contest being conducted under the auspices of the Young Peoples Christian Endeavor society, Mrs. Richard Carter, president, in charge. The two teams which are in close competition consume so much extra time during the weekly Sunday evening service, it was decided to combine the evening preaching service with the C. E. meeting. Edward Howe was in charge of the service Sunday evening when the topic was, "Neglected Areas In the Country," Isaiah 35:1-8 (missionary meeting). It is not expected that there will be any more regular preaching services at this church Sunday evenings until after the spring conference.

"Unseen Forces of the Kingdom," was the sermon theme at the First Congregational church Sunday morning. The pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, chose for his text Matthew 13-33. Another parable spake he unto them; the kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

During the service, Rev. Mr. Bailey read a letter from Mrs. Ruth Avery-French, of West Pottsdam, N. Y., requesting that she be dismissed from the membership of this church. A letter of dismissal was granted her to the West Pottsdam Methodist church of which her husband, Rev. Hollis French, is pastor.

Mrs. French is the eldest daughter of Senior Deacon Dwight W. Avery and Mrs. Avery, and during her membership at this church, while residing at home, was an active worker, especially in the Young People's Christian Endeavor society. Rev. Mr. French was also formerly of Norwich Town, during which time his father, Rev. Myron E. French, was pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

Congregational Young Peoples Christian Endeavor society was conducted by Mrs. Burton Johnson and Miss Jessie E. Hyde. The topic used was Perseverance In Christ. This was a consecration meeting, Scripture references were Acts 1:7-11; Hebrews 12:1-4.

"Christ the Way of Life and Light", John 8:12, with special reference to the twelfth chapter and the twentieth verse, is to be the theme of the Congregational mid-week service for conference and prayer, at the parsonage on Elm avenue, Thursday evening.

By invitation of Mrs. Charles E. Reeves, a group of members assembles each Monday afternoon through Lent, at her home, 19 Scotland road, for a religious service, during which Rev. Mr. Reeves is conducting a series of Lenten readings.

The postponed meeting of the First Congregational Home Missionary society, is to be held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Dwight L. Underwood, at Peeks corner.

There will be Lenten devotions at the Sacred Heart church, Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

First Friday devotions, also Stations of the Cross, will take place at this church, Friday evening at 7:30. Mass that morning will be at 7 o'clock.

FRENCH DEPUTIES RATIFY LOCARNO SECURITY PACT

Voted Last Night 413 to 71 After an Uproarious Session—Many Deputies Who Criticized the Treaty Voted For It Because They Considered That It Was the First Step Toward the Tranquillization of Europe.

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—The Locarno security pact was ratified by the chamber of deputies this evening after an uproarious session by a vote of 413 to 71. In the course of the debate the Alsatian communist Deputy Hiller aroused the indignation of the entire assembly by shouting in the course of his discourse: "Alsace is not at war with France."

Many deputies who criticized the pact said they would vote for it because they considered it, with all its imperfections it was necessary to approve it as the first step toward the tranquillization of Europe. A number of others abstained from voting.

Premier Briand in a final reply to critics declared: "It is for France, after the war, to take the least step that may complete all rancor and bring about complete reconciliation with the peoples. France is strong enough to invite other peoples to make the same giving proof of herself profoundly pacific.

"Europe has by the Locarno pact the assurance that she will do everything to avoid the ravages of war.

"I ask the house to adjourn during the course of the debate to go on record in favor of enlargement of the League of Nations with the permanent seat for Poland.

"I would favor it," he said, "even if we were called on to decide the question from the German standpoint, because there are many questions between Germany and Poland certain to come before the council.

"The spirit of Locarno means that the nations must be considered in a conciliatory manner; the presence of Poland in the council when they are discussed, therefore, is as necessary for Germany as for Poland."

M. Briand's final words to those who thought what war would be with the new discoveries in science; is it not for us to say to our old traditional enemy—'Did not the last one prove to you that war must be done away with?'"

FRENCH SOLONS NEARING FINANCIAL COMPROMISE

PARIS, March 2.—(AP)—The radical-socialist coalition deputies in the chamber are resigning themselves with difficulty to the adoption of the senate amendments to the chamber finance bills, though the general opinion in the lobbies is that the bills will pass practically as sent back from the upper house.

The greatest resistance is to the stamp tax on business transactions, applicable to wholesalers and jobbers, at the rate of 1.3 per cent. The chamber finance committee rejected this measure, then in the face of the firm stand taken in its favor by M. Doumer, the finance minister, asked that the rate be reduced to one-half of one per cent.

The decisive test between the radical-socialists and the government will come on this point when the finance committee's report is up for consideration tomorrow. The committee will ask the chamber to reject in the bills the provisions rejected by the senate requiring a declaration of revenue made under oath.

"With these exceptions the bills as adopted by the senate have been approved by the finance committe with only minor changes. The debate in the lower house is expected to be short, as Premier Briand is leaving at the end of the week for Geneva, and M. Doumer is proceeding on Monday to London to talk about the Franco-British debt settlement. It is likely that a vote will be reached by Saturday.

PAPERS DRAWN FOR THE HUMMEL WILL CONTEST

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Attorney Henry B. Hummel, bakery tycoon of Portland, Maine, today drew up the necessary papers for probating the will of the late Abe Hummel, widely known lawyer, who died recently in London, leaving a $1,000,000 estate to two sisters and a brother.

They planned to file Hummel's appearance in the case Thursday, it was said. The papers were to have been filed today, marking the first step in the legal battle, but a change necessitated a one-day delay.

Mrs. Hummel, made a public announcement as far back as 1909, 16 years before the lawyer's death in London, that Hummel was his father, the story said. The statement was made in January, that year on the occasion of Virginia Hummel's marriage to Charles Ezra Page at Portsmouth, N. H., and was published in the newspapers at the time.

Whether the denial in the case may be considered "technical" which the attorney described himself in the statement Hummel's attorneys will assert that he is the natural son of Hummel by a marriage, either legal or common law, to Lydia Farrel of Portland, Me.

Whether the case of a mysterious Miss Hummel, an actress known as Irene Young Hummel's sister-in-law, who made a deposition in which the "mystery" could be solved at the proceedings held by Surrogate Hoyt, also made an affidavit from Abe Hummel's niece from a nurse who claimed Henry D. Hummel as a child from a mulatto who appealed to Miss Farrel as Mrs. Hummel asking for the accounts of Abe Hummel.

FAVORABLE ACTION ON ITALIAN DEBT EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—Early favorable action by the senate on the British debt agreement was predicted today by Chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee, coincident with the beginning by Secretary Mellon and representatives of the part would be made for a settlement with Great Britain in the near future.

Smoot agreed and the five days for finishing settlements begun during the congressional recess by the commission has been railroaded through the house, but considerable opposition from the democratic ranks has developed in the senate.

In a letter to President Coolidge, made public today, Secretary Mellon stated that if the senate now refuses to ratify the Italian settlement, the action would be attributed as political and not fiscal considerations.

The only practical effect on Italy of failure to approve the debt settlement, the secretary said, "would be that Italy would be relieved, for the present at any rate, of any payment, and no settlement more favorable to the United States would likely be made in the future. I feel that a failure to approve the Italian settlement would create doubtful the possibility of an early settlement with France."

SUSPECTED GLEE CLUB GIRLS WERE RUM RUNNERS

PORT ANGELES, Wash., March 2—(AP)—Thirty-three co-eds, making up the Washington State College Glee club, while coming here by boat yesterday from Everett, were overhauled as suspected rum runners by a coast guard cutter in the strait of Juan De Fuca.

The tug carrying the girls was signalled to stop. Coast guards boarded the boat, searched several traveling bags and allowed them to go their way.

APPEAL FOR RELIEF FOR SUFFERERS IN NEWPORT, ARK.

NEWPORT, Ark., March 2—(AP)—Mayor Boyce and the citizens relief committee today issued a formal appeal for funds to aid sufferers in yesterday's fire and telegraphed the Red Cross at St. Louis to send a staff of trained relief workers to Newport.

GRANTED DIVORCE FROM REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT

DETROIT, March 2—(AP)—The uncontested suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Edna James Scott against Frank D. Scott, congressman from the Eleventh Michigan district, was concluded here today when Judge DeWitt H. Merriam in circuit court, granted the decree.

Mrs. Scott requested permanent alimony in her bill, but a property settlement was effected in her thereof. The consideration was not made public although Ward H. Peck, attorney for the plaintiff, said the settlement was "more than three times what she was almost forced to accept a year ago."

The quiet movement of today's action wasin marked contrast to the 55th exclusive of personalities and charges which featured the previous action. Representative Scott filed suit for divorce in 1924, and the hearing was begun in December. He charged his wife with misconduct, naming a captain in the air force a Washington hotel clerk and an automobile salesman to substantiate his accusations.

In a cross-bill, Mrs. Scott accused her husband of general misconduct and of gambling for high stakes. Her attacks named approximately 30 persons prominent in national, political and social circles.

The case was postponed until August, 1925, to permit taking of depositions from Washington witnesses, several of which Mrs. Scott introduced to disprove misconduct charges.

Judge Frank Emerick of Alpena, before whom the suit and cross-bill were heard, denied both pleas.

The Scotts were married in Santa Rosa, Calif., in 1914, and Mrs. Scott declared she was abandoned in December, 1924. There are no children.

RETURN OF MISSING SHELL-SHOCKED WORLD WAR VET

WELLESLEY, Mass., March 2—(AP)—Raymond W. Boddoin, shell-shocked World war veteran, for whose safety fears had been expressed since he vanished on February 19, returned today. He was welcomed by his wife and children who had despaired of seeing him again. His absence when he did not attempt to explain, was attributed to a condition brought about by his war injuries.

Bowdoin left for Boston, February 19, in his automobile, later the car was found in a garage. No one called for the machine. When Mrs. Bowdoin received his gold watch, mailed by him in Boston, she feared that he had become despondent and contemplated suicide. The police had broadcast his description.

$60,000 TO $70,000 FIRE DAMAGE TO THE HARTFORD CLUB

HARTFORD, March 2—(AP)—The interior of the Hartford club, was ruined by fire early this afternoon, starting from a defective flue in the club kitchen and working its way from cellar to roof between partitions. Firemen fought the blaze for an hour and a half. Damage is estimated by Merritt A. Alfred, club treasurer, at from $60,000 to $70,000. The heaviest fire damage was done on the second and third floors with severe water damage on the first floor. It is planned to start serving meals to club members tomorrow in the ball room annex on the rear of the club which is undamaged.

MAN FOUND IN COMA IN N. Y. MAY BE FROM PROVIDENCE

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—A man registered at the Hotel McAlpin "Edward Rogers, Syracuse, N. Y." was found in his room in a coma today. Evidence indicated he was Edward Radding, wealthy resident of Providence, R. I., and Springfield, Mass. A white powder taken from the room was sent to a hospital for analysis to determine whether it was poison.

The man was revived by the staff physician of the hotel and the police were not notified.

Two men, believed by officials of the hotel to be the man's brothers, found him unconscious when they reached the hotel in answer to a letter which they had received from him. These two men refused to discuss the case.

ANGORA, Turkey, March 2.—(AP)—The national assembly has adopted a new penal code based on the Italian system. This replaces the old code based on the Code Napoleon, which Turkey adopted eight years ago. The opposition's amendment in favor of abolition of the death penalty was rejected. Turkey recently adopted the Swiss civil code.

MAN FOUND IN COMA IN NEW YORK HOTEL PROVIDENCE FUGITIVE

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Edward Radding of Providence, R. I., who was found in a coma in his room in the Hotel McAlpin today, was arrested on a charge of being a fugitive from justice and held or Providence police who said he is under $60,000 bail on a charge of forgery there.

Radding had registered at the hotel as "Edward Rogers of Syracuse, N. Y." He was found today in a comatose condition, lying beside a vial containing a white powder.

Upon being identified, through Bertillon records, Radding was taken to the prison ward at Bellevue hospital, where physicians said he will recover.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 2—(AP)—Police Inspector Charles R. Egan left here tonight for New York to attempt to identify the man found in a New York hotel room in a coma as Edward Radding, missing real estate promoter who is out on $60,000 bail on two note forgery charges and who has been sought for a week on a warrant charging a third forgery. Providence police believe the man is Radding and have asked the New York police to detain him.

Mrs. Radding is also convinced that the man mentioned in New York dispatches is her husband.

Radding's attorney said tonight that Radding had threatened to kill himself Washington's birthday when advised to surrender, but had later agreed to give himself up. He disappeared the next morning.

ASKS COOLIDGE PROSECUTE THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—Action against the editor of the Washington Post for publication of George Washington's beer recipe in this morning's issue was demanded of President Coolidge today by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas. Publication of the recipe, the Texas representative charged to the floor of the house, constituted a violation of the prohibition law.

"Where is a concerted effort," he said, "on the part of individuals in this government, just now to break down the law, and the challenge is to the president. What is he going to do about it?"

Mr. Blanton said the law provided a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for publication of receipts for alcoholic liquors, adding:

"Time is the law of all land. The burden is upon the president as the chief executive of this nation to enforce the law. And yet in the nation's capital, one finds this morning in the administration's mouthpiece, Washington Post, which is known far and wide as the administration paper—we find a violation of that very law."

If the president "is the man that this nation has given him the credit of being," Mr. Blanton continued, he will, notwithstanding that the editor "is his personal friend," give orders "to see to it that this editor and every other editor who violates this law shall be prosecuted, the same as any other criminal in the land."

ARE TO PRESENT THEIR VIEWS ON FARM RELIEF

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—Delegates from eleven middle-western states, acting under instructions from the recent Des Moines Agricultural conference, will present their views on farm relief to the president and the secretary of agriculture tomorrow.

They have been alloted one hour of the president's time, beginning at 10.30 and immediately after the conference at the white house, they will meet with Secretary Jardine at his office.

Leaders of the farm delegates, who include Governor Hammill of Iowa and Governor Gunderson of South Dakota, will tell the president and Secretary Jardine that while they are not insistent of any particular form of farm relief, they are united in their belief that justice and sound economic policy require that the farmers shall have their economic status raised to the level of other economic groups.

SNOWDRIFTS FIGURED IN A COMPENSATION AWARD

HARTFORD, March 2—(AP)—High snowdrifts in the country in Simsbury through which horses drawing a sleigh loaded with wood could not make their way unaided, figured in a compensation award approved today by Commissioner Leo J. Noonan, of this district. The award, a payment of $71.48, every four weeks for 312 weeks to Mrs. Lizzie Kirkey, widow of Henry Kirkey, is made in a finding which sets forth that the man, employed as a caretaker at the Simsbury place of Frank P. Furlong, of this city, died February 15 as the result of a heart attack brought on by over-exertion in his efforts to shovel a path through the drifts for the team which he was driving. The Aetna Insurance company, which had insured Mr. Furlong's employes, did not protest the award.

Former comrades from the East Side, New York applauded in the Aeolian hall audience that heard the debut piano recital of Sergei Barsukoff, one-time bottle-washer and night watchman.

Strikers at Passaic Dispersed By Firemen

About 3,000 Millhands Fled When Streams of Water Were Directed at [illegible]—Police Were [illegible]

PASSAIC, March 2—(AP)—Five companies [illegible] with lines of hose dispersed [illegible] 3,000 striking millhands [illegible] gathered today in front of the Botany Worsted mills. Tear bombs also were used by the police.

The crowds broke up immediately after the streams of water were directed at them by the firemen but it required about 15 minutes to drive them over the Passaic-Clifton line. Two arrests were made.

DECISION AGAINST THE NICKEL PLATE MERGER

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP)—By a vote of 7 to 1, the interstate commerce commission today rejected the vast Nickel Plate railroad merger project, but left the way open for its promotor to revise their plans for financing such a transportation system.

The application of the Van Sweringen's interests to link up the five railroad units involved in the merger was denied chiefly because of objections relating to the financial aspect of the plan. The transportation phase was generally approved but the considerations, terms and conditions of the suggested acquisition were held to be not in the public interest.

The merger would have linked up the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad company or the new Nickel Plate, with the Chesapeake & Ohio, Hocking Valley, Erie and Pere Marquette railroads in a system having more than 9,000 miles of line in ten states and Canada, with a property value of more than a billion dollars.

What effect the commission's decision will have on other mergers remaining to be seen, inasmuch as congress has yet to pass upon a definite consolidation policy. Several other roads, however, have been awaiting the Nickel Plate decision before formally applying for authority to consolidate, among these being the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and the St. Louis-San Francisco railroads.

In its sweeping denial, the commission today, necessarily, disapproved the Van Sweringen's application to issue securities and to construct a new line 65 miles long from Valley Crossing to Gregg, Ohio. In the latter instance, however, the disapproval was "without prejudice" to resubmission by the Chesapeake & Ohio, since its clear rights now held by that road between these points over the Norfolk and Western will expire in September, 1927, and will not be renewed.

Minority commissioners in two of the three units of the proposed merger who had attacked the acquisition plan on the ground that they were not to receive a fair share of the stock in the new corporation, were upheld to a degree by the majority decision.

ROOSEVELTS ARE HOME FROM THEIR HUNTING TRIP

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP)—After securing specimens of some of the rarest game known to sportsmen during an 11 months' hunting trip in the wilds of India, China and Russia, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, and his brother Kermit arrived tonight on the Berengaria with their wives and Kermit's children. With their arrival it became known for the first time that the expedition had almost cost Colonel Roosevelt his life.

It was learned that in crossing the Himalayan mountains over the Karakoram pass, Colonel Roosevelt was caught in a snow slide and carried down a steep mountain side. By coolness of mind and agility of movement, however, he ended his descent on top of the slide instead of under it.

Colonel Roosevelt's first words on landing tonight were that he felt "fit for a fight or a frolic" and didn't know which it would be until he had had a chance to survey the political situation.

Inclined in the game bagged by the Roosevelt party, all of which is to go to the Field museum of Chicago, was the much heralded ovis poli, the huge wild sheep of the Russian and Chinese pamir. The hunters' wives returned with a tiger a piece to their credit, having shot the animals from the backs of elephants after joining their husbands in India. They did not accompany the party during its earlier and more perilous stages.

YALE FRESHMEN ON RAMPAGE LAST NIGHT

NEW HAVEN, March 2.—(AP)—The spring fever touched members of the freshman class at Yale tonight and before the evening was over a riot which outclassed its predecessors both in vigor and in the damage that it did had been staged.

The disturbance which resulted in a police emergency call bringing nearly 150 officers to the university started in the freshman commons during supper. The occasion precipitating the melee was the removal from the dining hall of the orchestra that has been playing there throughout the season.

Before transferring their activities to the Berkeley oval where bonfires were kindled and burning matter and water thrown from the windows, all of the tables in the dining hall were overturned and most of the china and glassware shattered. The bonfires, the students argued, called for fire apparatus and an alarm was turned in. This brought the rest of the college, then the firemen, and later the police.

Last springs early celebration on the part of the students resulted in the dismantlement of a professor. This year, a policeman, who attempted to shake a student, was the object of a concentrated attack. He was rescued, however, without sustaining any damage.

Further Deflation In Prices of Stocks

Scores of Issues Broke From 5 to 40 Points—Last Hour Sales Exceeded 1,400,000 Shares.

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—A tidal wave of selling orders swept over the New York securities markets late today and carried scores of issues down 5 to 40 points in the severest break that the New York Stock Exchange has encountered since the deflationary movement of 1920-21. The full force of the impact of selling did not strike the market until the last hour, during which total sales exceeded 1,400,000 shares, a new high record, bringing the day's total to 3,015,700, as against the record breaking total of 3,340,600 shares last November 10.

The fact that the announcement of the interstate commerce commission's rejection of the proposed "Nickel Plate" merger came within an hour after the market closed, and that the rails were hit harder today than they have been at any time in the four successive days of rapidly declining prices, started discussions in the financial district tonight as to whether there had been a "leak" on the commission's action. The decision took Wall street generally by surprise as rumors had been current for several days that the Van Sweringen's plan would be approved, with possible modifications.

A canvass of the leading banks tonight failed to disclose any concerted action toward supporting the market at tomorrow's opening, although individual banks and investment concerns inveriably place orders "under the market" following a break as extensive as that which occurred today. Some bankers, while declining to be quoted, expressed the opinion that stock exchange firms were fully capable of dealing with the situation without outside help, and they are not disposed to interfere unless called upon.

The official stock exchange ticker did not record the last quotation until 24 minutes after the market had closed on the longest delay on record. The previous record was a 42 minute delay at the end of the half holiday session on January 3, 1925.

Thousands of customers, congregated in board rooms of the large brokerage houses, were thrown into consternation when word was flashed around that the ticker was "way behind" the market and that actual quotations were many points below those appearing on the tape. Nelson Motors, for instance, was selling at 108 on the floor of the exchange when the ticker was pounding out the quotation at 118 3-4. So violent was the decline and so great the ticker delay that it was impossible for customers' men to take market orders with any degree of assurance as to what prices could be obtained for them.

On the floor of the exchange the scene was one of seething tumult with wildly speculating brokers shrieking their orders, messenger boys rushing from post to post and telephone clerks barking out confirmations of orders and quotations to their offices in scores of telephone booths scattered around the room. Meanwhile, partners of brokerage houses throughout the financial district were quickly surveying the situation, and calling for reports on the accounts of customers and speculative cliques known to be carrying large blocks of the stocks which were bearing the brunt of the attack.

Skyscrapers of Lower Manhattan gleamed with a million lights tonight as brokerage house and bank employes struggled to bring books up to date, and to clear the unusually heavy volume of the day's transactions. Downtown restaurants in many cases, were filled to overflowing, midnight scores of firms sent out for the meals of their clerks in order to save as much time as possible. Arrangements also were made with a number of Manhattan and Brooklyn hotels to provide rooms for employes who live in the suburbs and would be compelled to work into the late hours of the night.

Lengthy private telegrams, describing the market's action and the situation of the various houses, were sent tonight to Palm Beach, Miami and other southern resorts, where the heads of many of the large firms are spending their winter vacations. In some cases, the recall of partners was requested, and in others special arrangements are reported to have been made in order to assue prompt telephone and telegraph service.

WOLF OF LASALLE STREET DIED IN PENITENTIARY

ATLANTA, Ga., March 2—(AP)—The career of John W. Worthington, of Chicago, know as the "wolf of La Salle street" ended at the Atlanta penitentiary here today when a stroke of paralysis proved fatal.

The body rests tonight in the prison morgue to remain until word is received from the daughters of Worthington regarding funeral arrangements.

Wortnington was brought to the penitentiary last October to serve two years for using the mails to defraud. At that time he was suffering from dropsy, diabetes and the effects of a former paralytic stroke. During his imprisonment he was in the hospital.

Convicted almost three years ago in Chicago, Worthington fled to Mexico. His condition then was serious and the Mexican climate aggravated the diseases from which he was suffering.

Six months ago he surrendered. His attorneys attempted to obtain a stay of punishment, even appealing to Attorney General Sargent, but their efforts proved fruitless.

Worthington's condition was the basis of the pleas.

"I would rather be in prison in the United States than be free in Mexico," he stated when he surrendered in Chicago.

His criminal career is said to have netted him $2,500,000. At one time he was reported to have been president of 27 Alabama banks and he also was said to have been an alderman of Birmingham. A lucky $5 bet he made at a horse race is given as the basis of his fortune.

PARLEY WITH MEXICO NOW PRONOUNCED SATISFACTORY

Differences Between the Two Governments Over New Land and Petroleum Laws Are Nearing Adjustment—President Coolidge is of the Opinion That Confessatory Features at the Two Laws Do Not Warrant Apprehension.

WASHINGTON, March 3—(AP)—The prolonged controversy between the Washington and Mexico City governments over enactment of the new land and petroleum laws by Mexico, said to affect American interests in that country adversely, appeared tonight to be close to a final and mutually satisfactory adjustment.

President Coolidge was represented as believing that the retroactive and confiscatory features of the two laws, as generally understood by the public, did not appear at this time to warrant serious apprehension. On the contrary, he felt that the differences between the two governments would be satisfactorily composed.

After a conference with Secretary Kellogg, the state department interpreted the day, Manuel C. Tellez, the Mexican ambassador expressed confidence that the controversy would be ended in a short time.

"I have had a most pleasant conference with the secretary this afternoon, the ambassador said. "I am confident that it will be a matter of a short time before the question will be brought to a mutually satisfactory close and that there is nothing to suggest a difference of misunderstanding or conflict."

At the same time Secretary Kellogg announced that he had given a copy of his reply to the latest Mexican note and it would be telegraphed by Ambassador Tellez to his government. A statement issued by the state department said:

"The secretary of state announced that he had today delivered to the Mexican ambassador a copy of a note addressed to the minister for foreign affairs in Mexico City in reply to the last note of the minister for foreign affairs, dated Feb. 12, 1926.

"It was generally agreed between the secretary of state and the Mexican ambassador that the written memorandums, aides-memoire and notes between the two governments will be published simultaneously in Mexico City and in Washington. The Mexican ambassador will telegraph to his government the last note and as soon as he has received the pictures, the date of publication will be arranged."

BIMBA FOUND GUILTY OF SEDITION, NOT BLASPHEMY

BROCKTON, Mass., March 2.—(AP)—An ardent Massachusetts stature could not hold Anthony Bimba since he expressed only a personal disbelief in God, Judge C. Carroll King said in ending a Lithuanian editor not guilty of blaspheming here today. Bimba, however, fell afoul of a portion of the war time sedition law when he circulated the hait of speakers at the meeting he addressed on January 26 and Judge King fined him $100.

Attorney Harry Hofmann, for Pomerantz, appealed the case and in case having the alleged communist was free to await the sitting of the superior court which probably will convene in June in this city.

With his wife, who had been with him constantly during the trial and who assisted the defense with her stenographic reports, Bimba left for Boston soon after the court's decision was announced. Tonight he is returning to Brooklyn, where, according to his attorney he intends to refinish and pursue his editorial work with the Lithuanian language paper "Freedom." His New England tour of speeches, on which the charges were based and which was opposed in many cities is over.

Judge King in pronouncing sentence made it clear that he considered it no serious offense which the young speaker had committed and that he took into account the fact that his criminal utterances were forced out of him, rather than the deliberate assertions that the prosecution had attempted to show. The court also was critical of the attitude of many of the government's witnesses and said some of them had apparently determined to get Bimba before he spoke.

NO SENATE PROBE OF OUTLAWRY IN CHICAGO

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP)—Chicago must keep its own house in order, the senate immigration committee decided today in voting unanimously against a senate investigation of outlawry in that city.

Such an inquiry was proposed in a message from the Better Government association of Chicago and Cook county. The committee refused not only to entertain the petition, but also to propose one of its members or a subcommittee to ask prohibition enforcement and investigation agencies of the federal government.

Senator Shortridge, republican, California, in charge of the immigration bill, said the committee should be interested in the question only if it were a matter of the opinion that "Chicago was in rebellion against the government of the United States."

Senator Copeland, republican, New York, suggested that the petition be referred to the immigration bureau.

"I am opposed to passing the buck on this matter," interrupted Chairman Johnson. "Either we should act or we should not."

The case dates back to the evening of December 4, last, when a car operated by McKean, who was then driving along Columbia avenue on his way home from Northampton, Mass., struck Miss Meda Gilbert, a resident of the avenue, as the girl was walking along the side of the road. Miss Gilbert was confined at St. Joseph's hospital for several days for injuries to her leg and body. McKeon said that he was driving carefully at the time but the fog had collected on the windshield and he did not see the girl in time to avoid the accident. The case was first called for December 19 and continued because of McKeon's illness. On February 5 and 13 further postponements were allowed due to the severe traveling conditions caused by the heavy snow storms.

Unknown to many is the fact that Willimantic has an unemployment situation which is proving quite serious in some instances. The town of Windham is doing much at present toward supporting several needy families in providing, food, fuel, and clothing. One case was brought to attention Tuesday in which a man had been out of work for eight months, and, after tramping through the state in an unsuccessful search for work, affairs at his home were becoming critical. With his wife in poor health and not a particle of food in the house, the man found his affairs in a critical condition. He had no children and in this case the town provides for able bodied men and their wives to remove to the almshouse where they are provided for while they search for work. The man was given temporary relief and he started out in a final endeavor to secure employment.

On file at the office of the Windham town clerk is a warranty deed, dated February 25, 1926, of the sale of the Hotel Hooker to Edward A. Winter of this city, from the Manchester Savings bank of Manchester, N. H. The sale was completed on December 28, 1925, by Walter M. Parker, treasurer of the bank. $500 REWARD

Can You Find the Twins?

On your toes, EVERYBODY. Here's the greatest puzzle of all—the biggest rewards and the most fun. Get out your "specs," sharpen up your pencil, and FIND THE TWINS.

There are 18 pictures of this lovely lady on this page. To be sure they all look alike, but examine them closer. Two, and only two of them are exact duplicates. Yes, siree. Only two of them are the real twins. Can you find them? It isn't as easy as it looks. Examine them carefully and be sure to read the clues below.

THESE CLUES WILL HELP

At first glance all of the pictures look alike. But on closer examination you will see that almost everyone differs in some way from the others. In some the difference may be in the dark or light hand on the brim of the hat, or the trimming on the collar. Or, some may wear necklaces, or ear-rings, or both. Only two are exactly alike. No, it's not as easy as it looks. You must search carefully.

Just look closely—make sure that you have the twins, then send in your answer. Somebody who finds the right twins is going to win $500 in cash. Make that "somebody" be you.

Send No Money—Costs Nothing to Try

FIND THE TWINS—Send in your answer. It's all free. No list of words to write, no money to send in, nothing to sell. Prizes will be given for the 100 best answers. Accuracy, style and neatness will count. $500, 1st prize; $200, 2nd prize, etc. There are 100 prizes in all and in addition valuable Gift Bonds Will Also Be Given. Submit your answer as soon as possible. Get the family together and have them help you find the twins. And, most of all, send them in just as soon as you possibly can.

All answers should be mailed not later than March 31, 1926, and only one answer from a family permitted. In the event of a tie, prizes of equal value will be given each tying contestant.

GOOD NEWS

Nine Extra Years of Life

HEALTH is improving—disease is decreasing—life is lengthening. You and your family have a better chance to live long and happily than people ever had before in the history of the world.

Splendid gains have been made in the United States and Canada within the last thirteen years. Stated in an insurance man's language, five years have been added to the average expectation of life.

But more encouraging—in the same period, nearly nine years were added to the life expectation of Metropolitan Industrial Policyholders—a gain, over the general average, of four extra years.

How was this done?—Largely through the inspiring work of our Metropolitan men and women. They sent trained nurses to the homes of millions of sick Policyholders. They fought disease and taught the well how to keep well.

Your Health in 1926

Use the helps offered by medical science to prevent disease. You need never fear typhoid. Inoculation will prevent it. Your children need never have diphtheria. Toxin-antitoxin treatments will safeguard them. Smallpox will not touch your family if all are vaccinated when necessary. One by one, dread diseases are being conquered. In ten years the tuberculosis death rate has been reduced more than one-half. Five years ago the diphtheria death rate alone was higher than that today for diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough combined.

CENSUS REVEALS ASTONISHING FACT

8,549,511 Working Women in United States

MRS. W. M. BAILEY

Many Say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps Keep Them Fit to Work

8,549,511 women would be a vast army. According to the 1920 Census of Manufactures, that is the number of women and girls employed in all trades in the United States.

Napoleon said, "An army travels on its stomach." This army of women travels on its general health. Every working girl knows that time lost through illness seldom is paid for and seldom can be made up. Employers demand regularity. If she wants to keep her job or hopes for a better one, she must guard her health.

Atlanta, Ga.—"My system was weak and run-down, and I was tired. I was this way for five years or more. I read your advertisement in the papers and I decided to try your medicine, the Vegetable Compound, but I did not begin to take it regularly until after I was married. I got so much good from it that I feel fine and have gained in weight. I work in a broom shop, but my work is not so hard on me now, and, I keep my own house, and work my garden, too. I am telling all my friends of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it has helped me."—Mrs. W. M. Bailey, R. F. D. No. 5, Box 27, Atlanta, Georgia.

Missouri Woman Helped

Parkville, Mo.—"I am proud to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was so ill that I could not lie down at night. Then I got my husband to go to the store and buy me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was up and around before the first bottle was gone, although I only weighed about ninety pounds. I took six or eight bottles and was able to do all my housework, washing and ironing, take care of my five boys, and tend to my chickens and garden, when before I had to hire my washing and part of my housework."—Mrs. Anna Cole, R. R. 2, Parkville, Missouri.

THE ENFORCEMENT PROBE

Prohibition has been a big problem for years. It hasn't been accomplished and in view of all that is being done to enforce it the prospects are slight that the country will ever be bone dry.

Under General Andrews new efforts have been made to bring about an enforcement of the law through a reorganization of the enforcement organization. The shakeup has undoubtedly done some good, but it hasn't accomplished what was aimed at and the longer it goes on the more strongly grows the conviction that real enforcement is impossible. Such a view is maintained by those who are strong believers in prohibition. Such is in fact, in keeping with the expressions of certain organizations which favored prohibition until they have a chance to witness the effects under it the reactions to it and the enforcement difficulties.

General Andrews is now quoted as favoring a presidential fact finding commission that would conduct an inquiry into all the sociological and economic phases of the enforcement problem. Secretary Mellon opposes such a commission but points out that congress is responsible for enforcement legislation, is entirely competent to judge its own course and if it wants to conduct such an investigation he has nothing to say.

Whether such a commission as General [illegible] would accomplish much is debatable. It is doubtful to change anyone's mind definitely fixed already. A commission might serve to still help the ardent advocates on each side but there are reasons for believing that otherwise it would accomplish nothing.

SETTLING RAIL LABOR DISPUTES

Senator Hooper of the federal railroad labor board has issued a vigorous protest against the pending bill which would substitute for that body an elaborate machinery for the voluntary adjustment of disputes in the transportation industry. In the first place Mr. Hooper affirms the bill is not the result of a public demand, and, in the second place, it provides for no new or effective substitute for the agency which it seeks to replace.

His first contention is undeniably correct, since there has been no public demand for the abolition of the railroad labor board, but the pending measure is the result of prolonged discussions by the railroad brotherhoods and the leading railroad executives. As to his second claim, it can be said the contention is hardly accurate.

The sponsors of the bill apparently are actuated by a sincere desire to maintain peace in the transportation industry, to avert strikes, or misunderstandings and quarrels that might lead to strikes. They have not suggested compulsory arbitration, but neither is there the element of compulsion in the present law covering the subject. They have devised conferences, adjustment boards, arbitration boards, and finally an emergency board to be appointed by the president of the United States. Public sentiment is relied upon to effect compliance with the final awards, but it is genuinely public sentiment that gives the present labor board its limited moral power to preserve peace.

The interests of the public might possibly be served more effectually by the proposed new machinery than it has been by the old, despite the backward step seen by some in the elimination of a representative of the public from the initial conferences and adjustment boards proposed by the new bill. Moreover, the railroads and their organized employes are setting a commendable example that should be encouraged generally in industry in endeavoring to deal rationally with their own problems.

OBREGON AGAIN

According to Mexican law one president cannot succeed himself. It is a case of serving one term and stepping out and giving someone else a chance. That is what Obregon did and that is what Calles is expected to do, although he has two more years to serve.

In anticipation of that day however former President Obregon has announced his candidacy for reelection. While he cannot succeed himself there is nothing to prevent him succeeding another, and by his announcement at this time he is taking time by the forelock and getting a jump upon any other who may be entertaining a presidential bee.

In view of the favorable experience which this country had with President Obregon, and the favorable relationship that existed between the countries at that time, the announcement of his candidacy will be received with satisfaction on this side of the Rio Grande. It requires something more than the expression of desire for office to get the presidency of Mexico but Obregon had a strong backing when he was made president before. He strengthened it as he administered the affairs of that country. He made possible the election of President Calles and there are reasons for believing that the fact that he is willing to be president again will cause all other aspirants to abandon their efforts and sink their ambitions. Certainly from this distance the only regret will be that the Calles regime does not end before 1928, and this in spite of the fact that Calles was the choice of Obregon.

NEGLECTED FARM MACHINERY

There are those who are negligent and there are those who give attention to such details. It is an old story in connection with farming to relate how the farmers put their money into expensive farm equipment and then leave it out under the trees or in the open to rust and deteriorate, instead of getting it under cover and taking care of it so that it will be in condition and fit for use when needed again.

Many can remember seeing pieces of farm machinery standing out from one year's end to another, but a fellow in the middle west set out to see just about how much farming machinery is neglected with the result that on a trip by train from between Council Bluffs, Ia., and Clinton, Ia., he counted 553 pieces, and on his return from Burlington to Council Bluffs 335 pieces of machinery were seen standing in the weather. These varied from mowing machines and harvesters to tractors of large size.

Such treatment of farm machinery is wasteful. It shortens the life of the particular equipment and it lowers its value both in service and as an asset. Just what is going to put an end to such a practice?

The merchant would not tolerate such a state of affairs year in and year out. The manufacturer takes an attitude directly opposite. He insists upon proper care being taken of his equipment whether in use or standing idle. There are some road contractors who apparently figure the cost of their equipment into their contract and consider it cheaper to leave it than to move it after the work is done. But the farmer doesn't abandon his machinery. He simply drops it where he gets through with it and knows he can find it when he wants it again, [illegible] disregards the effect [illegible] weather has upon it in the meantime. This means waste, repair bills and expenses which are entirely needless.

Such may not be justly charged to [illegible]. It would be unjust to [illegible] such a claim, but the count that was made in Iowa indicates that it is [illegible] practice there.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES' BILL CARRIES $509,000,000

WASHINGTON, March 2—(AP)—After adopting an amendment by Representative McDuffie, democrat, Alabama, to increase from $13,800,000 to $14,691,000 an appropriation for the shipping board, the house today passed the annual independent offices supply bill carrying $509,000,000. It now goes to the senate.

The house rejected a proposal by Representative Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, offered as an amendment to a section of the measure appropriating funds for the tariff commission, to prohibit any person from serving on the commission if he gave his resignation to the president at the time he received his appointment.

The Maryland member and Representative Hull, democrat, Tennessee, in long debate on the proposal, assailed President Coolidge for the course attributed to him of asking David J. Lewis of Maryland, for his resignation at the time of his appointment. Other appointments to the commission, Hull said, are to have "a string tied to them" this agency cannot function.

Mr. McDuffie in offering his amendment, which was accepted without a record vote, explained that $18,691,000 was the amount shipping board officials had informed the house appropriations committee, which drafted the bill, was the minimum required to maintain present shipping service.

Other items carried in the bill included:

An appropriation of $800,000 and authority to contract up to $2,200,000 more for the American battle monuments commission. These two provisions, the committee said, would permit completion of monuments in Europe in time for dedication November 11, 1928, the tenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice.

An increase from $7,500 to $10,000 in the salary for the secretary to the president.

For adjusted compensation and insurance payments under the veterans' bureau, $462,565,000 and for the tariff commission, $690,000.

CHILDREN RESCUED FROM BURNING HOUSE

HARTFORD, March 2—(AP)—Three small children were rescued from death today when fire of unknown origin partly destroyed the tenement at 204 North Front street. One child, Anne Savitsk one and one half years old, suffered severe burns on her head. The damage was estimated at $4,000, covered by insurance.

Alice, with the other children, Fannie, 3 years old, and Mary, 8 years old, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Savitsk, were trapped in a room on the second floor and their escape cut off by the flames which lashed the stairway. John Clark of 327 North Front street, entered through a second story window and hand the three children out to James Stewart, of 235 North Front street, and Mathew F. Sansoro, of 144 Avon street, who were standing on a high fence. After he had rescued the children, Clark was almost overcome by the smoke and was taken to his home where he quickly recovered.

TO ARRANGE CITIZENS' COMMITTEE TO STUDY NEED OF COMMUNITY CHEST

A conference was held Tuesday night in the chamber of commerce offices to discuss the question of a community chest for Norwich. Representatives of the manufacturers, the merchants, the Central Labor union, the Rotary, the Lions and the chamber were present.

The first meeting held to discuss this subject was held on October 26, last year, attended by representatives of the organizations named above. This was followed by a second meeting held November 9th, at which representatives of the Boy Scouts, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A., Backus hospital, diocesan bureau, United Workers, Red Cross, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, were present. M. C. Treadway, president of the Bristol community chest, and J. F. Kennedy and F. S. Hitchcock from New London discussed the purposes of the chest in their respective cities.

Since that time, New London has successfully held its first chest campaign, the results of which were awaited by those interested in the movement for Norwich.

The conference held Tuesday night decided to call a second meeting of all who attended the November 9 discussion and arrange for preparation of a citizen's committee which will be representative of all local interests. The purpose of this committee will be to study the need of a local community chest. Should the need prove to be present in Norwich this committee will take steps to formulate plans for the establishment of a local community chest.

The officials of the chamber have extended an invitation to Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, chairman of the New London community chest, to address the March meeting of the chamber. Rev. Mr. Danforth has accepted the invitation and arrangements are being made to hold the meeting on Monday, March 22, at the Wauregan hotel. It is expected that all persons interested in this movement will be present to hear Rev. Mr. Danforth explain the purpose of the chest idea.

The chamber will arrange for the organization of the citizen's representative committee at once. As the term indicates, a community chest develops local loyalty to the charitable and philanthropic institutions of the community. Their existence, their support, their aims and their purposes, are all matters of community importance, and are interwoven with the community's welfare, so that they should be known, supported and encouraged.

UPWARD TREND CONTINUES IN STORRS EGG LAYING

Egg production on the Storrs contest continues to show an upward trend, and during the seventeenth week of competition the contest flock laid a total of 4376 eggs, or almost forty-five per cent. This is a gain of 420 eggs over the production of last week and a gain of 111 eggs when compared with the production for the corresponding week a year ago. A grand total of 63,855 eggs have been laid by the 1,400 contest pullets to date. This is an average of better than forty-five eggs per bird since the contest got under way last November.

Heading the honor roll for the seventeenth week is the White Leghorn entry of Toivonen farm from Girard, Pa., with a lay of fifty-five eggs. This record is two eggs better than the high score of last week. Second place for the week was taken by the Winlay White Wyandottes from Mystic, Conn., with a production of fifty-three eggs. The Rhode Island Red pen entered by Geo. B. Treadwell from Spencer, Mass., was third for the week with a lay of fifty eggs. Following close behind for fourth position with a lay of forty-nine eggs was another Rhode Island Red pen, the entry of John Z. LaBelle from Ballouville, Conn., which incidentally is the high record pen of the contest at the present time. A Connecticut pen of Rhode Island Reds entered by I. W. Mitchell from Wallingford, and a New York pen of White Leghorns entered by Anthony Abraitys from White Plains made a strong bid for the fourth position taken by LaBelle's entry, but their forty-eight egg score was one egg short of that honor.

Two changes took place among the leading pens in each of the principal varieties in the Barred Rock class, the entry of R. W. Davis and Sons from Rockland, Me., went up into second position, displacing the entry of Harriet Smith from Newburyport, Mass. In the White Leghorn class, the entry of Toivonen Farm from Girard, Pa., went up into third position, and the entry of Amakassin Farm from Watkins, N. Y., went down to sixth position. John Z. LaBelle's Reds, with a record of 923 eggs to date, continue to lead all other pens in the contest. They gained on their nearest rivals again this week, the Dudley Poultry Farm Leghorns from Webster, Mass., and now the Connecticut Reds have an advantage of seventy-one eggs.

The Locusts West Cornwall, Conn.	522
Obed G. Knight Bridgeton, R. I.	515

WILLINGTON

The following suggestion concerning Lent is by Rev. Edwin E. Sundt, of West Willington, Baptist pastor, in charge of the Memorial church: "It is impossible for Christian people to over emphasize the seriousness and the solemnity of the Lenten season. Last year we pledged ourselves to one week of meditation, self denial and rest. This year, we bee of you, add to that the reading of the Gospel story appropriate to the approaching Easter time. You will find it beginning with Matthew 16: 21, Mark 8:31, Luke 9, 18 and John 12:12, continuing to the end of each gospel."

CLEVER TELEPHONE CAST GIVES DISTRICT SCHOOL

Before a large audience that was time after time sent into gales of laughter at the Strand theater Tuesday evening The Old District School was presented by the Norwich Trifunctional council of the telephone exchange. The stage was set as the typical old style country school room, with low desks for the scholars and a rostrum where Norman Shaffer, in wig and spectacles, presided as Ezekiel Simpkins, the village school teacher.

Dressed in the garb of their childhood days, the scholars played all the pranks which are in the repertoire of youth to drive a teacher to distraction. Spitballs flew about the room, girls were pinched, pets and playthings were smuggled in, till several of the scholars deserved and received good solid canings across the teacher's lap.

The school day that was given was divided into two periods, the first for lessons when the classes were called up for recitations and the second for rhetoricals, graduation and a visit from the school committee, consisting of William Gardiner as Deacon Tidd and Marguerite Ensling as Mrs. Amanda Jerusha Quackenbush, the former making a most amusing address to the school.

Before school opened and at recess, selections were rendered by the Roamers orchestra. Bouquets were sent over the footlights for a number of the star scholars.

Local hits on city and town officials and well known telephone people were included in the songs and recitations. Anna Spicer as the music teacher playing the accompaniments for the soloists and the group songs.

The brilliant group of scholars included the following:

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN TO SEEK COMPROMISE

LONDON, March 2—(AP)—Finding himself in conflict with the nation as a whole, Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, is said to have made a rather belated retreat from what was considered an impossible position, and, according to information in an authoritative quarter, has agreed to accept the government view that the coming meeting of the league at Geneva has no other purpose than the election of Germany to a permanent seat in the council.

The minister will try as a compromise to secure the council's assent to the appointment of a special commission to study the claims of Poland, Spain and Brazil for permanent seats, and report back to the September assembly.

Therefore, so far as Great Britain is involved, the crisis may be considered eased. But that does not mean that the Geneva difficulty has been solved. The Locarno methods which Sir Austen advocated will possibly be more than ever necessary, for France and Italy, finding that they have lost the support of the British foreign secretary, may become still more insistent, and, although Sweden and the countries supporting Sweden can veto the Spanish-Polish claims, there is still a possibility of some action on the part of France and Italy which would move Germany to withdraw her application.

SUPERSTITION PLAYS A HAND IN LIFE OF BASEBALL BATS

NEW YORK, March 2. (AP) Superstition plays a hand in determining the life of a major league bat, James Carrig has found in his wanders all over the professional baseball map selling paraphernalia for a well known sporting goods firm.

"Most of the big leaguers imagine each bat has only so many hits in it, and when they go into a slump, they figure the allotted quota of soft drives has been exhausted," says Carrig, a former college star at Creighton University. "They purchase from two dozen to a gross of bats each year. They test them, and, of course, only a few satisfy them. The discards they give away.

"Each selected stick is guarded jealously after being boiled in oil, scraped with a pop bottle and hamboned zealously. And because they feel each bat contains only so many hits, players are averse to having favorite sticks used by teammates.

"Zach Wheat and Jacques Fournier of the Brooklyn Dodgers are perhaps the most superstitious about their bats. Each bugs from 130 to 140 a year."

WAIF WAS FOUND AT ENTRANCE TO HOSPITAL

HARTFORD, March 2—(AP)—Attracted by cries, attendants at St. Francis' hospital about 8 o'clock tonight found a two days' old baby girl in the hall way of the little-used Woodland street entrance to the hospital. The baby was clothed entirely in new garments, devoid of marks, wrapped in blankets and had been placed near a radiator. No one at the hospital saw anyone near the Woodland street entrance to the institution this evening.

"Beautiful, well-dressed, healthy, normal," were some of the adjectives applied to the baby by the hospital nurses. The baby is fat and chubby, with an abundance of black hair and weighs eight pounds and thirteen ounces.

Garvan was re-elected president and treasurer and it was voted to change the name of the company from the Remington-Burnelli Aircraft corporation to the Garvan-Burnelli Aircraft corporation, here today at the annual meeting of the company. Pre-Columbian Toys

Toys of the American Indian tribes never before exhibited have been placed on exhibition in the division of ethnology of the United States National Museum. These playthings of the papooses from Alaska to Mexico reveal that the redmen were efficient toymakers and that their children found delight in the same imitation of their elders taken into consideration by the manufacturers of our modern Christmas amusement devices.

While little Indian girls, the exhibit shows, could not hug the talking, walking and sleeping dolls of our mechanical age, they did have plenty of dolls, with miniature tepees instead of doll houses, and little cradles to carry on their backs like the ones they were babies. Among these dolls is mother carried them in when the one of the tiny Eskimo which is a real stuffed wild duck for baby to play with.

Animal dolls were evidently very popular among the Indians. An ingenious beaver with a tail of leather marked in imitation of the big flat tail of the real beaver was made by an Appapaho papa for his papoose. Cute little wooly buffaloes made out of different colored beads are shown. Miniature elk and targets cut in the shape of buffaloes for little Indian boys to shoot at are also shown.

There are horse dolls and one doll is a tiny horse believed to have been made from the skin of an unborn colt on account of the lack of seams in the delicate hairy coat covering the little wooden image. These presents were sometimes exchanged when the families went visiting. The exhibit included material from Appapahos, Shoshones, Hopi, Utes, Apaches, Cheyennes and other Indians.

Hair Dry, Brittle from Constant Waving, Curling

The constant curling and waving demanded by present styles in bobbed hair, slowly burns the color, lustre and very life from the hair, leaving it dry, faded, brittle, and full of dandruff; then the hair roots shrink and the hair falls out fast.

Since girls just must curl and wave the hair to appear their prettiest, try "Danderine" to offset any bad effects. After the first application your hair will take on new life and that healthy, youthful lustre, become incomparably soft, wavy and appear twice as thick and abundant. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears.

A 35-cent bottle of refreshing "Danderine" from any drug store or toilet counter will do wonders for any girl's hair. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

THREE WORLD'S RECORDS BROKEN BY YALE RELAY SWIMMING TEAM

NEW HAVEN, March 2—(AP)—Three world's relay records were broken by the Yale swimming team in a meet with Yale freshmen here tonight. The records to fall were in the 200, 250 and 300-yard team relay events.

The Blue team, which already held the world's records in the 250 and 300-yard relays, was out to regain the record for the 200-yard relay which it held last year with a time of 1:37 until lowered by the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. to 1:36 1-5. Tonight the Eli swimmers completed the distance in 1:35 4-5.

The team lowered its own record for the 250-yard event from two minutes and two seconds to 2:00 4-5 and its record for the longer distance from 3 minutes and 27 seconds to 3:24 4-5.

Captain J. D. Bronson, of Stillwater Minn., led off, the others members of the team being James A. House, of Cleveland, Edwin D. Peterson, of Hawaii, William S. Stage, of Cleveland, William Meany, of Greenwich, Philip Bunnell, of Scranton, Pa., captain-elect of the Yale football team.

MISS WILLS WINS HER MATCH IN MENTONE TENNIS

MENTONE, France, March 2—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills, Senorita de Alvarez, Rau Neppach and Didi Vlasto all weathered today's round of the women's singles in the Mentone tennis tournament. The German champion was unlucky in the draw and will meet the American champion tomorrow, but Senorita de Alvarez and Mlle Vlasto, seeded in the lower half of the draw are likely to fight it out in the semi-finals.

Mlle Wills played today against Miss Daisy Hamerton, of England, whom she defeated 6-0, 6-0.

So far as scores were concerned there was little to choose between the four winners. Senorita de Alvarez won 6-1, 6-0; Mlle Vlasto, 6-1, 6-0, Frau Neppach 6-2, 6-1. The German played was elated over her victory, but showed worriment about meeting Miss Wills tomorrow, saying: 'This will be my finish."

"I am so sorry Mlle Lenglen has gone to Italy," said Miss Wills after she had won from Miss Hamerton "But still she knows her own business best. I feel disappointed that I cannot meet her again until Wimbledon, but don't you think she should have given me a return match here?"

Miss Wills said she probably would play in Italy in three tournaments, at Rome, Milan and Genoa, and not take sketching lessons as she intended.

"I will take my racquets along," she remarked, "but not my pencils."

Frau Neppach today took occasion to say how keenly she felt that German Tennis association's disavowal of her, as published in many French newspapers. The fact that the German association felt called upon to say that she did not represent German tennis was particularly resented by Frau Neppach. "Do they want to keep this war going forever," she asked. "I have never received a better welcome anywhere than from the French on the Riviera. This is my own people firing upon me from the rear."

STORRS, March 2—The Connecticut Aggies will journey to Hartford tomorrow night, where the Trinity college five will be met in the Hopkins Street gym, in what will be the second game of the season between these two institutions.

And memory of the Aggie-Trinity clash at Storrs earlier in the season, when the Hartford team gave Connecticut a real battle, will also serve to put Dole's team on edge for tomorrow's encounter.

MISS KLOTZ LEADS FIELD FOR EAST COAST TITLE

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 2.—(AP)—Miss Dorothy Klotz of Chicago, today led a strong field in the annual Florida east coast golf championship for women over the St. Augustine links.

Continuing the excellent golf she displayed in winning the South Atlantic championship, at Ormond beach last week, she led by one shot the score made today by Miss Virginia Van Wie, also of Chicago, who recently won the Florida state championship at Palm beach.

The leader's score was 81 while that of Miss Van Wie was 82.

Third place was captured by Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, national champion and defending titleholder. She shot 84. Her 40 on the first nine was the best outgoing score of the day, but poor putting on the inside nine ran high total for this half up to 44.

In the third match of the day Alonso defeated Burgnon in straight sets, winning both at 6-4. The Frenchman appeared exhausted from his efforts against Tilden and could not cope with the speed of the Spanish player.

Rene Lacoste, another member of the French Davis cup team, who recently won the American indoor title, was scheduled to play in the exhibitions, but he was unable to leave New York because of a cold.

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Harold Duke, graduated from college only six years ago as a law student, has been engaged to take the place of his father, the late William Duke, as trainer of the extensive racing establishment of Gifford A. Cochran, it was disclosed today.

His engagement belies reports that Mr. Cochran intended to abandon the turf and sell his thoroughbred racing stock as a result of the death of the Elder Duke, who lifted the Cochran colors to unusual prominence last season in his first year in charge of the stable. William Duke saddled the winners of both the 1925 Preakness and Kentucky Derby, twin three year old classics.

COMMISSION TO REQUEST THAT WALKER MEET MILLIGAN

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—The state athletic commission today paved the way for Tommy Milligan of Scotland to get his long-deferred match with Mickey Walker for the world's welterweight championship.

Although no formal action was taken, Chairman Farley announced that Walker would be requested to make arrangements by March 21 to defend his title and that Milligan, as the officially recognized challenger would be given preference as an opponent.

The only hitch in this plan is that Milligan has arranged to sail for home within a week, fulfilling his last engagement here tomorrow night against Georgie Levine.

Unless the Scotch battler remains here, he may lose his recognition as challenger. Chairman Farley said the commission regarded Joe Dundee, sensational Baltimore welterweight, as another likely opponent for Walker. Dundee is expected to get first call for a title match if Milligan goes back to Scotland.

Chairman Farley's statement reverses the previous attitude of the commission toward Walker. After an infected toe kept the champion from going through with a match with Milligan on the Christmas fund show at Madison Square Garder, the commission stepped in and prevented the bout from being staged on a January date. This was interpreted at the time as a disciplinary move against Walker.

The commission's rule compelling champions to defend their title every six months now is a compelling factor in the situation. The date fixed for Walker to act on his next championship fight marks the end of the period of grace for the welter titleholder. His last battle was with Dave Shade, Sept. 21, 1925.

Suspensions of Basil Gallano, New Orleans lightweight, and Bushey Graham, Utica, N. Y., bantam, were lifted.

GREB SIGNS TO MEET FLOWERS AGAIN ON MAY 21

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, who lost his middleweight title to Tiger Flowers, Georgia Negro, last Friday night, today signed articles to meet Flowers in a return battle for the championship at Madison Square Garden on May 21.

Signing of articles by Greb came within two hours after the Pittsburgh fighter's formal challenge to his conqueror had been rejected by the state athletic commission, which requires champions to defend their titles only once every six months. The customary bond of $2,500 to guarantee good faith which accompanied Greb's challenge, was returned to him by the commission.

For the same reason, a challenge from Larry Estridge, Negro rival of Flowers, also was rejected.

The Flowers-Greb return match will be over the usual championship distance of fifteen rounds to a judges' decision.

The signing of Greb clinches the match, since Matchmaker Jess McMahon had already secured Flowers' signature to a blank contract, requiring him to defend his newly won crown within three months.

Flowers and his manager, Walt Miller, placed themselves on record as willing to accept any opponent decided upon by Garden promoters as an outstanding challenger.

DEMPSEY TO GIVE EXHIBITION AT BALTIMORE

NEW YORK, March 2—(AP)—Jack Dempsey and his wife, the former Estelle Taylor, left today for Baltimore, where the heavyweight champion will give an exhibition with one of his sparring partners tomorrow night. He then will entrain for Los Angeles, Calif.

Dempsey said no progress had been made on either of his proposed title matches with Harry Wills and Gene Tunney. He failed to interview Promoter Tex Rickard during his visit here.

HARVARD TO GIVE LETTERS FOR THE PRINCETON GAME

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 2—(AP)—The awarding of letters in certain major sport contests with Princeton has been approved by the Harvard athletic committee, it was announced today. Heretofore only men who played against Yale have received their "H," but the student council recommended the extension to Princeton a month ago.

Carey Threatened With Pneumonia

St. Louis, March 2—(AP)—Max Carey, centerfielder and captain of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, entered a hospital here today suffering from a severe cold and threatened pneumonia.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Richard Golle, Werner Miethe and Otto Petri, three of Germany's greatest bicycle riders, are entered for the six day race which starts in Madison Square garden on March 6.

Ty Cobb's best batting season was in 1911, when he hit for .420.

Next to archery, lawn bowling is the oldest British outdoor sport now practised.

A billiard tournament will be opened in London April 13 to determine the amateur championship of the British Empire.

The British women's open golf championship will be held this year on the course at Royal St. David's, Harlech, on May 10 to 14.

Jack Dempsey claims his ancestors were Irish, Scotch and American, and on the American end he has Indian blood in his veins.

Not so much talk heard among New York baseball fans this spring about getting ready for a world series between the Giants and Yankees.

Tennis now generally recognized as "big stuff" in the sport world, was thought to be a "mollycoddle" pastime not so very many years ago.

Helen Wills, the American player whom many prophesy will be the world's tennis champion within another year, will be 21 years old on October 6 next.

Now that the smoke has cleared away from the battlefield on the Riviera it is evident that the Lenglen-Wills skirmish has been a big boost for the woman tennis game on both sides of the Atlantic.

An oddity of Tom Sayers, the celebrated English heavyweight pugilist, was to have his name picked out in little brass studs on the toe-cap of his boots, so that all might be able to recognize him.

Give me a pipe and Prince Albert

GIVE me a pipe and Prince Albert. I want to be happy, you bet. I know what I want when I want it . . . . a smoke without grief or regret. Funny how a fellow wants to break into poetry when he's happy as a lark.

Well, that's ME all over. I've discovered the one tobacco that makes a jimmy-pipe a pal for life. Good old P. A., the chummiest tobacco that ever nestled in the bowl of a briar. Cool and sweet and fragrant, just never was a tobacco like P. A.

I start in right after breakfast and hit it up till I sign off for the night. It never bites my tongue or parches my throat. They tell me the Prince Albert process cuts out bite and parch. Whatever it is, I can testify they're out!

Here's a hot tip on a cool smoke—get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert now. Tuck a neat wad of it into your old jimmy-pipe and make fire with a match. That's the formula . . . simple as falling out of bed. That's why I'm pipe-happy, Brother.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Never before in the history of the office of fire marshal has there been such a low record for building permits as there was during the month of February. Fire Marshal Stanton during the entire month did not issue a single permit and only one application for permission to build was received. February together with January are always light months for building but this year seems to have established a record. Cold weather with excessive snow has been a contributing cause to the slackness of the building. However, even though there has been but seven permits issued during the first two months of 1926 local contractors look for a banner year in the building industry locally.

This slackness of building is not only in Norwich but other cities in the northern part of the country report similar conditions. There are good prospects of a record year but at the present time the building trades are suffering a period of depression.

The open winter up to the middle of January gave builders a chance to do much of the work that is otherwise postponed during the winter months and building progressed to stages where much of the work was of an interior nature and could be done regardless of weather conditions. It is expected that from now on there will be a gradual increase in building operations until things reach the normal state once more.

Local contractors have been busy during the greater part of the winter on work that was not affected by the cold weather. Many alterations to present buildings have been made and the new buildings in the process of construction have been pushed along where it was possible to do interior work.

Contractor Sweeney began the work of rebuilding the brick building at the corner of Willow and Franklin streets during the past week. The entire block is being torn down and will be rebuilt on stronger foundations as soon as weather permits.

Other buildings in the city and town have been brought along steadily and within a few weeks contractors will be ready to swing into the new work which is being contemplated in the city and town.

New London

The plans are being revised by Architect Francis DeGrange for the proposed alterations to the building at the corner of Bank and Truman streets for Joseph Gentilello of that address. The changed plans will call for a three story building with three stores on the first floor, offices on the second and a hall or auditorium on the third floor.

Bids are being received for the building to be erected on Bank street and extending through to Blinman street for for the New London Banana Supply Co., 58 Golden street. Architect Francis DeGrange is taking the bids for the proposed construction. The building will be 32x80 feet, two stories high, with an arrangement suitable for the New London Banana Supply and a garage or loft on the second floor with a concrete and steel ramp from Blinman street.

The permit has been issued to L. Q. Raymond, 827 Montauk avenue, for two houses on Pequot and Dell avenues. William Tracy has the contract to build both dwellings which will be of cottage type, each 25-25 feet, with an ell 10x18 feet, arranged for one family. The total cost of the two houses will be about $10,000

Carl Burress has the contract for a store building at 213 Huntington street, for Michael Friedman. The building will be one story high, of frame construction, 19x36 feet, arranged for one store.

Building Permits

Michael Friedman, store, 213 Huntington street, $600.

L. Q. Raymond, two frame cottages, Pequot and Dell avenues, $10,000.

Number of permits issued for the week, 3; estimated cost of buildings, $10,900.

Montville

Plans have been completed for a cottage to be erected in Montville for the Connecticut Power company. The house will be 30x30 feet, of frame construction and will contain a display room for electrical fixtures and appliances and living quarters of five rooms for the manager. Steam heat and other modern conveniences will be provided. The owners will have charge of the electrical work and will ask for bids shortly for the construction work.

TWO PERMITS GRANTED IN WESTERLY LAST WEEK

WESTERLY, Mar. 2—During the last week in February, Westerly Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi has issued the following zoning building permits.

Carl F. Carlson, 23 John street, erect bungalow 24x26 feet with 7 foot piazza, corner of Fairview and Hobart streets on Lot No. 425, Fairview park. Beattie and Knight contractors.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were seven sales of real estate as compared to ten sales for the corresponding week in 19[illegible]. The mortage loans for the respective weeks were $37,750 and $38,192.

There were seven sales of real estate in New London during the past week, one more than during the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective week were $30,130 and $12,583.

Building Permits in State

Undoubtedly due to adverse weather conditions says the Commercial Record, a decided decrease is noted this week in the number of permits issued for new construction work throughout the state, when compared with the corresponding week in the two previous years. For current week but 82 permits were issued, for new construction to cost $246,812. A year ago there were 159 permits issued for buildings to cost $669,989, and in the like week of 1924, 116 permits for new construction to cost $343,500.

Stabilized Building Wages

Building labor appears well stabilized and it is unlikely that any radical widespread revision of wage scales will be made in spring agreements, according to a nation-wide survey of the labor situation in the building industry just completed by the building construction research bureau of G. L. Miller & Co., investment bond dealers. The survey said that there is still a slight upward tendency in building trades wage scales, but it is mostly confined to cities where prospective building operations are somewhat large and where somewhat less than the maximum wages of the country are being paid. This movement, however, is not expected to effect the general tranquility that now prevails in the construction industry.

Contractors and builders, it was stated, are generally agreed that there is not much chance of any radical reduction in wages unless there is a considerable recession in building activity, and that does not appear likely for some time. On the other hand, they are united in their opposition to further increases and the prospects are that the majority of new agreements now being negotiated will eventually provide for a renewal of the 1925 wage scales for another year.

"Wages of skilled mechanics at the present time are higher than a year ago, but the average common labor rate of 54 cents an hour is exactly the same as at this time last year. Employers, through the Associated General Contractors and National Association of Building Trades Employers, have proclaimed a united front in opposing further increases as 'unwarranted by present day conditions and may be a leading factor in bringing on construction depression.'

"Analysis of wage changes in the building trades show that they are 133 per cent above the level of 1913, as compared with 124 per cent above a year ago, or an increase for the year of nine per cent. The trend has been continuously upward since 1913, except during 1920 and 1921. In 1922 and 1923 there were sudden and abrupt increases in wages, together with bonus payments, because of the shortage of mechanics. The trend during the last 12 months, however, has become more gradual and bonus payments have disappeared and the situation has taken on a more stabilizing aspect."

Farmer Brown's Boy's Hair Stands Up

May fortune ne'e such terror send,
As makes your hair to stand on end.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Having your hair, which naturally should lie down, suddenly stand on end isn't comfortable. No, sir, it isn't comfortable at all. Farmer Brown's Boy said so and Farmer Brown's Boy knows. He has had his hair suddenly stand on end. Now, there is only one thing that will make hair behave in such unbecoming manner, that one thing is fright. It was fright that made Farmer Brown's Boy hair stand on end.

It happened the very night after he had discovered those strange, great footprints, which were like a Cat's, yet larger than any Cat's footprints he ever had seen. He slept in the sugar house that night. You see, the sap had begun to run, and it was necessary to have some one there at the sugar house all the time. Now Farmer Brown's Boy isn't timid. He isn't afraid of the dark, and he isn't afraid of the people who live in the Green Forest, not even Buster Bear. You see, he knows that all of them are afraid of him and so there is no need to be afraid of them. So he didn't in the least mind staying all alone in the sugar house that night. In fact, he rather looked forward to it.

After Farmer Brown had gone home, promising to return early in the morning in time to eat breakfast with him, Farmer Brown's Boy prepared to go to bed early. He made everything snug for the night, then rolled up his blankets on a bunk in the sugar house and watched the flickering of the firelight as the fire gradually died down. He was just dozing off when there came such a sound as he never in all his life had heard before. It was then that his hair stood right up. At least,

That sound was a scream, but such a scream as he never had heard, he says it did, and he ought to know. At the same time a queer, prickly feeling and little chills chased each other up and down his backbone. For a moment his teeth chattered. That sound was a scream, but such a scream as he never had heard. It had come from only a short distance away. He lay there and shivered and shook and waited to hear it again. But he didn't hear it again.

At first Farmer Brown's Boy couldn't think what it could be. "It wasn't Yowler the Bobcat," said he to himself. "I know Yowler's scream, and this was altogether different. Yowler's scream is bad enough but this is worse."

Then he sat up abruptly. He had just remembered those big footprints he had found that afternoon. "It must be that Puma the Panther has come to the Green Forest," he exclaimed. "Nothing but a Panther, or Cougar, as some folks call it, could have made those tracks, and nothing but a Panther had been known anywhere in this section. But if there isn't one here now, may I never carry another pail of sap. My! My! I would like to see that big fellow. No one will believe it when I tell them what I have seen and heard. They'll all say that it was Yowler the Bobcat. But I know better. If I could just see him—see that long tail of his — that would be all that is needed to prove that Puma the Panther has returned to the home of his great-great-grandfathers. No other member of the Cat family in the Green Forest up this way has a long tail. Yowler the Bobcat and his cousin, Tufty the Lynx, have such short, stubby tails that they are not worth mentioning. Only the Panther, or Mountain Lion, has a long tail. I wish he would scream again!"

But there was no more screaming that night, and after a bit Farmer Brown's Boy slept as only a healthy boy can.

DANIELSON

MOSES H. BERTHIAUME HAS BOUGHT EXCHANGE BLOCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 2.—Sale of the Exchange block, a three-story brick business and office structure in the heart of the borough by the Church company to Moses H. Berthiaume, Jr., was announced Tuesday. There have been rumors for some time that this sale was impending.

Mr. Berthiaume, one of the borough's business men, had nothing to say Tuesday about the deal other than that he had taken over the property. He did not make known that there will be any changes in the property or what he plans to do with it.

The building is one of the most centrally located in Danielson and incidentally one of the most valuable of the borough's business properties. It is occupied on the ground floor by business places, has offices on the second floor, while the third floor has been leased for years by the Masonic organizations of Danielson, these organizations some time since having purchased from the Ecclesastical society of the Westfield Congregational church the parsonage on Broad street with a view to enlarging and remodeling this property as a home for all the Masonic bodies here.

RECEIVED HEAVY FINES FOR AUTO LAW VIOLATIONS

DANIELSON, March 2.—Thomas Ryan, a transient, was a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam Tuesday, and likely will be there for weeks, while he recovers from injuries he sustained early Monday evening when he was struck and knocked down by a motor truck while he was walking along the state highway near Brooklyn Center. Ryan has a scalp wound and an injured hip. It was at first feared he was internally injured, but this did not prove to be true. Ryan's companion of the road, one Michael Ball, of here and there, was also knocked down by the truck, but did not sustain any injury sufficient to warrant hospital treatment.

Dennis Vertifeuile of Willimantic was later arrested in the vicinity of Hampton hill as the operator of the truck by Sergeant Albert S. Field and State Officer Merrill R. Keith of the Danielson barracks. He was presented to answer to the charges growing out of the case before Justice Frank M. Bedard of the town of Brooklyn Tuesday evening.

It was alleged that Vertifeuile, at the time he struck Ryan and Ball, was operating a motor vehicle without headlights working, that he was driving while under the influence of an intoxicant and that he had no operator's license. Vertifeuile claimed that he had seen no men in the highway and that he knew nothing of the car striking the men until he was overtaken by the officers and arrested. Pieces of broken headlight glasses picked up by the officers matched what remained of parts of headlights on the truck Vertifeuile was operating.

The advertisement [illegible] out-of-town people from various [illegible] sections of eastern Connecticut, but [illegible] Trust company was particularly [illegible] interested in four persons getting [illegible] account out of a section of New [illegible] city.

Winter has taken its toll as to crumbling up state highway surfaces and other roads hereabouts. Disappearance of ice and snow after a season's enduring it shows holes in state highway pavements, a chunk here and there humps and lumps and as the other nib that state highways are sent to during the course of a hard winter season. There are many motorists who believe that considerable damage is done to state highways by tire chains, especially the giant chains like one hears rattling in the Prisoners' Song, with which heavy trucks are equipped. On the tires of big trucks carrying heavy loads these chains cannot be held to benefit road surfaces. Against them may be charged some of the damage to the highways—damage that will be repaired as rapidly as improving weather conditions and ability to handle all that is to be done permits. The concrete highways had withstood the winter far better than other types of state highways. They may buckle a bit at joints, but they do not break down, as does macadam and amelsite and other such roads.

George W. Popple, 77, died Tuesday at his home on the Elias Main place in West Brooklyn, where the family had been resident for some time. Mr. Popple was born in Plainfield, June 5, 1848, a son of Elisha and Lucinda (née Pongee). He lived in Plainfield before coming to Danielson to make his home, he being a resident of this place for many years. In his earlier years he was employed here as a cotton spinner and later had various kinds of outdoor employment. He leaves his wife and a son, George, of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Ellen J. Medbury, 75, many years resident in Danielson, died Tuesday morning at the Old People's home. She was a native of Vermont and was the widow of Frank Medbury, for years engaged in business in Danielson.

Raymond Saucier, 22, pleaded guilty in the town court Tuesday afternoon to breaking and entering the garage of Leonard Morrison on Mechanic street and stealing an automobile tire, tube and rim valued at $25. He was arraigned on a charge of statutory burglary and in default of bonds of $1,000, went to jail at Brooklyn to await trial at the superior court. State Officer A. W. Williams presented Saucier in court.

Last year Saucier was before the court to answer to a charge of stealing chickens, his sentence at that time being 30 days in jail.

James R. Walsh and daughter, Miss Mary Walsh, were called to Brooklyn, N. Y., where the death of Mr. Walsh's sister occurred.

Mrs. Henry P. Duboe of Mechanic street is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic. Her return to her home here is expected this week end.

On Sunday Joseph Berthiaume will leave for Boston to remain for a week, during which he will attend a school for the instruction of life insurance agents in the duties they are called upon to perform.

A number of local followers of basketball were at Webster Tuesday evening to see the game between the Celtics of New York and the Brooklyn, N. Y. team.

Rivers here were straining at their ice bonds Tuesday as water poured into the streams after a heavy downpour of twelve hours.

One hears vague accounts of an incident alleged to have happened on the state highway leading from Chop Mist hill, 12 miles east of here, to Chepachet, in which a Rhode Island state trooper and the unknown driver of a motor car the officer attempted to halt, shooting it out, the unknown to get away without being identified, while the officers' car shows bullet marks.

It has been practically definitely decided that Snake Meadow brook will not be opened to trout fishermen until April 15 this year, two weeks after the opening of the trout fishing season. This is because the state has leased and will intensively stock the brook, and because out of the state fishermen, especially from Massachusetts, where the season does not open until April 15, are prone to come here and make the most of their early season opportunities at a lower price for license fees than Massachusetts grants to Connecticut fishermen.

Looking forward a fortnight, there are those in Danielson who are lessening the ennui of the Lenten season by contemplating St. Patrick's night diversions, of which there will be several in Danielson and vicinity.

An X-ray showed that several bones in the arm and hand were broken and the arm badly lacerated and that skin grafting will have to be resorted to. Mrs. Eddy had stepped into another room to answer a telephone call and while her absence the child succeeded in reaching a lever of the washer until his little arm was drawn into it.

A cafeteria supper was recently served in the Congo house in Woodstock under the direction of Mrs. L. H. Chamberlain's Sunday school class. GILPATRIC TESTIFIED IN THE LAVINE CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 2—The hearing in the action of Arthur E. Howard, trustee in bankruptcy of G. Harold Gilpatric's estate, against Mrs. Rosa Lavine to recover $2,500 was begun in superior court here this morning before Judge Edwin C. Dickinson and a jury. Testimony was all in at 3.30 this afternoon. A few minutes before five o'clock Judge Dickinson ordered an adjournment until 10.45 Wednesday morning when he will charge the jury will immediately retire for deliberation.

In a court room that was crowded to capacity, the former first citizen of Putnam made his way up an aisle aided and guided by a guard of the Atlanta penitentiary. Mr. Howard for the referee outlined the claims of the plaintiff, that Mr. Gilpatric had loaned Mrs. Lavine $2,500 on four notes the first one for $1,000 drawn on March 4, 1924, and three others for $500 each dated March 10, April 26 and May 28 of the same year.

Mrs. Lavine denies that any money was loaned here. She alleges that a few months prior to the date of the first note she gave Mr. Gilpatric $2,000 to keep for her; on March 4 he gave her $500 instead of $1,000 and that she received the other amounts on the dates mentioned, but that the total of $2,000 was to repay her for the money she had left with him. She declared on the stand that she could not read, that the four notes which bore her name and which she admitted were her signatures she had thought to be receipts, when she signed them.

Gilpatric's testimony was brief, not consuming more than 15 minutes. His voice was of the same vibrant character that formerly distinguished him but there was an occasional break in it and the perceptible twitching of the facial nerves showed the effects of what he was been under for the past two weeks.

Mrs. Lavine said that she had saved the money since 1922, when her husband left her and from whom she afterwards secured a divorce, from her wages as a mill worker and by keeping boarders. The first $400 she had put in an empty Crisco can and buried it in the garden; she dug it up at intervals and added to it until she had amassed $2,000 in small bills, none of them higher than $20 in denomination.

Several well known business men testified that she had tried to borrow money from them without success. Two lawyers tend of trying to collect bills from her without success and the city tax collector and the town tax collector had secured the taxes from her in driblets.

The money was used for building a small storeroom on her lot which is in a popular residential section and the neighbors had declared it detracted from the value of their property. It was because of the feeling, she said, that she had not opened an account with the bank as she feared they would get out an injunction and tie up her funds.

The jury that tried the case consisted of: Edgar L. Bass, Windham; Alexander M. Bassett, Ashford; Stephen M. Coffee, Brooklyn; Robert Cooper, Brooklyn; Edmond Baker, Canterbury; Fred Kinne Canterbury; Chas. B. Carver, Killingly; Walter L. Chase, Killingly; Gerald Waldo, Scotland; Arthur Price, Scotland; Frank Koskett and Frank Johnston, Woodstock. Twenty nine veniremen responded to the roll call and there were many reasons advanced for being excused from service. Adolph P. Landeck of Chaplin did not want to serve because he did not know either of the litigants and William A. Costello of Windham asked to be excused because he had read so much of Gilpatric that he entertained a sympathetic feeling for him. He was challenged and excused by the defendant.

MORSE NOW HELD IN JAIL PENDING TRIAL

PUTNAM, March 2—Darwin Morse, formerly of Saybrook, who was arrested in this city by Captain of Police William Jarvis, is now in the New London county jail in default of $5,000 bonds awaiting trial at the next term of superior court there. He pleaded guilty before a justice to breaking into and robbing several summer homes and stealing an automobile from William Powers, caretaker at the estate of Edward Cooper. This is the car he had with him when arrested in Putnam.

Police in this vicinity had been furnished with a picture and description of the man and Captain Jarvis and his officers had been on the lookout for him. When Morse walked into the police headquarters to inquire about an automobile license, as his license was about to expire, Captain Jarvis recognized him and placed him under arrest and notified the Saybrook police. Thomas Henry, acting state police sergeant and Officer Walter Wood from the state barracks at Centerbrook came to Putnam by automobile and took Morse back with them.

Morse confessed here that he had stolen three cars and had abandoned two of them besides entering and robbing several of the summer homes of wealthy residents of Saybrook and Lyme. He has been living at Webster, Mass., for the past several months and is supposed to have been making trips to Saybrook and returning to Webster with his stolen property. Captain Jarvis went to Webster to find the woman but she had left the place. With the help of the police there a number of things were found in the house which answered to the description of the stolen goods.

It is supposed that Morse had raided some of the cellars of these summer homes and taken some pre-war whiskey, but however, the police found but one empty whiskey bottle and some poor wine in a decanter.

Morse, himself, declared that he did not drink. Last night the local Putnam police again made a visit to the house in Webster and found some more stolen goods.

Morse made no resistance when arrested but admitted his identity.

JEWETT CITY

PRIED JEWETT CITY MAN LOOSE FROM HIS EARNINGS

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, March 2.—There is nothing new about Jewett City people going to Boston, but Monday two local men visited the Hub who were new.

During their roamings about the intricate thoroughfares of the big city the twain met up with one of the jewelry, gold and silver, gilt edged auction rooms. The chaps who occupy the barker's blocks in these establishments were not born yesterday. The visitors from Griswold were sized up and their numbers mentally recorded without delay.

A 25-piece silver tea service was offered for sale, with no bidders. That was then deposited on the counter in front. In turn a 14 carat, full jewel, carefully cut, W. G. ring, also an imported wrist watch, with a Czecho-Slovakia movement, and an iron constitution, received no offers. The three articles were laid in a pile and the auctioneer, with tears in his eyes, cried out, "Hoot gimme 12 bones for the bunch." The day was saved by the local friend, who at this point rushed in, shouting "I will!" Their possession has not bearing on income tax.

K. of C. members are requested to meet in church basement tonight after church services.—adv.

A gang of men from the Southern New England Telephone company were at work Tuesday carrying the new telephone cable under the state road, whence it will be connected with the big switchboard in the local exchange. Extensive changes and improvements have been made within the last two months. A new 202 pair cable will take care of the traffic to the north, while the old cable carrying an equal number of pairs of wires, will accommodate the business of the south and west sections.

Some work was necessary on Main street in connection with improved conduit drainage. Four hundred and four pairs of wires are now to be hooked up with the local board. People are beginning to appreciate the importance of, and the arduous duty demanded at the local board, and it is to be said, that most mention of late has been complimentary to the local girls, who are on the job day and night.

An inquiry at the yards of the local coal dealers Tuesday evening furnished the information that orders for anthracite are in, but there is no promise of the day of shipment. Pochahantas, West Virginia, coal is being offered as an anthracite substitute and is used with some degree of success.

Adelle Ambot, not Lambert, is taking the graduate nurse training at the Backus hospital.

The vital statistics of Griswold, as recorded by Town Clerk John Welsh, for the month of January are as follows:

Deaths: William E. Hiscox, myocasdilis, age 71; Catherine Curran, arteric sclerosis, age 70; Frank M. Bancroft, cerebral hemorrhage, age 79.

Births: Martha Ellen Herdman, May Margaret Melick, Marie Cecelia Marcella Massi, Teresa Agnes Knox, Daniel James Sullivan, Jr., Frances Josephine Waytowicz, Wendoc Parzyh, John Baptista Caron, Mabel Harriet Winroth, Bradford Edward Lindell, Waldia Gorrcherow and Sofi Yurechko.

Monday evening in the American legion rooms, the local council of the Knights of Columbus held an open meeting with a large attendance. The speaker of the evening was Rev. E. A. Icick, pastor of St. Joseph's church, Norwich. Taking as his subject Armenians and Americanism, Father Icick held the close attention of his audience from beginning of end, combining a wonderful control of the English language with a very brilliant sense of humor. It was the wish of everyone present that they might again hear this most learned and eloquent speaker.

It is planned to hold another open meeting in the near future.

A special treat is in store for the people of Jewett City who are interested in listening to a man of remarkable experience and ability.

On Friday evening in the Methodist church, Gil, Traveller, the cowboy sky pilot, of Cimmarron district of New Mexico, will relate his experiences among the cowboys of the plains.

Gil, as he is familiarly known, is young and of medium height, and typifies the western rodeo adept in the manner in which he walks and talks. Wherever he has gone, church people have asked that they be given the right to sample his ability with the rope as well as to hear his stirring message. They have not been denied.

Mr. Traveller's New Mexico parish takes in 2,000 square miles. He attended the University of California from whence he went to take his calling. The first church in his district was burned down, the second was blown all over the town. The third was still standing when he arrived, but was almost a wreck from a wintry spell which brought 42 inches of snow.

Traveller raised $5,000 dollars and bought out the toughest frontier dance hall in that section of the country and upon the beer-stained planks he stepped to preach the same gospel message that he now brings to Jewett City.

The Bermuda party has been back on native soil for a week now, and may be said to be slowly decending to normal. How strange it seems, with so much of real attraction and inducement in the two unmarried members of the expeditionary personnel, that they have returned, "In statu quo.".

.Sin may be ugly but it understands the art of beauty culture.

NEW LONDON PROVES COSTLY PLACE FOR VISITING GROTON ENGINEER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 3.—William Alexander, a Groton engineer, came to New London last night, perhaps in search of information. Anyhow, he seems to have obtained it, for he discovered that gambling houses were flourishing here, according to his testimony in the police court this morning. Bill also represented that he was arrested as to what constituted drunkenness. For he indignantly denied that he was drunk or could be so regarded when taken into custody by Officer Edward Riordan. He told the court that he relied upon the evidence of a physician to determine whether a man was intoxicated and would not rely upon the evidence of a policeman's oath. Bill was on Atlantic street where he had just emerged from a store when Officer Riordan happened along. He saw that Mr. Alexander was in no condition to operate the car and so stepped into it and, as he told Bill at the station, attempted to operate the car as he thought in condition so to do. Bill was just fooling good enough to suit the officers, who, in agreement with the judge and the prosecutor, escorted Mr. Alexander to the police station. In court today Alexander said he would have eyes opened to the fact that there was quite a trace as he visited. "I am not a drinker," he represented, "and never played a game of poker, but there was some gambling in the place I visited. There were coons there, or Negroes if you wish or colored persons, but the manager was not. Admitted

STOCK MARKET DEMORALIZED

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP)—In one of the most demoralizing stock market sessions in recent years, prices broke one to 15 points today in another frantic liquidating movement of weakened speculative accounts. Collapse of a large group of public utility and motor stocks took place in the last hour of trading during which total sales exceeded 1,400,000 shares, a new high record for a single hour's trading, bringing the day's total to nearly 3,000,000 shares for the first time since November 16 last when the record of 3,240,000 shares was established. The ticker did not record the last quotation until 3:46 p. m., the longest delay in history, the previous record of 43 minutes having been established at the end of the half holiday session on Jan. 8, 1926.

All groups of stocks participated in the reaction, indicating that the recent violent declines in speculative issues had necessitated the selling of high grade investment stocks. It was the fourth consecutive day of sharply declining prices during which the average of 20 leading railroad issues has fallen nearly four points. There was a feeble attempt to rally the general list by bidding up the high grade industrial shares at the opening, but met with a flood of offerings and renewed short selling in other quarters.

As on preceding days, the reaction was not associated with anything in the day's news. The adverse decision of the Interstate Commerce commission on the proposed "Nickel Plate" merger was not announced until about an hour after the stock market had started and so far as is known was a distinct surprise to Wall street generally as rumors had been current for weeks that the merger would be approved, perhaps with certain modifications in the original plan.

A wide open break in Hudson Motors which dropped from an early high of 164 to 140, featured the new trading. So swift was the decline in this stock, and so far behind the market was the ticker, that when it finally got around to broadcasting sales that stock was selling on the floor at 134 when it was quoted 150 a few minutes before. The entire list subsequently rallied 10 points from the low, closing at 113 for a net loss of 5 1-2 points on the day. General Motors dropped from 124 3-8 to 114 and then snapped back to 118 3-4 off 3 1-8 net.

Several other factors and accessory issues were hard hit. Pierce Arrow, dropping 7 3-8 points to 50, Motor 2 1-4 to 17, Stewart Warner 3 to 32, Chandler 7 to 72, Auburn, Trucks, Lodge Brothers common, Apperson Motors sold off 4 to 5 points.

A drastic shake-out also took place in the public utilities, net losses of 6 points to 10 points being recorded by Brooklyn Manhattan Transit, Interborough Rapid Transit, Lacledes Gas, Consolidated Gas, Power and Light, Detroit Edison, Public Service of New Jersey, Standard Gas, Columbia Gas, Electric Power and Light, preferred and West Penn common.

Other sharp declines among industrial issues ranged from 3 points to new low levels during the session. Coca Cola dropped 10 points to 124 3-4 to 125 and then rallied to 130 or 4 points below the previous close, while the stock reserved was offered to employees under the company's annual payment plan of purchase. New lows were established during the session by New York Central, Union Pacific, Atchison at 124 1-4, Reading at 84 1-2, Lackawanna, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, U. S. Rubber, Baldwin Locomotive, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Mack Trucks, Chandler Motors, Hudson Motors, Hupp Motors, Nash Motors, Packard Motors, Pierce Arrow, Stewart Warner, Studebaker, Willys Overland, Yellow Cab, Fifth Avenue Bus, Fisher Body, Mexican Seaboard Oil, Radiator, Texas Pacific Coal and Oil, Texas Corporation, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Tidewater Oil, Transcontinental Oil, Vacuum Oil, Wilson & Co. and Woolworth. Other changes were mostly 1 to 3 points lower.

WHITE WAY TO BE EXTENDED IN BATH AND FRANKLIN STS. THIS YEAR

An extension of the white way in Bath street and on a section of Franklin street is to be made this summer by the Norwich gas and electrical department. The initial installation of the white way lights in Main street, Broadway and Union square met with such public favor that the gas and electrical commissioners some time ago announced their intentions to extend this new lighting arrangement to other streets and the Franklin street section is the first to benefit.

The white way lights, which will be of the same colonial lantern type as adopted and so much commended, will be extended through the one block of Bath street and on Franklin street from Franklin square to the corner of Oak street and Boswell avenue.

There will be 24 lights set in pairs on opposite sides of the street, replacing about the same number of wooden poles now in use on the street. The same kind of construction will be followed as in the present white way, an iron pole with a crossarm bracket that will carry all the wires on the street, electric light, trolley, telephone and fire alarm.

The order for material has been delayed somewhat from various causes so that it is not expected that material can be delivered before the summer months, when the work will be begun, according to a statement made by General Manager C. W. Taggart on Tuesday. He expects to have the work completed by fall.

CHANDLER ADVISES MORE SUPPORT OF STATE FAIR

"The state fair, offering as it does an excellent opportunity for developing a mutual understanding between the city man and the country man, ought to be continued and should be even further developed," said George B. Chandler in a statement made just before he left Connecticut to assume the secretaryship of the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Chandler further said: "In investigating the possibilities in the state of Ohio I was at once told of the importance of their great fairs and I could not help feeling that the board of directors of the Connecticut Agricultural society, which conducts the state fair in Connecticut, ought to receive the support not only of manufacturers and agriculturalists but also of the banks, insurance companies, industries and the many civic bodies.

"If was pleased to notice in connection with the state fair last September that practically every state department had an exhibit there. Of course, advertising is just as important in regard to state business as it is in private business. All business depends upon confidence. Too much stress cannot be placed upon the importance of acquainting the public which pays the bills through taxes of the achievements and aims of the various state departments. I have always felt that people would pay all taxes more cheerfully if they knew more about the ways in which public business is administrated."

"Of course, the boys and girls' movement should be encouraged. Here again, too much commendation cannot be given to any movement to interest boys and girls in the things worth while. If the boys and girls' building materializes and the state fair is made a rendezvous for those boys and girls who really want to learn more about agriculture and other worth-while businesses a great stride in the right direction will have been made.

"The state fairs offer a great opportunity. Men who have succeeded in many kinds of business are ready to give freely of their time to make the fair a success. The responsibility then is squarely up to the people and if those who can possibly can fail to do so they will have missed another golden opportunity to sell this great state first to the people of the state and then to the rest of the world."

ALMANACS ARE ANCIENT BUT THEIR USE RECENT

It appears that almanacs have a very ancient origin. They were known to the Indians, Chinese, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans, and to all ancient civilized races. But their use was not general in Europe until the Middle Ages. It was then that the church made use of them to indicate the different fete days which were to be observed by the faithful. Very soon then astronomic remarks were added. This innovation was chiefly due to the Arabs, who transmitted to the Europeans the word almanac.

Divorce from Bertha L. Richardson, formerly of the village of South Lyme, town of Old Lyme, is sought by Frank H. Richardson of South Lyme in a suit brought in the superior court on the ground of desertion. The couple was married June 9, 1909, the maiden name of the wife being Bertha L. Dakin, but surname at the time of marriage was Bertha L. Dakin Inglis. He alleges that she deserted him in August, 1921.

FOUR SUITS FOR $24,000 FOLLOW AUTOMOBILE CRASH

As an aftermath of the crash between the car of Dr. Edward J. Turbert, prominent Hartford physician, and a touring car owned by George Dannahy of Hartford, on the Hartford turnpike in Waterford on the night of June 28, 1925, four separate damage suits have been filed against Dr. Turbert by the occupants of the Dannahy car. The suits have been brought in the superior court for Hartford county and are returnable next month.

Total damages of $24,000 are asked. James Vallorbi sues for $15,000, alleging that he was thrown out of the Dannahy car when it was struck by Dr. Turbert's machine and that his arm was broken in several places, and other injuries were inflicted. Louis Montano sues for $1,000, Vincent Perez for $3,000 and John Rolleri for $5,000. All of the plaintiffs are residents of Hartford.

The accident occurred shortly before 3 o'clock on the morning of June 28, near the home of James Rice, a short distance beyond the New London city line in Waterford. The complaints filed in the law suits charge that Dr. Turbert's car was being operated carelessly and that the car was proceeding towards Hartford on the left of the center of the road.

The matter has hung fire since June awaiting the outcome of the injuries sustained by the several plaintiffs. They were all confined to the Lawrence hospital in New London for some time after the accident.

PROGRAMME GIVEN FOR CELEBRATION OF PURIM

A most enjoyable program in commemoration of Purim or the "Feast of Lots" was heard Sunday afternoon at Olympic hall. The program was given under the auspices of the Rose of New England Auxiliary No. 40, I. O. B. B. The invited guests were the pupils and teachers of the Hebrew institute.

After delivering an address of welcome Mrs. Trachtenberg introduced Mrs. Alexander Manes, who took full charge of the entertainment.

The following selections were presented: Recitation, David Wechsler; piano solo, Celia Silverman; The Story of Purim, read by Philip Manes; violin solo, Miriam Gordon; songs, Peggy Bruckner.

After the program was rendered, games were played by the children with prizes awarded to the winners. Upon leaving each child was presented a box of candy. There were over 150 children and all professed they had enjoyed the afternoon immensely.

Those who assisted Mrs. Manes in making the program so successful were Mrs. Trachtenberg, Mrs. H. Rubinstein, Miss Ruth Clark, Miss Marcia Bruckner and Mrs. A. Bruckner.

WILL PRESENT PLANS FOR NEW SANATORIA BUILDINGS

At the meeting Monday at Hartford of the medical officers of the state tuberculosis sanatoria, great interest was shown in a patient now tuberculous who has been attacked many times in the past thirty years with a sickness that was usually diagnosed as scarlet fever, but which was really a skin disease known as exfoliative dermatitis.

Dr. Stockwell also reported some important experiences with the pasteurization of virulous cultures of tubercle bacilli. According to these experiments, heat of 62 1-2 degrees centigrade applied for half an hour to certain tubercle bacilli. In certain fluid media does not always kill the germs but makes them develop some appearances and characteristics that they did not possess. The interesting fact in this finding, if it proves true of pasteurized milk, is readily understood. The milk phases of the subject will be carefully studied in the coming months.

The next meeting of the state tuberculosis commission will be held next Monday at the state capitol, at 2 o'clock at which architects presenting plans for the proposed buildings at Shelton and Meriden sanatoria will be heard.

WITHDRAWAL IN SUIT BROUGHT FOR DIVORCE

The divorce action of Mrs. Bessie Clark (Hardy) Parker of Norwich against Frederick H. Parker of Hartford, has been withdrawn from the superior court, notice of the withdrawal having been filed with the clerk of the court in this city. The couple was married December 21, 1921 and in the divorce action, she charged her husband with committing a statutory offense. He denied the allegation and in turn instituted a petition for divorce from her on grounds of desertion.

Feeding the Birds

A circular of the Connecticut Humane society suggests that now is an appropriate time to feed the birds. With their natural feeding places covered with snow the birds find it difficult to pick a living without the help of their friends. How to help the birds in winter is answered by supplying food frequently during and after storms, also providing feeding shelters where birds can find food and eat comfortably during the storms weather.

Generally speaking birds in winter are not particular about their food and scraps left over from meals in the household furnish a very good ration for them. They do well on such wastes as is fed to chickens, especially little trimmings of suet or fat, pork rinds or shreds of meat which cannot be used in cookery, also they enjoy bird seed, buckwheat, crumbs, hemp seed, millet, peppers, pumpkin or squash seed, sunflower seed, cold potatoes, cut-up apples, peanuts, cocoanut meat and in fact all nut meats.

Elected To Brown Fraternity

Horace P. Bill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bill of 100 West Thames street, is one of 25 seniors at Brown university elected to Sigma Xi, the honorary scientific fraternity. Six juniors were also elected, membership in this fraternity attesting the high scholarship standing of those chosen.

EAST LYME TAX IS LAID AT 18 MILLS

A tax rate of 18 mills was voted at the adjourned annual meeting of the town of East Lyme Monday night in the town hall at Flanders. A total of $77,207.29 was appropriated at the meeting, which was conducted under the chairmanship of Marion R. Davis. Charles R. Tubbs was the clerk and the attendance registered was in excess of 200 persons.

It was voted to appropriate $3,000 for road building, $1,000 for road oil, $500 for purpose of blasting out ledges on the Saunders Grove road and to turn over a legacy of $250 to the town treasury.

It was voted also that the selectmen be empowered to negotiate a quit claim to the Little Boston red schoolhouse on behalf of the East Lyme Historical society.

An estimate on the cost of repairing the Saw Mill Hill road and to build a bridge also was authorized. The sum of $1,894.26 was appropriated for removing snow. The selectmen were empowered to relinquish any claim that the town holds to any part of the Old Stone Church Burial ground.

Significant with the growth of the town was a measure authorizing the selectmen to obtain estimates and measures for the purpose of establishing a building line in Main street and Pennsylvania avenue. A report on this measure will be made at the next annual meeting in September.

Among other business transacted was the voting of a refund of $385 to Fred Rohmeiler, the builder of the fire house. The refund was made to reimburse Mr. Rohmeiler for extra work due to changing the plans for the structure.

For the erection of a boulder in memory of Civil war veterans of the town $200 was appropriated. A tablet is to be placed on this stone by the Old Home Burial Ground association.

WITHDRAWAL IN $50,000 SUITS AGAINST DOCTOR

Two suits, aggregating $50,000 brought in August, 1924, by Adelene Palmer Lee against Dr. Harry M. Lee were withdrawn Tuesday without costs from the docket of the superior court, according to papers filed with Clerk George D. Parsons.

One of the suits, brought by Mrs. Lee, through her counsel, the firm of Geary, Davis & Keefe, was to set aside a quit claim deed, which the plaintiff alleged she had given to Dr. Lee. Damages of $25,000 were asked and the property belonging to the physician in Waterford, his automobile and bank account were attached. In this suit the Norwich Savings society, which held a mortgage on the property was made a defendant. The savings society demurred to this and the demurrer was sustained. This case was to have been tried first by the court regarding the equitable issues and later by a jury regarding the legal issues if the court found in favor of the plaintiff. Hall, McGuire & Hall represented the defendants but the case was withdrawn before any definite assignment had been made. With the withdrawal Tuesday, the attachments on Dr. Lee's property will be released.

The other suit, also for damages of $25,000, filed at the same time, was scheduled to have been tried before a jury in New London today (Wednesday). In this case the plaintiff sought to recover money alleged to have been paid by her for the employing of servants and for household expenses.

STATE HOSPITAL WILL HAVE SEAGRAVE PUMPER

The Norwich state hospital has purchased from the Seagrave Fire Engine company a Seagrave suburbanite type of pumper capable of pumping 700 gallons a minute. The new pumper is to be fully equipped with modern equipment. It has been purchased for the purpose of providing fire protection at the hospital.

The pumper will carry 1,000 feet of hose. Instead of the usual chemical tank it will carry two 50 gallon tanks for water so that the pumper will be able to pump water should the fire be located away from the water supply. As fast as the tanks are emptied they can be refilled with water from any supply which is not deep enough to allow direct pumping. It is expected that the pumper will arrive at the hospital in about a month's time.

SUIT ON TRIAL OVER MOTOR TRUCK DEAL

Before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury in the superior court at New London Tuesday, the trial was begun in the suit of Frank A. Rockwood of Franklin against Mack Motor Truck company. The plaintiff sues to recover $2,000 alleging that he came into an agreement when the company traded in a Sterling truck for a truck of their own make when Rockwood possessed a bill of sale on the first named truck. The defendant company denies, counterclaims for $1,000, alleging that Rockwood broke a contract to lease a truck.

Rockwood testified on the stand that in lieu of what a conditional bill of sale on a man named Squires in connection with the Sterling truck. He said that the last dealings he had with the Mack company was when he received a letter from the Hartford branch of that concern, in which the latter stated that it anticipated the sale of one of their trucks for which the Sterling was to be taken in trade. According to the witness he met the manager of the Hartford branch later and the latter wished him to release his claim on the Sterling truck, but he refused to do so, and he was then informed that the trade was already made.

Rockwood testified that he secured a writ of replevin and when he arrived in Hartford it was not served as the company surrendered the truck. Later, according to the plaintiff, the company and he entered into an agreement whereby he was to have his choice of any Mack truck over 3 1-2 tons, and that if he secured a prospect for its sale, the company would close the deal for him, if possible, and from the proceeds he was to receive the $1,500 alleged to be due him on the Sterling truck.

He testified that through a dealer whom he agreed to pay $100, he secured a prospect, the city of Norwich, which had appropriated money for two trucks. He testified that at the request of the manager of the New Haven district who was working on these sales, this project was abandoned by the plaintiff. Later, according to the plaintiff, he secured another prospect, William M. Ryan of Norwich, who finally bought two trucks of the company. When he demanded his $1,500 he did not receive it, but has been asked to have a truck delivered to him.

FORMER HEBRON RESIDENT BLUFFED HOLD-UP MAN

Nerve and bluff aided Roger W. Porter, of Springfield, formerly of Hebron, his state, in saving a considerable sum of money recently when he was held up by a highwayman, while returning with his collections for the Standard Oil company. Although threatened with a gun, Porter was able to talk the man out of his attempt and escape with his roll intact. This Mr. Porter had secreted about his body, fearing just such an occurrence. The happening took place on the outskirts of Springfield, a night or two ago, as Mr. Porter alighted from his machine to adjust a chain.

SUIT OF $3,000 IS WITHDRAWN FROM COURT

The $3,000 damage suit of Josephine Druger of New London against Eugene Nugent of the same place, which was assigned for trial in the superior court at New London Tuesday, has been withdrawn without costs.

The suit was brought to recover damages for injuries received in an automobile accident May 26, 1923, on the Hartford turnpike near the George Avery farm. It was alleged that defendant's car ran into the plaintiff's and then drove away from the scene of the accident.

DIAMOND BROTHERS' PAL SEEKS GOV. SMITH'S AID

At Albany Monday, Governor Smith listened for two hours to John E. Ilusion, former district attorney of Queens, and Judge Robert S. Johnstone, formerly of the general sessions court plead for executive clemency to Anthony J. Pantano, convicted slayer, who is scheduled to die in the electric chair on Thursday night; and then for one hour the executive heard Joseph B. Gallagher, the assistant district attorney of Kings, argue against a commutation of sentence.

Pantano was convicted with Morris and Joseph Diamond and John Farina for the murder of two Brooklyn bank messengers in November, 1923. The court of appeals upheld the convictions of the Diamond Brothers and Farina, but granted Pantano a new trial. The second time he was tried the jury disagreed. The third time he was convicted and the decision upheld by the court of appeals by a vote of four to three. The Diamonds and Farina were executed after Governor Smith had refused to interfere.

Governor Smith reserved decision Monday.

The Pantano case has Windham county interest for the reason that Morris Diamond served a term in the Brooklyn, Conn., county jail, having been convicted for beating up a Windham county property owner who objected to Diamond's trespassing on his property and looting his orchard. Diamond was riding through that section on some mysterious errand, which included a visit to a house nearby.

PARISIANS USE PROHIBITION AS WEAPON AGAINST TAXES

Cafes and Bars Were Cosed Temporarily in Obedience to Orders of the Merchant Syndicates—With the Exception of Few Department Stores Business Generally Was Suspended as a Strike Measure—City Had the Appearance of Sunday as Cafes and Restaurants Closed For Two Hours—Protest Taxing of City Tradespeople More Heavily Than the Farmer.

PARIS, March 3—(AP)—Paris felt the [illegible] kind of prohibition for two [illegible] this afternoon, and probably for the first time in the city's history it was impossible to buy a drink, the cafes and bars having obeyed the orders of the merchant syndicates to close down in protest against the financial measures instituted by parliament, retroactive taxes and the taxing of the tradespeople more heavily than the farmer.

The cafes formed only a small percentage of the total places which closed, but the prompt shutting down of restaurants at 3 o'clock probable caused more anguish in the breasts of many than anything else in the long proceedings. Paris had a Sunday appearance from noon until [illegible] and it was almost a dead [illegible] from 2 to 4.

[illegible] of the strike was clergymen. If half-hearted. A few [illegible] department stores remained open from the fashionable shops in the Rue de Rivoli and Faubourg [illegible] the workmen's cafes were the outskirts of the city. The tobacco shops being under government license could not shut down, but solved the problem by screening off the bars from the tobacco counters with a barricade of chairs.

The strike was observed in a majority of the towns and cities throughout France, but with rather quiet results.

FRENCH SOCIALISTS LOSE FIGHT FOR CAPITAL LEVY

PARIS, March 3—(AP)—The socialists today lost their fight for a capital levy as a substitute for the government financial measures in the chamber of deputies, after which the lower house took a recession of the Senate as sent back from the senate.

The irreconcilables of the radical-socialist groups repudiated their leaders with surrender to the senate. The leaders of the coalition replied that it was necessary for parliament to do [illegible] to restore France's finances and that the minority could not eternally stand out against the measures presented by the government which were approved by the senate, unless it decided to overthrow the cabinet.

Men who put their muscles to the strain of hard exercise have learned a quick, sure way of taking out pain and stiffness.

"In my training work," writes a well-known athlete, "I have used Sloan's Liniment for the past five years and found it most effective for soreness caused by vigorous exercise. Also an incomparable remedy for stiff neck." (Name and address of writer given on request.)

It is marvelous how ache and stiffness in lame muscles yield to the magic of Sloan's. Just a little patted on lightly, and healing new blood tingles through the hurt place.

Away go "fatigue-poisons." New tissue gets needed nourishment. Sore muscles limber up and stop aching. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

JEWETT CITY

AUTO OVERTURNED BUT DRIVER ESCAPED INJURY

JEWETT CITY, March 3—Albert Dawley had plenty of good fortune with him Wednesday morning as he was coming to work in Jewett City. When in the Woodward school house curve the brake lining of his automobile worked loose causing the rear wheel to jam, with the result that the machine was thrown nearly cross-wise of the road. Mr. Dawley was thrown out, but escaped without injury. The machine turned over a couple of times, coming to rest in a vacant lot beside the road with the wheels in the air.

Edward Ashey, who is at Backus hospital, was reported as very much improved on Wednesday. Mrs. Ashey and son have gone to Plainfield to remain for a time.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Slater library, the following officers were re-elected: Dr. George H. Jennings, president; Edward A. Faust, vice president; Arthur D. Tripp, secretary and treasurer; Miss Mabel Wilcox, librarian; Dr. Jennings, Mr. Faust, and Mr. Tripp, executive committee.

The increasing number of advertisements in this column each week, gives indisputable evidence that consideration of this medium is giving satisfaction to those who wish to present their needs to nearly 3,000 daily readers of The Bulletin in Jewett City and vicinity.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Missionary society was held Tuesday afternoon in the church vestry with an attendance of 19 members. Mrs. A. M. Brown presided and much business was transacted. Besides the annual reports from the secretary and treasurer, there was a report on the White Cross work accomplished for the year. Mrs. E. M. Swift reported the sum collected from the missionary cards and Miss Ida I. Foster gave a report on the Golden anniversary fund. The various reports showed the mission society had prospered and progressed during the year, greater interest being evidenced in mission work, and the meetings well attended. An exhibition of the White Cross work, was not only of much interest, but served to prove the commendable activity of the society's members. The officers elected for 1926 are: Mrs. A. M. Brown, president; Mrs. S. F. Brown, vice president; Mrs. John Harris, secretary; Mrs. Martin Davis, treasurer; Mrs. G. H. Prior, auditor. Enjoyable missionary games were followed by tea and wafers served by Mrs. A. M. Brown.

At the meeting of the Town Nurse committee Miss Brennan's report for the month of February showed 130 Metropolitan visits to adults and 24 baby cases, total, 154; other visits to adults, 32; deliveries, 5; total, 37; amount received from Metropolitan, $103.50; from others, 29.25; total $125.-75. The town nurse is ready to respond to any call day or night and at any hour.

During the early hours of Wednesday morning, the weather man spread a one inch blanket of new snow in this section. A resident remarked that in his farming days, such snows were always called "poor man's fertilizer." Of late years this story is scientifically exploded. "Nevertheless," he adds, "that doesn't impair it's value to the land one bit."

MERIDEN MAN KILLED BY POLICE AT PALATKA, FLA.

MERIDEN, March 3—(AP)—Theodore Gradzinski, alias Grundy, is, whose home is here, was shot and killed by a police officer last Saturday at Palatka, Fla., according to a special despatch to the Meriden Record.

Discovered in a store by Officer Jenkins, he jumped through a plate glass window in trying to escape. Failing to halt when one shot was fired as a warning he was struck in the head by a second, and died instantly. Grudinskki's career in crime started here when he was nine years old. He was arrested six times between March 20, 1917 and December 1, 1921, during which time he spent many months in the state school for boys here.

He left Meriden last fall and recently had been working in a Florida orange grove. The officer who shot him was upheld in an official inquiry of his act.

Coal Settlement Credited To R. F. Grant

Richard F. Grant, 1925 President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and President of the Susquehanna Collieries Company, is given credit by both sides for the settlement of the coal strike. He began to interest himself in the situation February 6, and a series of conferences between him and the leaders of the two factions, resulted in the Philadelphia meeting and final settlement of the [illegible] strike.

PRIESTS FROM MEXICO ARE PENNILESS AND HOMESICK

NEW YORK, March 3—(AP)—Penniless and homesick, ten priests and nuns and four Marist Brothers, the first Roman Catholic clergy to reach this country after being expelled from Mexico, arrived tonight on the Royal Spanish Mail liner Leon III.

They told of being seized in their homes, of being forced to leave without gathering any possessions, and of being quartered in the storage with pigs on the vessel on which they sailed from Mexico.

Despite the action of the government, masses are being said and prayers offered in dark celars by the priests who escaped the expulsion order, according to Rev. Epideforo Martinez, formerly of Merida, Yucatan.

"They did not give us time to take even our breviaries," he said. "We could gather together no clothes. We have no money. They made us come as they found us."

"My own experience is typical. I was eating dinner at my seminary when the police called. I was dressed in non-clerical clothes because in Mexico we are not allowed to wear our robes on the street. They told me I was under arrest. Their pistols showed they meant what they said.

"Giving me no time to collect any of my belongings, they took me first to the jail and then onto a boat where I, with several others, was quartered with pigs. That ship was on its way to Havana, and for one day I rode with the swine until the captain heard we were on board and moved us to the first class quarters. At Havana we were placed on the Leon III bound for Spain."

One young priest said he was marched along the streets with big guns pointed at him. A crowd of men and women, near the jail, hooted the police, who beat them with clubs and turned fire hose on them.

RAILROAD DETECTIVE FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 3—(AP)—Dock Lee Stone, former railroad detective, was convicted of manslaughter tonight in the shooting to death of Joseph Iskra in the Lehigh Valley Railroad yards in Bayonne last October. Joseph and his brother, Andrew, were slain while carrying three bags of coke from a railroad siding. The verdict was reached after the jury had deliberated about four hours.

Stone was immediately sentenced by Judge Daniel T. O'Regan to the maximum penalty of from six years eight months to ten years in state prison and a fine of $1,000.

Assistant Prosecutor Aloysius McMahon, who directed the state's case against Stone, immediately announced his dissatisfaction with the verdict.

Stone also is indicted for the murder of Andrew Iskra who died in the Bayonne hospital of bullet wounds two days after the shooting. Assistant Prosecutor McMahon notified the court tonight that he would at once move to try Stone on the second murder indictment.

"In my opinion," said McMahon, "this defendant is guilty of first degree murder. I believe he deliberately, wilfully and premeditatedly killed the younger brother. There was absolutely no provocation for the act. It was one of the most horrible murders perpetrated within my recollection."

"The two boys were shot down because they stole $1.20 worth of coke. Both were slain in cold blood and I shall move the trial on the second indictment for murder as soon as possible."

Twenty-one witnesses were called by the state and fourteen testified for the defense.

FIGHTS FOR EXCLUSION OF COUNTESS KAROLYI

WASHINGTON, March 3—(AP)—For more than an hour today Secretary Kellogg waged a determined fight before the senate foreign relations committee against new action by congress which would shear him of the authority under which he excluded Countess Karolyi from the United States.

Asked by Senator Johnson, republican, California, if he desired to explain his reasons which prompted him to keep out of the country the wife of the first president of the republic of Hungary, the secretary of state begged to be excused. He explained that much of the information on which he acted was obtained from confidential sources and that to disclose it would only to embarrass the department.

Secretary Kellogg appeared before his former colleagues primarily to oppose the bill of Chairman Borah which would repeal the wartime acts under which visitors could be denied admission to the United States. He had several sharp exchanges with Senator Borah and other members of the committee.

The conference between Mr. Kellogg and the committee was held behind closed doors, but a transcript of the proceedings was taken and Chairman Borah said the committee might decide to make that public at some later time. Meanwhile, senators declined to go into details of what transpired.

Upon emerging from the committee room, the secretary refused to make any statement. He returned immediately to the state department.

Members of the committee appeared to be undetermined as to what effect the secretary's declination to discuss the Karolyi case would have upon the fate of the resolution of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, proposing a senate investigation of the action of the state department.

Too Tired To Go Out Nights? Beware of Chronic Fatigue

Thousands of men and women think that it is because they work too hard that they are "all-in" every evening—too tired to go out to a show, or to play with their children—when in the great majority of cases the real cause of their weak, worn-out feeling is that they are victims of chronic fatigue.

Don't confuse chronic fatigue with the "healthy" fatigue you feel after vigorous exercise. Chronic fatigue comes from within. Your organs and muscles have become debilitated due to lack of sufficient organic iron in your blood.

TOO TIRED to go to the movies

To conquer chronic fatigue you must strengthen your system by restoring this organic iron to your blood. But don't take the older mineral iron medicines which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like that in spinach and lentils. Unlike ordinary mineral iron it will not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach, but is promptly assimilated.

Take Nuxated Iron for just 2 weeks and you'll be astonished how that miserable, tired feeling vanishes, and you feel stronger and better in every way. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON TO HAVE MODERN TOURIST'S CAMP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, March 3—A motor tourists' camp, with free parking space, free wood, free water, is in prospect for this town the coming touring season. The camp will be electrically lighted. The project has the endorsement of the Danielson Chamber of Commerce and the backing of a citizen who is financially responsible. The camp will border one of the much traveled trunk lines that intersect at Danielson and very likely will be the means of enticing many a tired driver and his party to halt and accept the hospitality of this town for the night—maybe for a longer stay.

The Chamber of Commerce sees in the plan an aid to its program of boosting this town, its business interests and the prospect of interesting people in locating manufacturing or other enterprises here.

By a turn of fate, Danielson appears destined to enjoy such advantages as have accrued to railroad junction towns in other days. Danielson is a junction town today—a junction town for those who travel over state highways, and such highways, at least in this particular section of southern New England, carry more passengers every day than ride over railroad lines through this territory in a week. An aeroplane that streaked through the skies over Danielson as this was being written suggests also that this community is directly under what seems destined to be one of the most important air routes in this part of the country.

With its motor camp site developed and its auxiliary landing field for planes in use, Danielson will have its stage set to get such prizes, commercially, as await towns similarly favored in this age of fast and new transportation systems.

The camp site talked of will be no make-shift affair. It will be of a nature to tempt a driver to stop, a camp after the type of those encountered in New York and northern New England, where getting tourists to stop and allowing them to spend the wealth they are out to spend has been reduced to a productive science.

In addition to the camp site matter, other things considered at Tuesday evening's meeting of the chamber of commerce at the Attawaugan hotel, about twenty attending the gathering, included the matter of state highway development between Elmville and East Killingly and the improvement of the highway from Danielson to Goodyear via Maple street. It appeared to be the sense of the meeting that the chamber should concentrate on getting a long delayed state highway from Elmville or Dayville Four Corners to East Killingly. Upkeep of such a highway would be borne by the state. This having been accomplished, the town then might turn its attention to developing the Maple street route to Goodyear, an expensive route to develop and of no small financial consequence to maintain. However, such money as now goes into the East Killingly road could be devoted to the Goodyear route.

The chamber voted, through adoption of a resolution, to request the warden and court of burgesses to enact an ordinance, requiring the clearing of sidewalks after snowfalls. Such a rule was in force here for years, but it is understood to have been repealed. Laxity in some quarters as to cleaning walks during the heavy weather of February is believed to have led to the presentation of the resolution.

The chamber keeps its interest keen also attracting new industries for this town and now has negotiations on with a manufacturer to bring his business to this community. It was reported to the meeting that the recent Dollar day was a success.

Having acquired, some time since, the Westfield Congregational church parsonage on Broad street for the development of a Masonic home, Masonic bodies of Danielson have proceeded with certain incorporation proceedings that will precede the actual enlargement and occupation of the property. The Masonic Building corporation has as directors, Judge Saxlin S. Russell, Attorney Elbert L. Darbie, Postmaster E. H. Reach, A. M. Thompson and L. E. Young.

The Square and Compass Club, Inc., also has organized with A. M. Thompson as president, Roland H. Gray as vice-president, Sidney W. Bard as secretary-treasurer and the following directors: A. M. Thompson, Irving W. Davis, Roland H. Gray, Harry Breakley and Frank E. Kennedy.

All the Masonic bodies of Danielson will have quarters in the Masonic home. The club also will be located there. An addition is to be built at the rear of the parsonage for lodge rooms and other purposes and the parsonage as it is today subjected to such changes as will meet requirements.

Present quarters in the Exchange block, where a lease with considerable time yet to run is held, will not be vacated until the new home is developed and ready for occupancy. It is anticipated that the expenditures to be made by the Masonic bodies in developing their new home may run as high as $20,000.

Chief John McFarland slipped a dollar to a coach driver out of here for Willimantic Wednesday morning to pay the fare of Oscar Dubois, 15, of that city, backto relatives and friends and such paternal advise and admonition as might be awaiting him. Young Dubois walked from Willimantic to Danielson Tuesday, evidently feeling the urge of spring, without telling the folks back home just where he was bound, if he knew himself. He was picked up by Officer John Gebert during Tuesday night. It appeared from what Chief McFarland learned about the youth Wednesday morning that his

PUTNAM

JURY BRINGS VERDICT IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFF

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 3—After forty minutes deliberation the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff in the suit of the trustee of the bankrupt estate of G. Harold Gilpatric against Mrs. Rosa Lavine. Court was re-convened at 10.45 this morning and Judge Dickenson read his charge which consumed fifteen minutes.

The testimony in the case was flatly contradictory, G. Harold Gilpatric upon whose testimony the plaintiff relied, said that he had loaned $2,500 to Mrs. Lavine and taken her notes in payment, one for $1,000 and three others for $500 each. Mrs. Lavine denied this absolutely. She said that she had saved $2,000, using an empty can, which she kept buried in her garden, as her bank. Her first deposit in it was $400. From her wages as an employe of the French River Textile company and from the money paid her by lodgers she kept adding to this amount. She would dig up the can as often as once a month, sometimes more frequently, and add to her nest egg. When the amount reached $2,000, all in small bills, none larger than $20, she took it to Mr. Gilpatric and left it with him for safe keeping. When asked why she did not deposit it in the bank in the regular way she said that her neighbors were sore at her for building a store room on a residential street, and that "she was afraid they would get out an injunction on the money."

A few months later, she said, she got it back from him in four equal amounts, that the first installment was $500 and not $1,000 as Mr. Gilpatric had testified, and that she had signed four papers but she thought she was signing receipts, not notes disappearance had given his relatives hours of worry and that they had little sleep because of him during Tuesday night.

Next Monday evening members of Killingly grange are invited to neighbor with Putnam grange and to give part of the program. That Killingly grange is active and full o flife is indicated by that fact that 70 people were out for this week's meeting and to enjoy an excellent program arranged by Frank L. Bennett, himself a popular entertainer.

The program included the following numbers: Saxophone solo, Nathan Cook; guitar and vocal solo, Joseph Heselton; vocal solo, Miss Mabel Frink, Patchaug grange; reading, Frank L. Bennett; vocal solo, Yolando Carmelo.

By vote of the grange Waldo Wood was awarded first prize for the most interesting news item brought in and read to the grange during the past few weeks, second prize to Harriet L. Wood and third prize to Miss Helen Heath.

Instruction in the secret work and grange usage was given by the master and lecturer. Mr. and Mrs. Alton Eldridge furnished music for dancing at the close of the meeting.

Of interest to grangers is the action of the executive committee of the Windham County Agricultural society, conducting the annual Brooklyn fair, in voting that a common working design should be furnished all the granges making an exhibit at the fair this year. A special committee was appointed to name the design, this committee being composed of Charles A. Downs, chairman, Mrs. Cora Hawes of Canterbury, Irving Frink of Brooklyn, George H. Hamilton of Woodstock, Mrs. Carrie M. Gardner of Plainfield. The committee met at Plainfield last Saturday and after weighing the merits of 22 suggestions offered by the various members of the committee finally selected as the design Country Life. The thought of the committee was that the granges might thus give a visual presentation of the value of rural life.

At a private funeral service for Theodore E. Fulton, Civil war veteran, at his home on Academy street, Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, Rev. C. J. Armstrong of the Baptist church officiated. There was a delegation in attendance from McGregor post, G. A. R., of which Mr. Fulton had been a member for many years. The bearers were members of Colonel Edward Anderson camp, Sons of Veterans, Everett Colvin, DeForest Wells, J. Elmer Kean and Frank Stimson. The body was entombed at Westfield cemetery. A. F. Wood was the funeral director.

A passing motor car flicked a stone or piece of ice from the surface of Main street during Tuesday night and crashed it through a plate glass window in the F. X. Bernier store.

Nathan D. Prince of Hartford was in Danielson Wednesday to be with his mother, Mrs. Frank Prince, who is very critically ill with pneumonia.

George Clapp, long a resident of Foster Center, R. I., a few miles east of here, died at his home in that place Wednesday.

Danielson basketball fans who went to Webster Tuesday night to see what promised to be a splendid game between the Celtics of New York and the Brooklyn, N. Y., team had one of the grave disappointments of the sports experience. It appears that each team was booked for a game at Webster without being told the identity of the opposing team. When Brooklyn found they were matched against the Celtics, they refused to play, there being some technicality concerning the Celtics' standing in basketball circles down in New York. A crowded house, keenly disappointed at all efforts to get the teams in action, got their money back.

Of interest to Danielson people is the superior court case on trial in Putnam Wednesday in which an effort of a relative is being made to break the will of Daniel Conney, for many years a resident of the West Side.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Call, who have been in Florida since the latter part of January, have returned to Danielson and re-opened their Broad street home.

March was not so good Wednesday, with its snow flurries, clouds and chilling winds.

In addition to the routine business transacted by the selectmen at their regular meeting Wednesday they reappointed Deputy Sheriff Charles F. Ayer as dog warden for the town of Killingly.

Henry Burton was reported ill on Wednesday.

She is unable to read English, she testified, so that the total was $2,000 and not $2,500.

In his charge Judge Dickenson referred to the fact that Gilpatric had confessed to being an embezzler, and was serving a sentence for it, but despite that his testimony was entitled to consideration. You, as jurors, he said, have a right to weigh the testimony of the two principal witnesses, consider the effect that your verdict would have on each, as well as judge of the manner in which the testimony was given. If you believe, he said, that the defendant saved $2,000 in one year, kept it concealed in a can buried in her garden, which she dug up at intervals, turned the amounts over to Mr. Gilpatric without any evidence of indebtedness, and then signed four notes under the impression that she was signing receipts, you should bring in a verdict for the defendant.

The jury evidently did not take that view of it as their verdict was for the amount asked for $2,500 and interest to date amounting to $223.

The case of Ellen Cooney Callahan, an appeal from probate, was to have been tried in superior court Wednesday but it was settled by the attorneys, and an adjournment was taken until next Tuesday, March 9. The jury was excused until Tuesday of the following week, March 16.

The city council at its regular monthly meeting indorsed the plans of the water commissioners for improving the water system. At a previous meeting the water board had outlined the immediate needs and asked for authority to make them. They consist of building a storage reservoir, the site for which is already owned by the city, which, with its connecting pipes, will cost $117,000; the replacing of a forty year old main on Main street at a cost of $22,500, and laying larger mains and pipes in the vicinity of the Putnam Foundry, at a cost of $11,000.

A resident of Putnam or Woodstock appeared before the council and asked if the city could extend him any relief in digging him out from the snow under which he has been buried since the blizzard of three weeks ago. He said that the road which passes his house and which is blocked with snow and ice, is in the town of Woodstock and his house is just across the line in Putnam, and that he pays his taxes there. The road was completely blocked by the recent heavy snowfall. He made the fact known to the Woodstock authorities but they decided that it meant the removal of too much snow to justify the expenditure for the benefit of one person and he not a resident of the town. The council reached a similar decision, that this city was not justified in cleaning the snow from Woodstock roads.

A. Bonneville was granted permission to erect another story to his house on Green street. The local Red Cross society asked for an appropriation of $750 for the coming year. A financial statement showed that the annual expenses amounted to $2,500. The matter was referred.

There were 20 arrests during January according to the report of Captain of Police Jarvis, of which 16 were for drunkenness. Ten were sent to jail, four paid fines and costs amounting to $227.74.

Joseph Page was elected as a patrolman to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Officer Ryan. It is alleged that there were ten applicants for the position.

At a meeting of the senior class of the Putnam high school, it was voted to wear caps and gowns for the graduation exercises to be held in June. The color of the cap and gown is to be grey, as is usual in school of this kind and distinctive from the black worn by colleges.

The exhibit in the Cargill Trust company's window by the National Rhea company of Putnam is worthy of the attention of every citizen in the community. The exhibit shows the raw material, which is real Japanese grass and the various processes it goes through to reach the finished product.

John Chaffee of Bridgeport, who died recently at his home there, of pneumonia, was a brother of Mrs. Myra Chaffee Manson of this city, and was well known in this vicinity. Mrs. Chaffee is very ill with the same disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howe of Walpole, Mass., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Amidon of Thompson.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Wright, of Stafford Springs have been guests of friends in the city. Dr. Wright was a dentist in Putnam for a number of years but moved to Stafford Springs six months ago.

A meeting of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., is to be held next Monday in Odd Fellows hall. The speaker will be Miss Mary F. Potter, of the Americanization department of the Connecticut state board of education, who will talk on Work Among Adult Aliens in Connecticut. Music will be provided by an orchestra of children from the school, chiefly from Pomfret, under the direction of Miss Ash and led by Ensor Danielson.

Gifts for Ellis Island are to be received for the last time this year. Among the articles especially solicited are stamped goods for embroidery, embroidery silks and cotton, needles and new cotton cloth and outing flannel. Money is also very acceptable.

The head of the largest moose shot in New Brunswick during the 1925 season, finely mounted, has been received by E. C. Rogers, landlord at the Putnam inn. Mr. Rogers killed the animal while on a hunting trip last fall. The horns have a spread of 65 1-2 inches and the moose who wore them weighed more than 1,400 pounds. This mammoth head will adorn a wall at the Putnam inn.

THE NICKEL PLATE MERGER

For years the so-called Nickel Plate merger has been in the works. [illegible] the Nickel Plate, the Erie, the Wabash and Chesapeake & Ohio and Hocking Valley roads and the Pere Marquette railroad. The bringing of the various systems into one large system and the financial plan for making it about must of necessity have the approval of the interstate commerce commission.

In rendering its decision the interstate commerce commission does not disapprove of the idea of bringing these roads together into one system, but it does disapprove the financial plan by which it would have been put under the plan there would have been injustice done to the stockholders of the Chesapeake & Ohio and Hocking Valley roads and because of this modification is withheld.

This of course means that those who are back of the merger must give consideration to the weakness which the commission has pointed out and through a study of the decision [illegible] new plan being [illegible] the consolidation.

For a long time the grouping of railroads has been urged. This is the first one to be undertaken and it is unfortunate that it should have been attempted in a manner that could not receive endorsement. Nevertheless it has been shown that it is impossible to effect such combinations in any old manner. There are the interests of those [illegible] interested as well as the welfare of the country at stake and the interstate commerce commission has demonstrated that it had a responsibility and is prepared to assume it and [illegible]

It is [illegible] those who are [illegible] with the merger will [illegible] over the decision of the commission and make haste to [illegible] on the financial structure. The [illegible] dissenting opinion [illegible] seem [illegible] opinion of the [illegible] and in fact indicated [illegible] be complied [illegible]

If public sentiment demands an improvement and a clean up there is no doubt that it will be accomplished. Chicago needs a rigorous bit of self help.

OUR FOREIGN MARKET

When Director Klein of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce points out the manner in which this country has developed foreign markets and makes an appeal for an increase in funds for his bureau that it may keep in closer touch with the foreign field for the benefit of manufacturers it is apparent that he is deeply interested in the success of his bureau. Much has been done, but he is desirous of doing more. He is mindful of the fact that while there was a time when we had the foreign field almost solely to ourselves that situation does not prevail today. Other countries are better able to supply the foreign demands than they were and with that in mind Director Klein seeks to make our foreign service more efficient.

It is not simply a case of extending our activities but of keeping an eye on and keeping up with our competitors. We have reached the time when we must bear in mind that the war is over and that other nations in their efforts to get back to normalcy are putting forth all possible endeavor to get the market.

Director Klein was speaking before the appropriatins committee of the house of representatives. He pointed out among other things that our large loans to other countries should be continued and declared that they would be of much assistance in enlarging our verseas trade if proper care is exercised. It is no secret that trade very often follows the channel through which the loans are obtained, some nations in fact requiring that a certain portion of the loans be spent in the country from which they are obtained.

The importance of the foreign trade is not to be disregarded. If the additional appropriation sought is within reason it would appear a wise thing to grant for the purpose of not only retaining the existing grip on the foreign market but of keeping abreast of our competitors who are already there and making a justifiable bid for more business.

EXTENDING THE WHITE WAY

The decision and the plans for the extension of the white way so as to include Franklin street, as far as Oak street, and Bath street are to be commended. This was originally contemplated and the only reason the work was not done when the present white way was established was the lack of funds. That that situation no longer prevails is gratifying.

For a long time the lower end of Franklin street has suffered from the lack of light. The new type of street lights served to help the situation somewhat but it is time that this business street and one of the main thoroughfares leading to the center should be as well lighted as others in its vicinity. Business development has followed the improvement in this street and more is even now underway.

The same is true of Bath street which has within the past few years become one of the active business streets of the city. It is likewise the short cut for much traffic and in the handling of the large number of automobiles and the many persons crossing the streets it is highly important that the thoroughfares be adequately lighted.

In the interest of safety for the pedestrians and the better handling of motor vehicle traffic the white way will be extremely valuable when the proposed extensions are completed. Likewise the improved appearance of the streets through proper lighting cannot fail to be an added asset to the city, for it must not be forgotten that the appearance of the streets, whether brightly lighted or dim and dingy, make a favorable or unfavorable impression. The change cannot be made any too soon.

APPALLING FIGURES

When the department of commerce sets forth the result of the study it makes concerning traffic accidents and fatalities, it furnishes facts and figures which indicate how alarming is the toll exacted by motor vehicles.

We shudder at the thousands who are killed in war and fhsist that there shall be no more war and yet we seem to be almost unmindful of the fact that there were 123,500 persons killed in automobile accidents since 1917. Last year there were 24,000 killed or almost a fifth of the total for the eight years. Large as each year's total is, the succeeding one is always larger. So that it can be expected that this year there will be more than 25,000 persons killed in auto accidents.

In spite of all the campaigns that have been undertaken for the purpose of changing this situation it still continues. So far as we can see it undergoes no change from year to year. There are more automobiles and there are more deaths. This of course means that there continues to be too many reckless drivers and too many children and other pedestrians who are unmindful of their own safety.

Most of the accidents are avoidable and if the proper care was taken, the rights of others respected and the rules of the road observed there would be no such appalling death list each year. Carelessness and recklessness are responsible for too many of the yearly record but it is taking a long time for that fact to seep into the brains of those who drive death cars.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Happy is the man who has made his income tax return.

Did you get away with your share of the 825,000 tons of candy consumed in this country last year?

Perhaps the fellow who said "perspiration generally pays good dividends" had snow shoveling in mind.

Just because there is no restriction placed on the wind, there are those who seem to think they have the same speed privileges.

This is the month when the boys should be deeply interested in kite flying. It is a sport that accompanies the March winds.

Chicago has at last come to the conclusion that it needs help in keeping the gunmen away. No community gets rid of a pest by encouraging it.

If every unexpected smile these days can be attributed to the decrease in federal taxation, every frown may be attributed to the burden of local taxation.

Those New York coal dealers who are demanding a dollar above the prestrike price for anthracite seem to think the consumer has nothing to do but stand and pay.

It is going to be a serious blow to the democratic campaign if Senator Walsh cannot find something to investigate and especially something concerning Secretary Mellon.

It is a sizeable sum that is paid to the state each year through the gasoline tax. And that means a proper contribution to the highway work by those for whom it is done.

LOST LABOR

"I think," said Loretta, "that when people introduce you to their friends and relatives they ought to tell you something about them, don't you?"

"It all depends," declared her brother. "There are some of my relatives that I'd just as soon keep dark if I possibly could."

"I'd like to know whom you mean!" cried Loretta indignantly. "We've the best relatives of anybody and I defy you to prove me wrong."

"Too lazy to try," drawled her brother. "But go on, tell me what sort of pickle you got into by not asking questions about somebody's family. I can imagine that you said it wasn't exactly nice to have your brothers in the penitentiary and then discovered that the gentleman had six sons there. It may even have been worse than that, so don't keep me in suspense any longer. I never know what you are going to do next and I quite confidently expect to have to bail you out for speeding or anything else short of murder some day. What was it this time?"

"I was with Jean," Loretta explained. "We'd been shopping together and we happened to meet Laura in the middle of the afternoon. So the three of us went to the movies ,such a thriller that we were still excited when the thing was over and we came out into the light. Then the first thing we knew we were lost and actually had to ask our way of a police officer. We had come out a different door from the one we went in and we were busy talking."

"No!" interrupted her brother, amazed. "Really!"

"And we didn't look where we were going," Loretta went on unheeding. "Each one of us trusting to the others to turn the right way. Well, we made quite a lark of it and had so much fun that Laura said she did wish we'd come home with her to dinner and help cheer up an old aunt who lives with her and is almost always the saddest possible creature. Laura said she herself ran out of cheerful things to say to her and the result was that they had very dull and solemn meals together. She urged us so strongly that Jean and I phoned to our homes that we'd not be there for dinner and went along with Laura."

"The young creature of today is so irresponsible!" sighed her brother. "How can we keep our girls at home and happy?"

"Laura said her aunt was always worrying about her when she was away from the house, imagining all sorts of things that might happen to her," Loretta continued. "So Jean and I decided we'd amuse her with a tale of the afternoon and all the things that might have happened to us, making quite a funny story out of it, we thought. When we reached the house Laura introduced us to the aunt, who was sitting in the sitting room."

"The old folk know what's the proper thing," said her brother approvingly. "Now a modern woman would have been dining in the dining room or parling in the parlor and it would n't have been as seemly somehow."

"She appeared to be a pleasant sort of person, who greeted us nicely and looked like a dear little old grandmother of the old days," Loretta said. "And after a minute Laura excused herself to go out to the kitchen, giving us a farewell glance that meant for us to begin being just as funny as we knew how, so that her aunt would be all cheered up by the time dinner was ready.

"We set to work at once, laughing every now and then to show that the whole thing was a joke, first Jean and then I, each one telling something dreadfully funny about the day's experiences. We began with the story of the movie and then went on with our own tale, adding quite a little to it to make it bright and sparkling. She listened to us most attentively but try as we might a lot of our jokes went right over her head and she didn't laugh at the ones we thought the best. We worked awfully hard and didn't pause till we heard Laura coming to announce dinner."

"You were some heroines," laughed her brother. "I hope the lady appreciated all your trouble."

"The moment we stopped speaking," chuckled Loretta, "she said that it was no doubt very entertaining, but she was deaf as a post and hadn't heard a word!"—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Garbage Collection in Norwich

Mr. Editor: The writer is not a citizen of this town, only a visitor, and has no legal or other right to criticize. This being a windy day, it was his fate to walk down what is called Main street in this town. Garbage, ashes, waste were being collected by a city department.

The cans and containers of waste are passed to a man on a wagon or truck. He picks them up, flourishes them about with a technic all his own. The street is filled with ashes, sputa, excrement, garbage, waste, in cans and fine dust, a cloud bigger than the ordinary house. A well dressed, pretty lady passes—is opposite the cart—when all this happens. Her well dressed figure is nicely decorated with every sort of filth imaginable. Even a city employe suffers, a so called "cop" gets his eyes full of this mess and must go to get relief from those capable of giving it. The writer stands and lets the cloud of rottenness pass, but asks to himself these questions. Why does a modern American city suffer such indignity? Where is the health officer who must daily see such things? Why are taxes paid for such results?

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, who has accepted an offer of the presidency of Fisk university, at Nashville, Tenn., is a native of Indiana, and was graduated from Earlham college in that state in 1912. The university is the oldest institution in the south for the higher education of negroes and has become internationally known through the Fisk university jubilee singers. Stories That Recall Others

Full of Static

Small boys are great burdens to nervous mothers. One mother, driven to distraction over the antics of her son, finally exclaimed after many vain attempts to quiet his noise and to stop his wiggles:

"Sonny, what in the world is the matter with you?"

This was the answer: "I don't know, mamma, unless I'm just full of static."

When the Dog is the Goat

Mr. and Mrs. A had become dissatisfied with the city and moved to the country. Both of them were pleased with the change, as they were lovers of animals and had made many pets of the stock on the farm. After everything was running along smoothly Mrs. A went to visit her parents some distance away.

She had been there a few days when she received a letter from her husband which ended: "Stay as long as you want to dear. I am getting along splendidly. Among the numerous things I did this morning was to churn. It did not come quite up to the standard, for it was on the cracker jake order, rather puffy like. I was rather undecided what to do with it, so I spread some on a piece of bread and gave it to the dog. It didn't seem to hurt him any, so now I am eating it."

From Small Beginnings

Winslow Homer, the Lithographer's Boy, a Great American Painter

With the soldiers in the Civil war was a young man 27 years of age, sent out by Harper's Weekly as a war artist and correspondent. The pictures that he sent to New York from the front were so realistic that they touched the heart of all who saw them. When he sat down in camp to make his sketches, or to conclude work that he had laid out, groups of soldiers gathered around him and watched in admiration.

"How's that, boys?" he would say as he held the pictures up.

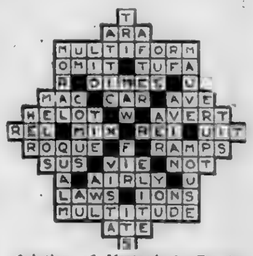
From the chorus would come approval, and almost always suggestions for further realistic detail. Because he accepted such suggestions he made his pictures come "hot from the front" because he himself experienced hardships and dangers, and sympathized deeply with the men, he gave his pictures a pathos that reached the heart.

Before the Civil war, Winslow Homer, a Boston boy, had tried his best to make himself an artist. After he had gained some ordinary education in the schools he had gone to work for a lithographer, and had found that work a school much to his liking. He had always liked to make sketches, and the lithographer's work gave him the opportunity to learn much about the art of making pictures. Furthermore, it brought him into contact with artists, with whom he talked.

"What makes a good picture?" he kept asking of artist after artist.

Out of their answers and out of his own ideas, founded on practical observation in a picture-making shop, he evolved his theories. He had supplemented all this by going to evening school and studying drawing there. When the war broke out he had no difficulty in convincing Harper's Weekly that it needed his pictures. He had the rare gift of putting life on paper—of making his pictures speak. He had worked so long copying lithography and for wood engravers that he had no longer any desire to continue imitating anyone. He wished to produce life, and the heart of life, in a way that would touch the people. This he did through the civil war.

Then he went to Europe for further study, exhibiting his pictures, and found himself famous. Until his death, at 74, he continued to reproduce life, and he won the highest fame as an artist.



Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom cure piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at Lee & Osgood Co., who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Little Talks on Thrift

DON'T BE A DRIFTER

"At the present time I am making 25 a month and I guess if I tried hard enough I could save a little. I did save enough last year to buy a used car, but I am tired of this town. I want to see more of the world."

These quotations are from a letter recently received from a young man who, with his young wife, lives in one of our great American cities.

Thousands of youths in this country are struggling with the same problem. The great world, which lies beyond the horizon of their daily routine, is calling to them insistently.

There is a simple old saying that "a rolling stone gathers no moss" and, in a general way, it applies in such cases.

What we want to do and what we should do are often two different matters.

It never pays to be a drifter. Experience has shown that those who find an anchorage early in life make far better progress in their personal affairs as a rule than those who are continually drifting from place to place and from job to job.

The most wholesome advice that can be given any young man is this—find an anchorage. And the best way of finding an anchorage is to establish a bank account, buy a home, or become interested in a business.

One of the values of thrift lies in the fact that it has a stabilizing effect on the individual. It often requires fortitude and will power to remain steady when the world of pleasure seems to hold out so many allurements. But is is through this eternal fight against temptation that characters are built.

Establish your anchorage through thrift. Do not be a drifter.—American Society for Thrift.

WOULD SET QUARTER CENTURY AS "LIFETIME" OF STATUTES

NEW YORK, March 3 (AP)—The suggestion of Governor Moore to the New Jersey legislature that all laws carry automatic time limits by which they were repealed when they had served their purpose, has brought to light a nation-wide movement to make 25 years the "lifetime" of all statutes.

The governor in his inaugural address said that "to read all the laws of the United States would take eight years and four months, reading eight hours every day, including Sundays and holidays." The movement, its sponsors asserted, aims to remedy this condition by shortening laws so that laymen can grasp them.

Jay B. R. Smith, editor of law publications of the U. S. Corporation of New York, and former Assistant Secretary of State of New Jersey, one of the promoters of the plan, said that 24 governors of states have responded favorably to it and 40 chambers of commerce have taken it up.

"A general repealing act was proposed by Glen B. Winship of Westfield, N. J.," declared Mr. Smith. "This act provides for the automatic repeal of all statutes when they have been on the books 25 years and is intended as a preliminary to a proposed amendment to the state constitutions fixing a quarter-century as the maximum life of all legislative statutes."

If carried out, Mr. Smith added, this plan would wipe out thousands of archaic and unenforced statutes now cluttering the law books, while not affecting the common law.

HOME FOR AGED FARMERS IN IOWA HAS HAD FEW TENANTS

DAVENPORT, Iowa, March 3 (AP)—A home for the relief of aged farmers that has virtually gone begging for tenants for 24 years is located here.

It is the Fejervary Home for Old Farmers, endowed by the late Nicholas Fejervary, Hungarian patriot and exile, whose love for his adopted country prompted him to leave a good share of his fortune for the relief of aged farmers.

Count Fejervary thought there might be many old farmers who would want to enter the home under stipulated conditions—that they be farmers of American birth who had farmed here in Scott county for 20 years. There have been only a score or so who filled the requirements.

Just now the home, a fine structure, has one inmate, a farmer 75 years old. His presence during 1925, the trustees reported, cost $3,469. Living in his solitary state he was cared for by a matron, a superintendent and men and maids.

The home has lacked residents principally because a large proportion of Iowa farmers are foreign born and because many men who have farmed for 20 years own their own homes.

Rousing the lips is no longer bad taste. It is now possible to buy any flavor lipstick desired.

NORWICH DIVISIONAL OFFICE FOR CHILD WELFARE WORK

HARTFORD, March 3—(AP)—A new administrative policy which will subdivide the work of the state bureau of child welfare as concerns licensed boarding homes for children, instead of all business being transacted through the Hartford office, as heretofore, has been put into effect by Commissioner Charles E. Dow. The work of licensing, investigating and supervising the homes is to be apportioned and handled through the divisional offices of the bureau at New Haven, Bridgeport and Norwich, in addition to that which will be done at headquarters here.

The new system went into effect upon the resignation of Miss Charlotte M. Albertine, who has been state supervisor of boarding homes for children since the bureau was established in 1921. Miss Albertine is now organizing a school nursing system in East Hartford.

The new policy regarding boarding homes is virtually the same as that adopted by the bureau about six months ago in regard to the locating of private homes for children under the bureau's care.

Commissioner Dow has reported to the department of public welfare that during February courts of the state acted upon the cases of twenty eight children whose commitment to county temporary homes was sought. Sixteen were committed, three are to be cared for elsewhere, and the others will be placed according to plans of the department.

There were 1,103 placed out children under the care of the bureau at the end of the month. Supervisory visits were made on 196 of these children.

WAS WATER BOY ON TRAIN WITH JOHN HENNEY

The death of John Henney at the age of 82 in New Haven last Friday reminded Charles W. Dow of 114 Broadway that Mr. Henney was an engineer on the New Haven road in the centennial year, 1876, running a train between New Haven and the Harlem river on which Mr. Dow was water boy. The train was an express that was known as the "Centennial", because it furnished accommodation for so many who were going from New England to attend the big exposition at Philadelphia that year. Mr. Dow went through the passenger car with a water pail for the refreshment of the thirsty passengers who were generous with tips so that he often picked up a considerable sum in that way.

SOCIAL CORNER CLUB HAD G. A. R. FOR GUESTS

A big yellow bow tied on the porch trellis at the Buckingham Memorial Wednesday announced to the initiated that Club No. 3 of the Social Corner of The Bulletin was holding its monthly picnic in the hall, beginning with a noon time dinner at which the Grand Army men were guests. Ten of the men who fought in '61-'65 enjoyed the hospitality of the Social Corner members and had the place of honor at a special table which was decorated with a birthday cake ornamented with lighted candles. A bounteous menu was served which comprised baked beans, escalloned potatoes, potato salad, meat loaf, pickled beets, rolls, cake, pie and coffee. At the other tables in the room were gathered the Social Corner members, the attendance numbering 90 women and 18 men.

Ducky was hostess for the day, and was assisted by Prudence, Albah, Calamity Jane, Silver Leaf, Kiasia, Molly Larkin, Wordy Bell, Snowflake, Judy Ann, Mitzi and Lonesome Pine, each wearing an arm band of the Social Corner color, yellow. When the call for dinner was sounded, two of the sisters led the Grand Army men into the room where they were received with applause as they took their seats.

At the conclusion of the meal Commander Orrin M. Price expressed for himself and his comrades their great appreciation of the hospitality that had been extended them and there were brief remarks from others. The afternoon was spent in an informal social way, but a feature in the entertainment that was introduced was a Virginia reel for which Commander Price fiddled and which was given by the committee for the day, who wore old fashioned costumes, one of these including a dress over 100 years old. Comrade E. G. Wiley of the C. A. R., who is 82, gave a song for the pleasure of the party and there were several recitations by Social Corner members. The gathering was voted one of the most delightful that the club has held.

MOVIE STARS MUST KEEP AHEAD IN DRESS STYLES

HOLLYWOOD, March 2.—(AP)—To merely keep in style in Hollywood is to be old-fashioned.

Why?

Because here the movie stars' apparel must predict the mode for at least six months in advance. Long has it been recognized that many women look to the screen for their fashions and this is one reason why the players must depict what is to come in the way of clothes.

In costume pictures, the question becomes one of turning backward and this is not so much trouble. But in the modern, up-to-the-minute photoplays the actors sometimes are hard put to accomplish the feat of being exquisitely and premodishly gowned.

To find their fashions, the stars turn to the different sources; their own genius and hair for clothing, the famous designing experts who have brought their art to Hollywood, and the salons of Paris.

For example, when Marie Prevost was given the lead in Warner Brothers The Caveman, she learned from the script that she was to be a sophisticated, smartly-gowned woman of cosmopolitan society. She then conferred with Director Lewis Milestone and it was decided to consult a famous designer.

After a set of sketches, complete as to color, material and style, had been submitted and approved, the tedious process of fitting took ten days of Miss Prevost's time before every thing was ready for her to dress for the picture.

Irene Rich, on the other hand, designs almost every frock she wears and with the aid of expert modistes in her studio achieves effects distinctly individual. For her next photoplay, Miss Rich designed ten gowns and the Warner dressmaking staff was kept busy an entire week.

Paris supplies Patsy Ruth Miller with most of her gowns. She buys them from importers in Los Angeles, San Francis

BOXING AND SPEECHES FEATURE TAFTVILLE ARMY-NAVY CLUB SMOKER

Several hundred members and guests attended the get-together at the Army and Navy club on Dion street Tuesday evening. Several prominent speakers, and music by the club's own orchestra, contributed greatly to the success of the program. For entertainment, a number of boxing bouts had been arranged by the committee in charge, and a regulation ring, properly roped off and equipped with gong and other paraphernalia occupied the center of the hall. Barney Keenan, Norwich policeman and ex-pugilist refereed the bouts, and in the opinion of the onlookers, did a very good job.

Secretary John B. Benoit acted as chairman of the meeting, which was called to order at 8 o'clock. He delivered an address of welcome, and told the history of the club from its beginning with 24 members in 1919, and how the present quarters were leased when it had only 48 members. From 1923 to 1925 the membership increased over 200, and since the beginning of 1926, the greatest progress has been shown, for over 100 new members have been put on the rolls since that time. The club does not owe a penny, it has $3000 worth of athletic and clubroom equipment, shower baths, which are used by 200 members each week, have been installed, there are pool tables, boxing instruction, reading rooms, and the club has an orchestra of its own. The object of this get-together was to incite and foster co-operation from the members and outsiders until the Army and Navy club stands second to none in New England, as a true social and athletic organization.

Calling upon Mayor Mile Waters of Norwich for a few words, His Honor congratulated the members upon the wonderful showing that they had made in the past few years. He doubted, he said, that there was an organization in the city of Norwich that could bring out the gathering that was present there that evening. He advised the absolute pulling together of every member of the club in order that the enthusiasm that there were now showing should not die. "Anything can be put over," said the mayor, "if fellows will only pull together."

P. B. Ricketson, agent and assistant treasurer of the Ponemah mills, gave a very interesting talk on the beginning of clubs, the different kinds, and what they stood for. He sketched the religious and commercial clubs, and told of the value of the purely social club. He predicted a long and successful life for the Army and Navy club.

Rev. U. O. Bollerose, pastor of the Sacred Heart church felt that the club had reason to be proud of its achievement. He had been in touch with Taftville for 22 years, and knew most of the members of the club when they were in the various grades of the village schools. "A healthy mind in a healthy body" should be the motto of the club members, he said.

William S. Murray, first selectman of the town, stated that he felt honored in attending such a live gathering in one of the districts of the town of Norwich. He stressed the need of good companionship for the youth of today, and the value of a clean atmosphere in which one might meet his friends. He felt that the Army and Navy club was filling this need.

Rev. John Malley, junior assistant pastor of the Sacred Heart church, felt that those who said that the youth of today were not as good as the youth of yesterday were wrong. He believed that athletics were contributing a great deal to make better men in many ways. The colleges have recognized the value of athletics, for to be a good athlete, one must be a quick thinker, and a quick thinker usually made a successful student.

After the speaking program, Chairman Benoit announced the bouts, the first being between two ten year olds, who were billed as Harry Wills and Louis Lurgo. The youngsters put up a very clever fight and the audience got a lot of pleasure from this preliminary. Lurgo had a habit of doing a great deal of hitting where Wills was not, and so Referee Keenan awarded the bout to Wills.

The bout between Connors and Shaw resulted in a draw. This was one of the snappiest fights of the evening and gave the referee very little trouble. Both contestants were in good shape and both got in some good work. Shaw has a good left swing which he used on several occasions, and although he is still a novice in the ring, there is no doubt but what he will be heard from later.

The fight between Minnow Beauregard and Jack Maloney resulted in a draw. Beauregard fought the fight almost one handed, and the yells of the audience for their favorite made this one of the popular bouts of the night.

Jack Butova and Kid McCarthy were next on the list. Both these men are clever young fighters, Butova being a hard hitter, but having a peculiar style of fighting. The men came to close quarters several times during their fight and gave Referee Keenan a little work in keeping them apart. Butova's style of fighting is much at close quarters, delivering a series of body punches with the speed of a single blow. McCarthy was most successful in handling his man, however, and the bout was awarded to him.

Al Beauregard, who formerly fought under the name of Young Coulon, and Kid Wagner, who was described as being at one time the pride of the U. S. Army at Fort Wright, put on the heavy artillery fight of the night. Both men could give and take to the limit, and as a result of their heavy work, the ropes of the ring were strained to the snapping point several times. With great difficulty, the award was made to Beauregard.

The big bout of the night was between Frankie Busch and Johnny (Shells) Leonard, both well known in this vicinity as among the best in their line. They went four rounds of fast work, although at no time did their bout approach the heavy work of the Beauregard-Wagner fight. This was declared a draw.

During the evening, "Tex Rickard" Bourdon was second at the west side of the ring, and Jack McCarthy at the east side except when Leonard was fighting, at which time Bob Pelcrin presided.

After the entertaining program had been concluded the members and guests adjourned to the lower floor where a delicious chowder, with white bread, brown bread, crackers, celery, soda and cigars were served under the direction of Hormidas Benoit. At the guests table were Mayor Mile R. Waters, First Selectman William S. Murray, Second Selectman Charles P. Bushnell, Frank B. Ricketson, Richard B. Snow, Alberto E. Pingree, Rev. U. O Bellerose, Rev. John B. Malley, George Hancock, Howard Brown, Patrick F. Sweeney, John D. Sharples, Earle M. Wood, A. Crosby Grover, Barney Keehan, Arthur E. Atkins, the club officers, Archie Molleur, John B. Benoit, Thomas Labbee, Joseph Waldron, Ferdinand Brodeur, and the reception committee, J. O. Tellier, James White and Joseph C. Marsan.

MISS WILLS EASILY DEFEATS GERMAN CHAMP

MENTONE, France, March 3.—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills won another victory today when she defeated Frau Neppach, the German champion, in the third round of the women's singles of the Mentone tennis tournament, 6-0, 6-3. Frau Neppach was the only remaining player of prominence that Miss Wills had not yet met and defeated. The match attracted keen interest, but the little German woman was unable to give the American champion a semblance of a battle except in the second set.

Paired with J. H. Van Alen of Brooklyn, Miss Wills also reached the quarter-finals in the mixed doubles for the cup of the nations, in which she at first did not intend to play.

The first round was easy for the American pair, who defeated David and Mary Feoward, 6-1, 6-1. Miss E. H. Harvey and D. Al Hodges gave them a harder fight, the score being 6-1, 6-2.

Frau Neppach was overjoyed in taking three games from Miss Wills. "That is one more than I scored against Mlle. Lenglen," she said. When she was asked to choose between the abilities of the French and American champions, she replied diplomatically: "they are both wonderful players."

The match between Frau Neppach was a fierce driving battle, both possessing extraordinary powerful strokes, both forehand and backhand, but Helen's superior steadiness won, the German doing a lot of netting in the second set.

Miss Wills shook hands more warmly over the net with Frau Neppach after her victory than with any other player whom she has met and defeated thus far in Europe. The two players walked off the courts together.

"I should have done better in the first set," said the German champion to the American girl, "but I suppose I was under too much emotion in meeting a player of such great reputation for the first time."

Miss Wills smiled inscrutably and said, "Had you come to the net in the first set you would have scored many points."

Sugamuma won the last championship tournament in Detroit in 1923. Since that time the title has changed hands several times through challenge matches.

The event will extend over an eleven-day period, with two matches of 300 points each daily.

COMMISSION ORDERS BASS TO FORFEIT SHARE OF PURSE

CLEVELAND, March 3.—(AP)—Deciding that Benny Bass, Philadelphia intentionally fouled Pete Sarmiento, Filipino featherweight in their bout here Monday night, the Cleveland boxing commission today ordered Bass' share of the purse forfeited. Sarmiento was ordered paid in full.

Bass' share of the purse $5,000, was ordered placed in a bank pending court action which attorneys for the Philadelphian who failed to bring. Sarmiento receives $2,500.

The commission's ruling follows an investigation of the fight, which was stopped in the sixth round and Sarmiento awarded the decision after he had been floored three times by low blows.

Matt Brock, referee of the bout took issue with the commission's ruling that Bass had "committed a deliberate foul in the opinion of the referee" during an open hearing yesterday and again today Brock declared he believed the foul was unintentional," but Chairman Edwin Barry of the commission, claims to have an affidavit signed by the referee declaring the foul "deliberate."

BERLENBACH MATCHED WITH RISKO AT THE GARDEN

The match was arranged as a result of permission recently granted Berlenbach by the state athletic commission to box against heavyweight opponents. At the same time he must fight within his own weight limit, 175 pounds, while his opponent cannot exceed this figure by more than 20 pounds. This restriction balked plans to match Berlenbach with Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, who tips the scale around 200.

SLATTERY TO FIGHT STRIBLING ON MARCH 26TH

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo and Young Stribling, Georgia light-heavyweight, were matched today for a 10-round bout featuring the boxing show at Madison Square Garden on March 26.

These rivals have had one previous encounter, Slattery gaining a decision over the Georgian in a six round bout at Buffalo two years ago. At that time neither was permitted to box over a longer route in this state because they both were under the boxing commission's age limit of 21.

TWO GOLF STARS ARE ELIMINATED IN E. C. TOURNEY

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 3—(AP)—Two outstanding favorites were close to defeat today in the first round matches of the Florida east coast women's golf championship here. They were Miss Dorothy Klotz, of Chicago, the medalist and Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, former British champion and thrice holder of the American national crown. Both fought uphill battles and won on the home green after being down most of the way.

Mrs. Hurd had as her opponent Miss Ruth Perry.

Miss Klotz was one down most of the route against Miss Edith Hopwood, of Uniontown, Pa.

A good drive and a long iron to the green earned her a victory in four on the 17th and she made another four on the 18th, giving her the match by two up.

Miss Glenna Collett, national champion and defending titlist in this competition, also ran into unexpected opposition in her match against Mrs. S. S. Laird, Jr., of the Westchester-Biltmore club, New York which she won two and one.

ACADEMY PITCHERS BEGIN TO SHOW THEIR WARES

The batterymen of the Academy baseball squad continue to hold daily workouts at the Y gym and are beginning to let out although the pitchers have not as yet thrown many curves. The daily indoor drills will be continued until weather conditions permit outdoor practice.

Coach Earle E. Brigham announced yesterday that the season will open on Saturday, April 3, weather and ground conditions permitting, with the N. F. A. boys opposing the Taftville A. A. outfit. Another item of importance is that the Nutmeg baseball team will also clash with the Academy nine this season. However, the date for this game has not been announced as yet. This Nutmeg-Academy contest should rank with the best of the season as the former team is composed of the pick of the city among whom are many ex-N. F. A. stars.

ANOTHER POW-WOW ON DEMPSEY-WILLS BOUT TODAY

CHICAGO, March 3—(AP)—The proposed heavyweight championship match between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills will come up for air for the twenty-sixth time Friday with the arrival here tomorrow night of the title holder to confer with Chicagoans interested in promoting the bout.

The champion will meet B. E. Clements, head of the Coliseum Athletic club, which organization has a five year lease of that historic building to stage boxing, provided the sport is legalized at the election April 13. Clements and his associates already have paid $50,000 to bind the lease.

Clements said tonight that Dempsey will meet the financial backers of the Coliseum A. C., which is actively bidding for the fight. Dempsey will also be a luncheon guest of Sheldon Clark, one of the vice presidents of the Sinclair Oil company.

The Consolidation Derby for three year olds at Tampa Downs went to McTinkle with Bolton second and Dr. Carl third.

MEHLHORN BEATS SARAZEN FOR 80. FLORIDA TITLE

AVON PARK, Fla., March 3—(AP)—Bill Mehlhorn, Chicago, won the South Florida open golf championship from Gene Sarazen, metropolitan champion, by one stroke in a match that went 21 holes to a decision on the Kenilworth course here today.

Tied with 281 each at the conclusion of 72 holes yesterday, an 18 hole match today was to decide the winner. Still tied when the 18 holes had been played today, they started out again under an agreement to end the play when the first hole was won. The 18 holes had been played in 67, three under par, and the first two holes were shot in par.

On the third hole, Mehlhorn sank his fourth for a par four. Sarazen missed a short putt and was forced to take a five.

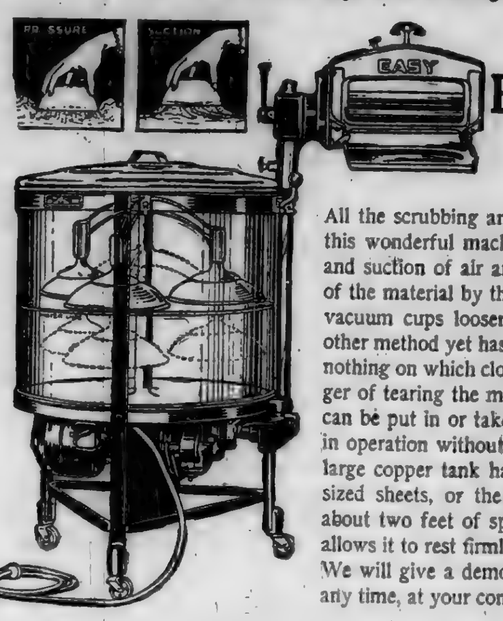
Make Your Wash Day an Easy Day By Using



—an—

EASY WASHER

All the scrubbing and drudgery vanishes before this wonderful machine. The continual force and suction of air and water through the fabric of the material by the three large, smooth-edged vacuum cups loosens the dirt or grease as no other method yet has done. There is no friction, nothing on which clothes can get caught, no danger of tearing the most delicate fabric. Clothes can be put in or taken out while the machine is in operation without danger of injury. The large copper tank having a capacity of ten full sized sheets, or the equivalent, takes up only about two feet of space. The three-leg chassis allows it to rest firmly on the most uneven floor. We will give a demonstration in your home, at any time, at your convenience. Give us a ring.

DANIELSON TOWN TEAM ADMINISTERS SEVERE BEATING TO PLAINFIELD FIVE

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 3.—The Danielson Town team had little difficulty in handing the Plainfield All Stars a bad beating in town hall tonight before a very large and enthusiastic crowd of fans by a score of 48 to 29. The Plainfield team came to Danielson quite confident of victory having secured the services of the well known eastern Connecticut star, Dessinger, who played a very good game the first half but was outplayed by Danielson's flashy center, Armington, in the last half, who besides making five baskets and one foul held Dessinger down to one basket. Armington made a total of 10 baskets and two fouls for the entire game, a total of 22 points, which goes to show that he outclassed his man.

It was quite evident from the first whistle that Danielson was by far the superior team and at the end of the first half were four points in the lead. At the start of the second half Danielson started to pile up the score and had little difficulty in out-playing their opponents from every point of view nearly doubling the score.

Keach of Danielson played a very snappy game at forward with six baskets one foul to his credit. Reeves and Godreau also played an excellent game. L. P. Poirier was on guard in the usual form and although making no points played a wonderful guard game and took the hand of the crowd several times.

Dessinger and Marriot starred for Plainfield.

LEVINE GETS DECISION OVER TOMMY MILLIGAN

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—Georgie Levine of Brooklyn gained the judges' decision over the Scotch welterweight, Tommy Milligan, in a 12-round bout here tonight. Levine weighed 149 1-4 and Milligan 149 3-4.

The defeat of Milligan came as a surprise as he had been named by the New York State Athletic commission as the leading contender for the welterweight title now held by Mickey Walker and plans had gone far toward arranging a championship contest. Promoters today wired Manager Jack Kearns for terms on Walkers' appearance.

Newspaperman credited Levine with every round except the first, ninth, and twelfth, the last being called even. An attack centering on the head with relentless two-hand punching carried the Brooklyn man to his victory and before the end both of Milligan's eyes and his nose had been cut.

The Scotchman responded with a body drive until the final round when he tried furiously for a knockout but received numerous blows to the head.

In the semi-final Johnny Breslin of New York scored a technical knockout over Wee Willie Woods of Scotland in the fourth round of a ten-round match. Breslin weighed 115 and Woods 113 1-2.

"SHAKESPEARE" McKERVEY IS WITH US ONCE AGAIN

Frank "Shakespeare" McKervey, nationally known as the world's champion one handed billiard player and finger-billiard star, is in Norwich for a brief stay. "Shake" as he is familiarly called has been absent from Norwich for the past three years and since that time has traveled from coast to coast.

He suffered a broken leg and several broken ribs besides numerous cuts and bruises. Luckily his injuries did not affect his billiard playing and he will be on hand tonight to give a demonstration of his ability at the Recreation rooms on Franklin square.

McKervey is to play an opponent picked by the proprietor of the parlors. He will make 50 balls with one-handed shots while his opponent makes 75 in the two-handed method. He will also give an exhibition of finger billiards and trick shots. "Shake" is to give exhibitions before various clubs in New London, Norwich, Jewett City, Danielson and Putnam during his stay in this part of the state.

SMALL FIRE DAMAGE AT PIERCE STREET HOUSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 3—A fire starting at the rear of the kitchen range in the first floor of the house at 59 Pierce street, occupied by Peter Barrasso, caused the sounding of an alarm from Box 75, corner of Dayton and Pierce streets shortly after 9:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning. A wood box and its contents became ignited and the flames licked up the side walls in the corner of the kitchen. So hot did it become that the paint was blistered on the inside of the rear kitchen door.

When firemen of the Westerly department responded they found the blazing woodbox on the sidewalk in front of the house and smoke pouring from the front door of the house. A line of hose was laid from a nearby hydrant, but its use was not necessary. Hand extinguishers were carried into the kitchen and after some of the partition woodwork was cut the flames were soon out. The property damage amounted to $100.

F. Earl James of Westerly was appointed district deputy grand patriarch of District No. 2 of Rhode Island by Grand Patriarch Jesse C. Hamby of Providence in the Washington session of the grand encampment of Rhode Island Independent Order of Odd Fellows was held at Odd Fellows Hall, Bristol, R. I. Schoning, pastor of the Broad Street Christian church of which Mr. Kebbe was president of the board of officers, officiated. In attendance were pastors of other churches of the city, also a number of employees of the R. A. Shepmard Sons company, at which company Mr. Kebbe was employed as foreman. Burial was at Oak Grove cemetery.

Interment was in River Bend cemetery, the bearers being George Broughton, Samuel Grimson, Robert M. Hazzard, Arthur E. Thompson, James W. Anderson and Simeon Dion.

Recorded at the office of the Westerly town clerk appears the following transfer: March 2, Charles L. Allen to Herbert M. Whitman, a lot or parcel of land east of Dunns Corners and on the north side of the Boston Post road.

A sudden squall of snow on Wednesday morning about 7 o'clock, which soon whitened the ground in Westerly, caused some to think that another blizzard was beginning. Later the sun arose through the clouds and by the middle of the forenoon, when the direct sunrays struck the snow, it was soon melted.

The death of John Joseph Dolan, 53, a former Westerly resident, occurred on Monday night at Kings county hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y. The body will be brought to Westerly for burial.

John Joseph Dolan was born in South Norwalk, Conn., on Feb. 24, 1873, the son of John J. and Mary Hayes Dolan. He came to Westerly later with his parents and lived here a number of years. He was a tool sharpener by trade and for a time worked at the local mills as a machinist. He left Westerly about 25 years ago and resided in Brooklyn at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife, Josephine Dolan, three sons, Stephen D., Westerly; Mary Dolan, Jr., and Edward A. Dolan, all of Brooklyn, N. Y., and another, Wm. Mayo Hayes Dolan of Westerly. At the present time the club is working under a lease with the privilege of buying the property in 1932. The venture of the club has been so successful that it has decided not only to take over its deed to the property, but to arrange by a gradual process to extend the course to 18 holes. However, it is not planned to do any work during the coming summer on the additional course, although by a vote of the members last night it was decided that the board of directors could issue bonds to the amount of $75,000 for taking over the property and building the additional nine holes.

The Winnapaug Golf club now begins its third year and according to reports submitted has spent more than $40,000 on the course. During the past year it has been able to decrease its debt from its income by nearly $5,000. The present indebtedness of the club is little less than $14,000.

NEW LONDON CLOTHING MERCHANT HELD FOR DETROIT AUTHORITIES

NEW LONDON, March 3.—James Sackin, alias Morris Gollup, a stranger in New London, who recently caused a clothing establishment to be opened in the new Klinck block, Bank street, was taken into custody this morning on a warrant issued by the United States district attorney's office at Detroit, Mich., charging Sackin with fraudulent use of the mails. A short time after Sackin was placed under arrest he was presented before United States Commissioner Russell B. Converan. He was held in bail of $5,000 to await the arrival of an officer in New London to escort him back to Detroit for trial. Sackin could not provide a surety on his bond and he is held in a cell at the police station until such time as the man back to Detroit is started.

Sackin has been in New London but a few weeks and less than a month has he opened the Klinck block store. It is the allegation of the Michigan authorities that Sackin used the mails in which he greatly misrepresented his financial standing in order to obtain credit and in this manner engaged in his alleged fraudulent transaction. It was further represented that Sackin conducted a systematic plan of causing clothing stores to be opened after he had obtained great credit and then disposing of the business to his best possible advantage.

The police were summoned to Union street, between Federal and Church streets at 1.30 o'clock this morning when a telephone message was received at the police station that an automobile had been wrecked by colliding with a tree. Patrolman Henry Hick found the machine against the tree, but its occupants were missing. It then developed that after the car collided with the tree the occupants got out and attempted to start the engine, but were unable to do so, hence the car was left where it was wrecked. The machine bears Connecticut registration, N-5625, but its owner was not determined.

Two chief petty officers stationed at the state pier will not hear the swash of the Thames river tonight, for their bunks are in cells at the county jail. They are Francis Ford and Robert Bassett and they were arrested in Main street early this morning after they had beaten Carl Ericsson, a sailor. The trio was found on Main street by John J. Sheridan, a special officer in the employ of the railroad company, when he was going to work about 1.55 o'clock. He saw the men rolling in the street and as he expressed it the cuffs were pummeling the sailor. Mr. Sheridan took hand and separated the trio and sent signal for a policeman and Officer Gill answered. The navy men were locked up. They told the police court that they came ashore after duty and had a few drinks, but they represented that they did not know what happened. That sort of a story was no new that Judge Prince did not have any sympathy with them and he fined them for a breach of the peace and imposed jail sentences for intoxication. When the chiefs sent to the state pier for money to pay their fines the deck officer of the ship told the officer to let the men stay in jail as that in his opinion was the proper place for them. Bassett was without shoes when he appeared in court and Ford had the appearance of a fellow who had badly abused himself.

Traffic through Main street, both automobile and trolley was greatly interrupted and the travelling public much inconvenienced today because of the work of linesmen in transferring a huge station to make room for the Water street power house of the Connecticut Power company, in the connanies sub-station off Williams street. The transformer was brought to Hallam street late yesterday afternoon and this morning was hauled to Main street where it was jacked to a powerful truck. The trolley tracks of the Connecticut company were then used as a conduit over which the load was hauled, but because of the weight of the transformer the hauling had to be performed slowly. During the work of the laborers no power traffic was possible through Main street, cars stopping at either side of the transformer and transferred to other cars. No cars of the trolley company from Norwich to New London were able to pass Hallam street at any time during the day except the very earliest morning trips. During the day officers were kept on duty to direct automobile traffic. At nightfall the transformer had reached a point near Crystal avenue, and it will be another day or two before the giant load is off the rails of the trolley company thus permitting a resumption of normal traffic.

JUDGE TELLS POLICE TO CLEAN OUT TOUGH GANGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 3—The county jail in this city is the sheltering place of a quartette of young men who have gone the pace and who early this morning attacked several sailors from the coast guard station at the academy pier. They became involved in a fight with the sailors on Bank street opposite the Shea building and finally one of the gang, John Brutzman, pulled a sailor into an alleyway to beat him. The sailor went into the alley, but he returned none the worse for his encounter. The sailors then moved along on the way to the academy, and in doing so passed the Firemen's lunch, where the four roughs were eating. Then the quartette of fighters conceived the plan to follow the sailors to a section of the city that is not much visited by the police and there they attacked the sailors again, one of the latter declaring that he was hit on the head with a club or the butt of a revolver. The roughs got the use of a taxicab to take them to their place of meeting the sailors and thus they succeeded in being on the spot when the sailors arrived for the latter walked the bridge over Shaw's cove. Two of the sailors appeared in court this morning with their heads in bandages. They identified their assailants. The taximan told a foolish story to the effect that he was to give the roughs a ride to their homes, but he neglected to account for how he took them to another part of the city. He did however state that there was talk of a gun. In the gang were Peter Falvey, who was sent to jail with Brutzman for a stay of ten days; James Beebe and John Sherlock, each being fined $25. The men fined tried to raise the money to settle up, but they were unsuccessful and were committed to jail late in the afternoon. Judge Prince served notice on the police that they must clean out that gang and all others who speak to women and take liberties with men. He told the police to "get busy" and perform their duties.

Conn. College Concert

The thrill that comes once in a lifetime came to Giovanni Martinelli, the great and popular tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company who is to sing at the state armory, New London, Friday night under the auspices of Connecticut college.

On his recent triumphal visit to Buenos Aires where he was the principal tenor of the operatic season at the unheard of salary of $3,000 (American) for each performance. His return to Buenos Aires as Rhadames in Aida was signalized by many critics with the heading (from the famous song in the opera) Ritorna Vincitor—return victorious. The Argentine critics familiar with the best operatic singers, did not hesitate to use every superlative in describing his performance.

However, the thing which pleased Martinelli most was the significant statement of La Prensa, the most powerful and the most critical organ of public opinion in Buenos Aires) that it would be impossible for anyone to give an interpretation of Prinzivalle in Monna Vanna equal to that of Martinelli. The reason is that Prinzivalle is the very highest type of romantic character and one which Martinelli has always considered the most difficult of his many roles. The famous play by Maeterlinck requires an extraordinary amount of emotion, demands perfect actinar and subjects the singer to every demand which can be made on the operatic stage. To have succeeded in it, says Martinelli, is to have confidence in every other role.

Tickets may be obtained at Starr Bros. Drug store, State street, New London.

Broadway Theater

An all comedy Keith-Albee vaudeville carnival opens at Broadway theater today and it is our earnest desire that all local theatergoers and those of the environs, who want real entertainment and want to laugh, to see this program arrangements for which should be made at once.

Laura La Plante and Pat O'Malley the two extremes in screen types, prove a very acceptable combination, as seen in The Teaser, Universal's sensationally-comical new feature now playing at the Broadway theater. He plays a cigar salesman—breezy, rather noisy, swaggering—quite a bit like the hero of Fool's Highway — and she plays a typical modern flapper—a society girl who cries her hand at clerking at a cigar counter for a joke—and manages to fall in love with the breezy young drummer—to the wild anguish of her aristocratic family.

From that point on every development is a veritable scream. The efforts of the family to break up the attachment—her startling trick of flirting with all the married men in their set to annoy the aunt who interfered with love plans—complications in the way of a domestic scandal—and efforts of the cigar drummer to become a social light by taking lessons in etiquette from a deposed Russian duke—these all add spice to the clever story.

The cast is more than exceptionally good. Hedda Hopper, famous for her many depictions of sophisticated society women, has a role that fits her like a glove.

And don't forget the new kinograms.

Economy and Quality

This is a period of thrift.

Thrift is an essential taught by the fine, forward example of no less a person than the president of the United States, who believes that thrift or economy should be the watchword in all walks of life.

There is no place more fitting to practice it than in the ordinary household, and no one more eager and ready to practice it than the housewife. She should know how easily economy may be practiced in the purchase of a product so universally used as tea.

Does the housewife know that it is the poorest and worst kind of economy to purchase the lower priced and inferior teas—for example, the so-called "bulk" teas in place of the standard package teas, selling for around 90 cents to $1.00 a pound. The reason is that even if bulk tea were good to commence with, it would deteriorate very rapidly the minute it is exposed to the air. By the time it reached the consumer all its flavor would be gone. Packed in air-tight packages, the tea is preserved from moisture and is in perfect condition when opened.

The woman of the household no doubt will express her astonishment when told by the grocer that a pound of Salada tea, costing $1.00 will make 300 cups of the delicious steaming beverage, and that it costs in round figures only a trifle more than 1-3 of a cent per cup.

The question then which naturally suggests itself is whether it does not pay more, and is not more economical for her to buy an article of such recognized worth in preference to the so-called "cheaper" product of a greatly inferior quality. Let the housewife decide, and there will be no question as to what the decision will be.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of our dear mother

MRS. ANNIE M. COUNIHAN

who passed away March 4 1924

It seems we scarcely knew her in her
..... years on earth,
Nor realized till she had gone her
... home north.
Too much she gave, too much she toiled
For others and themselves,
Too many miles of her love, for-
... forgiving thanks or smiles.
With aching hearts we know, too late,
Her love was another
So good and true the whole way through,
Through, and she whom we called
HER FAMILY.

In loving memory of our dear son

CHARLES GUNDERMAN

who passed away two years ago today

MARCH 4, 1926

Deep in our hearts you are fondly remembered;
Sweet happy memories cling around your name.
True hearts that love you in deepest affection
Always will love you in death just the same.

MR. AND MRS. A. GUNDERMAN
AND FAMILY.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—Heavy liquidation of the so-called merger rails, as a result of the adverse decision of the interstate commerce commission on a proposed new "Nickel Plate" consolidation, unsettled today's stock market, carrying prices down 1 to 28 points. Total sales reached the record breaking volume of 3,685,700 shares, as compared with the previous record of 3,240,600 on November 19, 1925.

Closing quotations generally were around the lowest of the day, although strong buying support was apparent throughout the session for U. S. Steel common and a number of other high grade industrials and rails.

With the exception of rubber, which broke 3¼ to 4.5 points a pound, the principal commodity markets were remarkably steady.

The Van Sweringen railroad issues, with the exception of Chesapeake and Ohio, whose minority stockholders successfully opposed the financing scheme of the merger, were hard hit by the day's selling. "Nickel Plate" common, which did not make its appearance on the tape until the early afternoon, scored an extreme decline of 33 points at 130 on total sales of only 1,600 shares. Erie Common broke 10 points to 24 3-4 and the preferred issues about 5 points each. Pere Marquette common broke 12 3-4 points to 67, but rallied to 70 at the close. Chesapeake and Ohio common was bid up over 9 points to 122 3-8, but slipped back to 116 1-8. The preferred closed about 3 points lower at 119 7-8 after having touched 124 1-4.

Acute weakness also developed in a number of other rails, particularly those identified with other proposed consolidations. Pittsburgh and West Virginia fell 11 1-2 points to 57 1-2 and Reading declined to 89, and new declines of 4 to 7 points were recorded by Atlantic Coast Line, Delaware and Hudson, Kansas City Southern, Louisville and Nashville, "Katy" common, Missouri Pacific common, Frisco common, St. Louis Southwestern, and Texas and Pacific. Losses in New York Central, Pennsylvania, Canadian Pacific and several other high grades ranged from a point or less.

High priced industrial specialties were the target for heavy profit taking. American Can from an early high of 315 to 291, where it rallied to 301, a net loss of 23 points from last night's close. Electric slumped from 70 to 62 and then rallied to 65, off 11 1-2 net. Among a dozen or so other issues to show net declines of 6 points or more were Hudson Motors, International Combustion Engineering, Behn Brothers, Burns Brothers "A," Montgomery Stores "B", National Tea, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

Money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent unchanged with 5 yesterday and 5 1-2 the day before. Ruling steady at that average. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Acceptance of the Scandinavian currencies featured the regular foreign exchange dealings. Demand sterling ruled steady, closing at 4.85 15-16 and 4.86 1-2 and cables rallied over 5 points to 4.86 3-4. Continental exchanges reflected the unsettled conditions in the European capitals.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—The wave of liquidation, which swept over the stock market today was extended to bond dealings and prices plunged downward from one to six points in the most excited trading of the year. The so-called merger rails, whose rise over many months had been predicated on consolidation prospects, were the principal suffers from the heavy liquidation which followed the interstate commerce commission's rejection of the Nickel Plate plan.

Selling of the Erie railroad issues, which were vitally affected by the collapse of the merger plans, reached unusual proportions with the turnover of the company's six general convertible and consolidated bonds aggregating $1,500,000. The convertible 4s "D" crashed 6 1-2 points to 76 and declines of 1 to 4 points took place in the other obligations. Nickel Plate 5 1-2s broke more than a point, but Pere Marquette bonds held steady. Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s followed the rise in this road's stock, but after soaring about 10 points, the bonds reacted and closed only 2 1-2 points net higher.

Other railroad liens also were dumped on the market in profusion with similar declines of one to six points embracing Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago and Alton, St. Paul, Delaware and Hudson, Denver and Rio Grande, International Great Northern, Iowa Central, New Haven, New York, Susquehanna and Western, Peoria and Eastern, Seaboard, Frisco and Wilkes Barre and eastern issues.

Indications were present that investment holders were being liquidated to supply funds for distressed speculators in the stock market. Several large blocks of Liberty bonds and foreign government issues were thrown on the market at substantially lower prices.

As the selling movement gained momentum, the quoted values of many semi-speculative industrial bonds also melted rapidly away. Skelly Oil convertible 6s dropped six points, Wilson and Company convertible 6s five points and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7 1-2 per cent certificates four points. Acute weakness also developed in Anaconda and Andes Copper, Brooklyn Union Gas, Pacific Telephone, Pierce Arrow, Republic Steel and Bethlehem Steel issues.

Despite the unsettlement of the bond market, the $36,000,000 offering for the Philadelphia Electric Power company today was quickly oversubscribed. Public offering will be made tomorrow of $2,400,000 seven per cent marine equipment bonds for the Lloyd Sabaudo Steamship line, at prices ranging from 96 to 100 for the various maturities.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP)—Active buying on the part of houses with eastern connections had much to do with price upturns in the wheat market today. Better export inquiry was also a stimulating factor. Wheat closed firm 5-8c to 1 1-8c net higher, May $1.59 3-4 to $1.60 and July $1.40 1-2 to $1.40 3-4, with corn unchanged to 3-8c up, oats a shade to 1-4c off and provisions at the same as yesterday's finish to 7 cents down.

Much of the buying attributed to eastern sources appeared to be of a profit taking character but the volume proved ample to absorb increased offerings which came out on the bulges and which brought about numerous quick changes in values.

Commission houses and previous sellers turned to the buying side of the corn market after corn prices had undergone an early decline. The fact that corn receipts were light counted as a strengthening influence, and, so, too, did better cash demand.

Oats were depressed by scattered liquidating sales. All deliveries of oats reached the lowest prices yet this season but rallies took place before the day ended.

Provisions were steadied by firmness of the hog market.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—Heavy liquidation of public utilities again unsettled transactions in today's curb market, but better buying support was in evidence and declines were not as severe as yesterday. Several of the popular issues showed net declines of 1 to 6 points, but in many instances, the low prices of yesterday were not broken.

Owing to the adverse decision of the interstate commerce commission, trading in securities of the new "Nickel Plate" company, with the Van Sweringens had set up in connection with the plan and had been dealt in on a "when issued" basis, was suspended by order of the board of governors. Failure of the plan to go through, automatically cancels all previous transactions.

Selling of the public utilities shares affected chiefly American Light and Traction, which closed 6 points lower. American Super-Power "B" down 4 5-8, and United Light and Power off 5 to contend in the general downward

TOLD OF LIFE AND ART OF PREHISTORIC MAN

Considering geologic time as the dial of a clock the existence of man occupies in it the space of half a second—yet, in that half second, not only have historic civilizations risen and fallen, but generation after generation of prehistoric man, through the countless thousands of years, has lived and died. It is back of recorded history that we must go if we are to have a true conception of the race of man upon the globe. Only recently have we realized how much we can learn of prehistoric man by the things that he has left behind him in the hidden places of the earth, but the lecture, "Life and Art of Prehistoric Men," given this week by Mrs. George Grant MacCurdy to an audience of Connecticut college people and their friends, showed that there is a great deal which can be known about these ancient races.

Mrs. MacCurdy, herself an anthropologist of note, is the wife of George Grant MacCurdy, curator of anthropology in the Peabody museum of Yale university, and director of the American School of Prehistoric Research in France. She has been connected with him in the research and exploration conducted by the school in France, Spain, and other European fields.

Mrs. MacCurdy's lecture was illustrated by lantern slides showing examples of prehistoric art which have been discovered, craft tools with which the artists worked, and sites where excavation has revealed art treasures fashioned in the dawn of man's artistic urge. Over three hundred "diggings" have yielded tokens of the existence of prehistoric man in Europe. Of these about 180 have held art remains. It was to these specimens of art that Mrs. MacCurdy made special reference in her talk, touching only briefly the implements—needles, crude knives and daggers—which were used by man as far back as half a million years ago, when man's home was the open, by river or sea. Love of ornament was found at the very earliest time, as proved by the discovery of burials where necklaces are found in connection with the skeletons. Very early races had some ideas of representative art, also, for they saved pieces of stone in the shape of birds' heads, chipping out a bit for the eye. But the cave-art races, who lived forty to twenty thousand years ago, are the first which gave evidence of real artistic ability. They were the folk who occupied the limestone caves of France, Spain, Belgium and Italy.

The development of the art of the cave people seems to have been founded in religion. Their representations of extinct animal forms, bison, boar, and wild horse, carved on bits of bone painted on the cave walls, or modelled in clay, were thought to have some magic significance. They were really mute supplications prayers for food and clothing. Where the animals are represented as wounded by darts we see more vividly their meaning. By representing the animal as already killed the cave-art man felt confident that his hunt for bison, or wild horse (a favorite food) would be successful. He seems to have felt that if he could decorate his dart-thrower with the form of his animal prey he might find better hunting; many interesting carved implements of this sort have been found.

The earliest pictured forms are very crudely done, with little attention to such details as eyes, feet, hair. Progress over this early stage is shown in a magnificent picture of a bison, quite well proportioned, but showing some evidence of artistic struggle. One foot of the bison is drawn inside the other—not so different after all from some of the crudities of the Italian primitives in representation. In art a bit later, action creeps in, then modelling, sometimes very delicate, and color, as exemplified by the ochre-stained bisons of the cave at Altamira, Spain, discovered in 1863, still fresh and lovely in color as when the artist left them, thousands of years ago. A final development was the simplification of art, the symbolizing of the entire animal by a part, such as the head, or the conventionalizing of animal motifs.

Belonging to the cave art period are the clay bisons of the cavern Tuc d' Audoubert, in France, discovered by Count Bertouem. Mrs. MacCurdy's description of the tortuous methods by which the inner cave where the clay bisons lie is reached, gave a vivid impression of the dangers connected with explorations of this kind. Wriggling through small tunnels, crawling through mud and water, in the candle-lit darkness in the heart of a mountain—it takes courage to go through to the end. But there the bisons lie, as they were put, ages ago in a prayer for food.

The need of food and shelter, the love of ornament, the instinct for religion (

GETTING UP NIGHTS

One of Nature's Danger Signals. A Healthy Bladder Does Not Act at Night.

If too frequent, excessive acidity or alkaline deposits may be the cause. It needs cleansing. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) acts on the kidneys like Epsom Salts on the bowels. R. D. Nesbitt, 10 Oak St., Batavia, Mich., says: "For three years I had to get up three times at night. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) helped me in two days. I now do heavy work." It isn't a patent medicine. The formula is on the label. Sold by leading drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at the Geo. Engler Drug Store.

Under the auspices of the Norwich Y. M. C. A., Dr. Charles O. Judkins, nationally known clergyman of Glens Falls, N. Y., opened a four day lecture series at the United Congregational church Wednesday evening. This lecture or sermon series is an annual event made possible by the M. Louise Sturtevant fund left to the Y. M. C. A. for that purpose. There was a fair size attendance of men and women at the servcie Wednesday evening. Following the devotional period led by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott pastor of the United church, and prayer by Rev. Dr. Judkins, James C. Macpherson, president of the Y. M. C. A. introduced Dr. Judkins to the congregation.

President Macpherson said he considered it a privilege to sponser these annual lecture series. We have brought to this city some of the outstanding figures in church circles and this has been made possible by the Sturtevant fund. Dr. Judkins comes to us with almost a nation wide reputation he said. Mr. Macpherson called attention to the series of talks arranged and then presented Dr. Judkins.

Dr. Judkins announced that the general theme of his sermon series is the Spiritualism of Christianity. Is there a great American fault as far as Christianity is, the country is concerned asked Dr. Judkins. If there is a fault in our western civilization it is not out and out wickedness. He said, nor fault at an unbalance. We don't a unbalanced spiritual life. If there is any fault, it is a fault of unbalance. We can correct that.

We aren't coming together in these meetings to find fault in the old fashion. The western Christian life is strong and healthy. That does not prevent us from realizing the need of betterment. The one driving force is a similar desire. What men desire they will have. Desire is fundamental in every life. It is the basis of all progress. Desire is inevitable.

If we are over materialized it is because we are on a spiritual basis with a desire for the material. To correct an unbalance is just as necessary as correcting a sin. Has desire brought us to a material craze? With reference to material desires the preacher went on to speak of the great growth in credit. He spoke of the many automobiles and other things bought on the instalment plan. He said that 90 per cent of our loans in this country are automobile loans.

People are living way beyond their means and are trying so hard to live in luxury that we are in a material craze. Look at the vast sway of colleges toward material culture, he said. Everywhere we are in the midst of a great material ease. What was the real object of the coal strike? A desire for more income, higher wages and less work.

There has come a tremendous desire for a larger material income to provide for larger material things. Don't your desire and your income tell you the same story? Mine do. That type of materialistic culture can't last. People in the main are decent Christian people are clean. Can't you see we all ought to devote ourselves intensively in an effort to get our great materialistic power beautifully spiritualized? If there is a tremendous materialistic craze, can't you see we need a profound conviction? There is no possible final satisfaction in this world except by actual spiritual consciousness.

In the afternoon at 1:45, Rev. Dr. Judkins addressed a meeting at Park church parish house for the young people of teen age.

The same programme will be followed on Thursday and Friday of this week, the afternoon meetings at Park church parish house and the evening meetings at the United Congregational church.

STATE DOES RECONSTRUCTION WORK ON ITS HIGHWAYS

One-quarter of the highways in Connecticut built during the last 30 years have been reconstructed, records of the state highway department show. Since 1905, a total of 2,600 miles of trunk line and state aid roads have been built in the state, of which 670 miles represent those reconstructed and widened to meet the increased needs of motor transportation.

The present net mileage of highways, therefore, is shown to be 1929 miles. From the time the state first began the construction of roads on an organized basis in 1895 until 1913, the number of miles built was 1,040.96 During the same period, 62.07 miles were reconstructed, leaving a net increase of 981.29. During the following ten years, the total number of miles was increased to 1510.7, and the reconstruction total had grown to 1[illegible]. This increased the net mileage in the state to 1756.05.

During the next two and one-half years 168.47 miles were added, of which 173.65, or more than one-half were for reconstruction of roads, whose traffic had grown tremendously.

GENTILE FIRST CONTRIBUTOR TO JEWISH RELIEF DRIVE

Louis M. Crandall has the distinction of contributing the first $5 donation to the Norwich United Jewish relief drive. The spirit in which the donation was made and the sincerity in which it was offered is very much appreciated by the officers of the Norwich United Jewish relief committee. Samuel J. Weil of New Haven, Connecticut state chairman of the Maimonides United Jewish campaign, happened to be at the relief headquarters at Schwartz Bros. store, Wednesday afternoon and when Mr. Hanover, who is in executive charge of the drive, told the Connecticut chairman of Mr. Crandall's donation he suggested that the check be photographed and kept as a memento by the committee. Mr. Weil was greatly pleased with the noble spirit displayed by the people in Norwich when told by Mr. Hanover of several sincere offers of assistance coming into relief headquarters from Gentile people. Abner Schwartz, chairman of the relief committee, told Mr. Weil today that he is proud to be a citizen of Norwich where such fine sympathy exists among all its people.

NINE PILLAR CHILDREN WERE ILL AT THE SAME TIME

In the present period of illness among children, the record is probably held by the household of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hillar of Asylum street. Their nine children, ranging in age from 1 1-2 to 15 years, were all ill at once—five having measles and four pneumonia. All are recovering.

TRAVEL TALK PRESENTED FOR FAITH TRUMBULL MEETING

An illustrated travel talk by the Misses Mary C. and Nancy B. Lucas made an entertaining part of the monthly meeting of Faith Trumbull chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, which was held Wednesday afternoon at the Community house on Church street. The talk was given as a descriptive visit of interest in England and Switzerland and was given after the regular business meeting of the chapter had been held.

At the business meeting, at which the regent, Mrs. W. H. Lawley, presided the usual reports were made by the following officers: Mrs. W. S. Elliott, secretary; Mrs. A. S. Comstock, treasurer; Mrs. Hezekiah Perkins, registrar, and Mrs. G. A. Ashley, historian.

The gift of an old sampler from Miss Hiver Lee, now of California, and a gift from Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt a memento of her Norwich relatives were reported by Mrs. W. Tyler Hewit, chairman of the museum committee. Miss Mary Cannon reported a sampler's gift of $25 to the school for mountain children was read from the Woman's league of the Central Baptist church by Mrs. Charles L. Stewart, chairman of the parish education committee.

Mrs. H. H. Potts reported for the magazine and Mrs. A. H. Lathrop, for the membership committee, presented an application for membership. Other committee reports were given as follows by the chairmen: Mrs. E. E. Snyder, ways and means; Mrs. Frank Hempstead, conservation and thrift; Mrs. E. E. Rogers, genealogical research.

Announcement was made of the state conference at Stamford, March 18 and 19, and the invitation was given for members, other than delegates, to attend the meetings.

Two recommendations by the board of management were approved. The first was to place $100 from the current fund in the museum and building fund and the second to transfer to the Berry school in Georgia the sum of $25 which had been designated for the Southern Industrial school but cannot be used there because the school is closed.

The regent said that the chapter is able this year to send a photostat copy of a very valuable set of papers to the National society as its historical contribution for this year. The original papers are in the chapter deposit box, and consist of family letters, accounts, charter of a boat, will etc., of John Durkee, of Norwich, during, and, shortly after the Revolutionary war. This gift is made possible through the kindness of Mrs. E. E. Rogers.

Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard sang, most acceptably, two groups of songs during the afternoon, the songs were: Rainbows, by C. B. Dawley, "Will-O' the Wisp," by Spross, "Spring Has Come" by Maud B. White, and "Dawn" by Guy D'Hardelot. The accompaniments were played by Miss Annie E. Vaughn.

After the lecture by the Misses Lucas, tea was served by a committee of hostesses, Mrs. L. L. Brewer, chairman, Mrs. Clarence Thompson, Mrs. Raymond B. Sherman, Mrs. Frank I. Royce, Miss Alice Bennett, Miss Rosalie Bennett, Mrs. Charles Standish and Mrs. James H. Whitney.

An announcement was made by Mrs. Roy D. Judd of a rummage sale chairs is to be held by the children of the American revolution.

ADDRESS ON "SUCCESS" AT MEETING AT SILK MILL

Under Y. M. C. A. auspices the weekly noon meeting was held at the plant of the West Side Silk mill Wednesday. Orchestra music delighted the audience and several songs were sung, also a vocal solo by Lewis Aldrich.

Rev. G. F. Bailey gave an interesting talk which all present enjoyed. He spoke in part as follows: I want to tell you of a conversation I had with a bright young man of about 23 years who was above the average in intelligence, having had a college education. I asked him what he considered success consisted of. His reply was, "If a man delivers the goods that people want he is successful." I asked him if there was nothing else to success, and he replied "No, that is all there is to it."

I said to him, "what about character values?" he replied: "that makes no difference, so long as a man produces at his work one hundred per cent, the other makes no difference." I told him that what a person did out of working hours had a great deal to do with success or failure, but he did not agree with me. As a matter of fact, what a man does with his time out of hours, at night etc., makes a great difference. One may measure well up near to perfection in his work, but if his character is weak or questionable, he cannot be called highly successful. Thomas Carlyle was a genius as a writer, and an authority, but we are told that he was a crank in his home life. While he was successful as a writer his failure in other things robbed him of final success. Saint Paul was an undersized man, and he had a physical handicap, but was a successful man because he kept his physical powers in the proper check, and with the help of God mastered himself. Am I to conclude this, because I prepare and preach my sermons, and do my pastoral work in a way to satisfy my parishioners, that I am a success notwithstanding I may neglect myself, and my own character development; no, I am responsible to society and to God to develop all of my powers to the greatest possible extent, as well as to do the work to which I have been called. Think this over; are you going to be satisfied to slight or doing your duty in your work and neglect the more important matter of developing character?

BUSINESS METHODS COMMITTEE CONDUCTED ROTARY MEETING

The weekly meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held at the Wauregan hotel on Wednesday was in charge of the business methods committee and was featured by two interesting talks, one by Dr. Hugh B. Campbell on "The Six Objects of Rotary," and the other by Adelard Morin, on "The Truth in Advertising."

President Edwin A. Harris presided at the meeting and Rev. Alexander H. Abbott acted as song leader for the luncheon. Rev. Mr. Abbott proved the most energetic song-leader that the club has had in many meetings and the musical numbers under his direction were very pleasing and included a quartette number by Eben Learned, Joseph C. Worth, F. Russell Smith and Grosvenor Ely. Other musical features were duets by Lew Carpenter and Grosvenor Ely and two numbers by the Rotarians who took part in the "Village School" at the Community house last week.

Five new members, Emory C. Davis, Joseph Whelan, Frank J. Aubrey, H. C. Larrabee and Frank R. Murdy, were extended the right hand of fellowship by President Harris, assisted by Charles A. Saxton of the educational committee and Secretary Edward Jewett.

Dr. Campbell was the five minute speaker of the luncheon and his talk was as follows:

I think one of the questions which we who have been in Rotary for a time should ask ourselves frequently is—Is Rotary improving me—and am I improving Rotary? And until we can answer both parts of that question positively, you and I—not Rotary—are failing in our obligation.

It is hardly possible that any one of questions that the objects of Rotary are worthwhile. What are they?

The ideal of Service as the basis of all worthy enterprise.

High ethical standards in business and professions.

The application of the ideal of service by every Rotarian to his personal business and community life.

The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service.

The recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his occupation as an opportunity to serve society.

The advancement of understanding good will and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the Rotary ideal of service.

Such a platform means no slacking. Our failure to live up to our responsibilities, having assumed its obligations—is cause for apology to say the least.

Contrary to the opinion held by many of those outside Rotary it is about more than a eating and luncheon club. Nothing could be more deadly than a club made up entirely of members unless it were a club spending its whole time in useless and inane songs. Eating has a part—singing has a part—and good fellowship has a part—but they are only members of a large body. It is the less tangible things—the ideals suggested in the objects of Rotary, which may and will continue to make Rotary the vital potent force it is in the world.

No individual should go in Rotary or any other worthwhile institution or organization solely for what he can get out of it. One has to give before another can get—and the greatest satisfaction comes from giving.

Since Rotary membership is based on business or professional success, it is essential that that success be measured not in dollars and cents alone, but that the monetary side of success must also include the code of ethics held down by Rotary. The Rotary platform, adopted by [illegible] tells us:

"The Rotary club demands fair dealings — honest methods and high standards in business. No obligation, actual or implied, to influence business exists in Rotary. Election to membership therein is an expression of confidence of the club in the member elected and of its good will toward him. As his business is an expression of himself — he is expected actively to represent it. Membership in the Rotary club is a privilege and an opportunity, and its responsibility demands honest and efficient service and thoughtfulness for others as follows:

And, finally — the individual who thinks of Rotary only on Wednesday is a poor type of Rotarian. Real Rotary is a seven-day in the week affair.

He profits most, who serves best.

Following Dr. Campbell's talk which was heartily appreciated the meeting was turned over to Charles L. Thayer, chairman of the business methods committee, who introduced Adelard Morin as the speaker of the meeting.

Mr. Morin who spoke of the benefits of truthful advertising said that the average merchant has many problems to face but one of these is his method of advertising; his method of telling the public what he has to offer them in the way of quality and price. In doing this, said Mr. Morin, the merchant should be truthful in his advertising and try not to mislead the public for the public will soon find out just how much dependence can be placed on the advertisement of his store. Truth in advertising is not only good principle but is also good business. Newspaper advertising is not the only way of advertising. You can advertise by the service you give and the attractiveness of your stores and display of merchandise.

If you mislead the public in your advertising it only acts as a boomerang but if you stick to the truth the returns may be a little slower, but they stay with you and your trade is established. A Boston firm tried the plan of misleading the public and they made money at first but today the public steers clear of this house on the other hand a New York store which is far from the business center does a business second to none in New York simply through its truthful advertising. They talk with the buying public and you will get the returns.

The meeting closed with the singing of the star Spangled Banner.

ADVANCE IS MADE IN DOG LICENSE RATES

License fees for male dogs and spayed females are 50 cents higher this year than they were last. The change was made by the assembly and copies of the new regulations with a supply of tags, have been received by Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook so that he can begin to issue the dog licenses at once. The license rate is to be $2 for male and spayed female dogs. Last year it was $1.25. The license for female dogs remains the same, $10.25. But there is a new provision calling for a veterinarian's certificate in the case of all spayed females which have not been registered before. There is no change in the price for kennel licenses.

The time for registering dogs is the months of March and April. Last year there were 1,500 dogs registered in Norwich. The town clerk has been appointed with two days when it is believed will be enough this year. Accordingly, about 200 dogs a day of disappear in Norwich as they did last year. The dog population has been decreased by [illegible] killed by automobiles.

POETRY

In Early Spring

O spring, I know thee! Seek for sweet surprise
In the young children's eyes.
But I have learnt the years, and know the yet.
Leaf-folded violet.
Mine ear, awake to silence, can foretell
The cuckoo's fitful bell.
I wander in a gray lane that encloses
June and the wild hedge-roses.
A year's procession of the flowers doth [illegible]
My feet, along the grass.
And all you sweet birds silent yet, I know
The notes that stir you so.
Your songs yet half devised in the dim dear
Beginnings of the year.
In these young days you meditate your part;
I have it all by heart.
I know the secrets of the seeds of flowers
Hidden and warm with showers,
And how, in kindling Spring, the cuckoo shall Alter his interval.
But now a flower or song I ponder as
My own, but memory's.
I shall be silent in those days desired
Before a world inspired.
O dear brown birds, compose your old song-phrases,
Earth, thy familiar daisies.

The poet mused upon the dusky night,
Between two stars towards night.
His purpose in his heart. I watched, a space,
The meaning of his face:
There was the secret, fled from earth and skies,
Hid in his gray young eyes
My heart and all the Summer wait his choice.
And wonder for I'r voice.
Who shall foretell his songs, and who aspire
But to divine his lyre?
Sweet earth, we know thy dimmest mysteries,
But he is lord of his

The Flower of Truth

Child of God, what do you seek
As you travel the path of life?
Is the way all weary, bleak
Do you meet despair and strife?

Look within for light divine.
Hear the perfect word of love;
Omnipresent truth will shine,
God within, around, above.

Seek the flowers of truth that bloom
In the silence of your soul;
For the storms soon pass and gloom
Fades into a god-like goal.

KALEIDOSCOPE

In the year 117 the Roman empire attained its largest extent.

The Woolworth building, in New York city, is 796 feet in hight.

Temples of India are usually found near rivers or living springs.

Medieval monks who transcribed muscripts were exempt from labor the fields.

Chinese were printing from movable type 300 years before the invention of printing in Europe.

While making alterations in an old Nantucket house a workman came across two copper cents, dated 1798 and 1803. They were on a beam.

At a Methodist church at Redlands, Cal., during an eleven-hour service, all the hymns in a standard hymnbook were read, recited or sung. A total of 748 hymns were used in the service. About 100 persons participated, and ten hymns had been assigned to each family in the congregation.

For reasons known to himself a German named Emilio Schiersa traveled from Manchester, England, to London mounted on a wooden globe. The globe was a little less than three feet in diameter and weighed but 87 pounds. Schiersa successfully accomplished his task, covering the distance between the two cities at an average speed of eight miles an hour.

In the University of Maine 127, or more than 10 per cent. of its enrollment are from families having more than one member studying there. There are 31 pairs of brothers, seven pairs of sisters, 15 mixed pairs of brother and sister, four groups of three brothers and sisters, one group of three brothers, one group of three brothers and one sister and one married couple.

Arrangements have been made by the Imperial Airways, Ltd., for an experimental night freight service by airplane between London and Paris. The machine to be employed is a Vickers-Rolls-Royce air express, the largest of its kind in the world. If the experiment proves successful, the service will be made a regular feature of the Imperial Airways time-table, and will probably be followed by night services for passengers.

Because a museum of geology in London is being moved, several writers of English love stories will have to change the venue of their "happy endings" and many lovers will be driven to another trysting place. For many years the Museum of Practical Geology has been housed in Jerymyn street, just back of Piccadilly. Few people ever crossed its portals to gaze on cold monoliths and ammonities of prehistoric ages, and for this reason self-absorbed young couples found it an ideal spot. So famous did the museum become in this respect that it achieved additional fame as the scene of love episodes in many a story.

GOV'T ACTION AGAINST THE NAT'L FOOD PRODUCTS CORP.

Decree Entered in the Federal Court For the Southern District of New York—Provides That the Corporation Shall Disposesses Itself of All Its Interests in Shares of Voting Stock of Various Affiliated Corporations—Calls For Sale of Holdings in Seven Concerns Within Sixty Days.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(AP)—A consent decree in the case of the government against the National Food Products Corporation was entered into today in the federal court for the southern district of New York.

The decree provides that the corporation shall dispossess itself of all its interests in shares of voting stock of various affiliated corporations.

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—The consent decree signed this afternoon by Federal Judge Bondy in the case of the National Food Products Corporation requires that the company must sell within sixty days its holdings in seven other concerns. They are the Abbott-Alderney Dairies, Inc., Kansas Butler Grocery Company, Piggly-my Stores Corporation, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, Inc., National Dairy Products Corporation, Reid Ice Cream Corporation and United States Stores Corporation.

United States District Attorney Buckner, who started the action under the Clayton Anti-trust act, said after the decree was signed that the Food Products Corporation and individuals interested in it had "accepted peace padlocks forever restraining them from creating or operating a food trust of any size or character."

Among the individual defendants released by the decree, Mr. Bruckner said, were H. C. Bohack, president of the H. C. Bohack Co., Inc.; C. C. Burden, president of Burden Bros.; L. Benedict, vice president of the Worcester Salt Co.; B. F. Halsey, vice president of Sheffield Farms, Inc., and also a director of the National Dairy Products Corp., and J. A. MacDermott, vice president of the United States Dairy Products Corp.

An official statement from the prosecutors in the case said that the decree would make impossible any combination among a great group of concerns whose activities include the distribution of milk and other dairy products in New York and Philadelphia, chain grocery stores in New England, New York and other states, the production of ice cream, particularly in New York and Philadelphia, and the manufacture and distribution throughout the country of condensed milk, evaporated milk and similar products.

The government started action in the case on February 13, nine days after bankers had announced an offering of stock in the 3,000,000-share National Food Products Corporation.

Assistant United States District Attorney Royce, of the anti-trust division of Mr. Bruckner's staff, said that the Food Products Corporation may elect, under the terms of the decree, to continue operations, but if so it must limit its operations to pure investment, with no possibility of co-operation in business methods or plans with competing corporations. He said the decree also enjoined the Food Products Corporation from ever acquiring in any manner any voting interest in more than one company in one business in any given section or community of the United States.

"Also," he said, "the management personnel of the corporation must not include men who at the same time are directors or officers of competing concerns. The defendants are in sweeping terms enjoined from making use of stock ownership, interlocking directorates or other similar measures to lessen competition between competing corporations producing or selling foodstuffs."

SIX MEN RESCUED IN MID-OCEAN FROM DISABLED SHIP

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Rescue of mid-ocean by the Holland-American line Volendam of six men who had been aboard on a disabled schooner for 17 days, was told in a radiogram received here today. The message was from Hasseen Lang, grand historian of the Shriners order in New York, a passenger on the Volendam.

The name of the schooner was not given. The rescue was made last night, Lang said in his message, which was received by Robert J. Kenworthy, grand secretary of a Masonic order.

The radiogram read as follows:

"Notify Associated Press captain rescued midnight skipper and five men about since December 17 on sailless, sinking schooner on way Spain to Newfoundland."

Officials of the Holland-American line said they had received no report of the rescue from Captain DeKonning of the Volendam. Attempts will be made by wireless to reach the boat which is due to arrive at Plymouth, England, on Monday. The Volendam sailed from New York Saturday for Plymouth, Cherbourg, France and Rotterdam.

Mr. Lang is on a trip to England on matters connected with the Masonic order.

$5,000,000 LOAN TO BE MADE R. C. CHURCH OF BAVARIA

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Arrangements were completed by New York bankers today for a $5,000,000 loan to the Roman Catholic church of Bavaria, representing the first long-term borrowing by a religious organization through Wall street channels. The offering of 20 year bonds is planned for an early date.

The loan will be a direct obligation of the general union of the eight Bavarian diocese and the proceeds are to be disbursed by the union for the construction of educational institutions and hospitals throughout the state of Bavaria.

Private bankings loans to Catholic dioceses and institutions frequently have been made in Europe and this country, but the public offering of a bond issue will be an innovation in the case of financing. The most recent Catholic loan negotiated in this country was a credit of $1,500,000 extended to the vatican by the Chase National bank and Blair and Company.

MAYOR OF ALBANY INJURED IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, March 4.—(AP)—Charles A. Hackett, mayor of Albany, N. Y., was thrown out of an automobile Monday and suffering severe bodily injuries, later complicated by erysipelas, died early this evening in the American American hospital in Havana.

Mayor Hackett for the last week has been in a hopeless condition, lapsing into long periods of unconsciousness.

The accident in which the mayor was injured was an unusual one. While driving with Frederick Lamb, private secretary and J. R. Brandow of Albany, to keep a dinner engagement the automobile was almost overturned by an obstruction in the street. Mr. Hackett was leaning against the door of the machine to avoid the crowds. The shock caused the door to fly open and Mayor Hackett was thrown a considerable distance.

COUNTESS OF CATHCART WILL LEARN FATE TODAY

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Assistant Secretary of Labor W. W. Husband, late today ordered Byron H. Uhl, acting immigration commissioner at Ellis Island, to return the Countess of Cathcart to the island immediately for deportation if she loses tomorrow in her habeas corpus proceedings.

The countess brought the proceedings to gain admission to this country, meanwhile she was admitted on a temporary leave, under $500 bail. The leave expired last night.

PARADE WAS CONDUCTED BY STRIKERS IN PASSAIC

PASSAIC, N. J., March 4.—(AP)—Led by a woman wheeling a baby, 4,000 striking textile workers paraded from Garfield through Clifton and into Passaic this afternoon, with no interference from police along the way.

The lack of violence, contrasted with yesterday's clashes, and arrests, was hailed by the strike leaders as a considerable moral victory for them. Police lined the route through Clifton and Passaic, but made no attempt to do more than keep the marchers moving.

The parade was organized immediately after the usual afternoon rally. Many of the marchers wore iron trench helmets, and some carried gas masks.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kovacs was at the head of the procession, wheeling a baby carriage in which was her eighteen months year and a half old daughter, Bertha Kiskolsy. There were many other children in the parade but no other baby carriages.

A New York newspaper whose reporters and photographers had suffered yesterday whe nthey said police attacked them, sent an armored car to the parade today. It turned over before the march started and two of the five men in it were slightly hurt.

Albert Weisbord, Harvard Phi Betta Kappa man nwho is chairman of the strikers' united front committee, declared after the orderly parade that he believed "the police realize they have bitten off more than they can chew, and that vicious, stupid tactics will win the strike for the owners."

Weisbord also expressed the belief that sympathy for the strike was spreading to other parts of the textile world. He said the Passaic strikers had sufficient funds to hold out at least 10 weeks longer and thought they could stay out all summer if contributions continued to come in at the present rate.

WORCESTER MINISTERS OFFER MEMBERSHIP TO RABBI

WORCESTER, Mass., March 4.—(AP)—The Worcester Ministers' Union has made history by voting to offer membership to Rabbi Maurice M. Mazure of Temple Emanuel. The vote, announced today established a precedent in that never before had the union opened its doors to one of the Jewish faith, Rabbi Mazure declined to comment until he should have received a formal invitation.

The union includes representatives of every denomination in this city, as well as those of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army and other bodies. It does not confine its interest to matters of religious, but was founded to stimulate in every way the religious life of the community.

In debate on the vote, it was suggested that the constitution might contain some clause that would hinder the admission of Rabbi Mazure. And it was voted to examine the document and eliminate any of its phrases which might be objectionable to the rabbi or hinder his admission to membership.

CRIMINALS BARRED AS PUBLIC SERVICE DRIVERS

HARTFORD, March 4.—(AP)—Seven appeals to Attorney General Frank E. Healey have been made by applicants for licenses as drivers of public service motor vehicles who have been barred by the state motor vehicle department because of previous criminal records. Several of the appeals have been heard, but the attorney general, thus far, in each instance has upheld the departmental rulings, barring the men.

The 1925 general assembly passed an act which gave power to the motor vehicle commissioner to withhold the license of a prospective taxicab or jitney driver, when the applicant had previously been convicted and served sentence for a crime. The same act, however, left the applicant with the right to appeal the decision of the commissioner to the attorney general. Only seven applicants have come within the provisions of the law since July 1, of last year.

Debate in House of Commons

LONDON, March 4.—(AP)—The net result of today's debate in the house of commons on the Geneva meeting of the league of nations March 8, was to leave matters much as they were, inasmuch as Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary for foreign affairs, will go to Geneva with a free hand. He announced himself, however, in agreement with the policy of the government and the nation, to do nothing to hurt Germany's chance of becoming a member of the league.

20 PUPILS ARE TO CONTEST IN SCHOLARSHIP CONTESTS

HOULTON, Me., March 4.—(AP)—The three R's will have their day here tomorrow at the first meet of its kind ever held in this country. Tonight in Houlton, Bridgewater, Monticello, and Island Falls, twenty school pupils were making ready to enter the lists in search of honors. A silver cup offered by the Aroostook Pioneer, a local newspaper, is the prize.

Each town's team will have five members, two from the seventh grade, two from the eighth and one from either of those grades. There are six main events, to be run off as follows:

First a penmanship contest; each entrant will copy from a typewritten sheet for five minutes, the rating to be on the basis of twenty per cent. for perfection.

Second, the spelling contest, to consist of any fifty words, to be selected from the Buckingham extension of the standardized Ayers spelling scale.

Third, the arithmetic contest, in which the contestants will be tested in the ability to solve 20 problems.—in common and decimal fractions and denominated number tables.

Fourth, the theme writing, sentence analysis and phasing event. Each contestant may choose one of five subjects and will have 20 minutes to write a theme. The work will be judged for treatment of subject, narrative or expositive quality, sentence structure, punctuation, spelling and penmanship.

Fifth, a thousand word spelling bee. All but 50 words may be taken from the standard dictionary, and the final 50 are of the catch-as-catch-can sort, any word from any source.

Sixth, and last, a public speaking contest, to be held in the evening. Six members of each team will speak for 12 minutes on any subject desired.

NEW PLAN FORWARDED TO ALL TAX ASSESSORS

HARTFORD, March 4.—(AP)—State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett has had printed and is forwarding to all tax assessors and collectors and other municipal officials in the state, the plan for taxation of property in Bridgeport, which has been put forth by Tax Assessor William F. Connelly, of that city.

The plan calls for simplification of administrative tax procedure in Bridgeport, which in some instances will bring drastic revision.

Commissioner Blodgett, in a foreword, says of the plan that it is "an approach to the solution of Bridgeport's most difficult problem and should commend itself to all within, as well as to many without, the state who may concern themselves with this subject. The plan proposed for Bridgeport has similar application to all of the other larger cities of Connecticut in particular, but the principle involved has application wherever the ad valorem tax is employed as a means of raising revenue.

"So far as I have been able to observe the tax literature of the country, few have attempted to treat of this specialized and difficult subject in such a brief, distinctive and yet comprehensive way as has Mr. Connelly. Certainly in the tax literature of Connecticut, nothing treating of this subject is comparable in its excellence to this pamphlet."

FORMER FINANCIAL BILL TO BE PASSED SATURDAY

PARIS, March 4.—(AP)—The compulsory declaration of income by everyone whether subject to income tax or not was reincorporated in the financial bills by the chamber of deputies today.

This feature, which was modified by the chamber in the first instance so as to exempt a great many taxpayers, such as workers and farmers, now stands as it was originally introduced. The senate, it is believed, will object to this provision.

The chamber also passed the article requiring foreigners living in hotels and furnished apartments and paying rent of a thousand francs or more a month to deposit a 25 per cent of their rent with the proprietors of their lodgings to guarantee the payment of income tax. Foreigners living in hotels heretofore have escaped the income tax. Only those having apartments on lease or on a quarterly renting arrangement have been obliged to pay on the basis of estimating their income at seven times the rent.

The financial debate is dragging somewhat on account of the disinclination of the radicals and socialists to surrender to the senate. The opinion still prevails, however, that the bills, practically as amended by the senate, will finally be voted by both houses before Saturday night, when Premier Briand leaves for Geneva for the special meetings of the league of nations.

CALL FOR PRESERVATION OF MARRIAGE AND HOME

NEW YORK March 4.—(AP)—Asserting that the "shocking and scandalous increase of divorce is destroying the very fabric of the home," Bishop William T. Manning issued a call today to all churches, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, to "join in a common effort for the preservation of marriage and the home."

Speaking at a Lenten service at St. Thomas' church, he deplored divorce especially when it is the forerunner of remarriage.

"Departure from the ideal of monogamic marriage is not progress but reversion to barbarism," he said, "to allow men and women to live together for a time and then with legal sanction on trivial grounds to separate and form new alliances as often as they please, is in effect to abolish monogamic marriage and to substitute for it a system of practical polygamy."

Stock Prices Show Sensational Rally

Buying Orders By Cool Heads Checked the Swollen Streams of Liquidation.

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—The swollen streams of liquidation which have been pouring into the New York stock exchange from all sections of the country for a week dried up overnight and a sensational rally of 5 to 25 points took place today in scores of issues when strong financial interests stepped forward and began bidding the shattered market up.

Judged by the averages, the recovery was even more extensive than any single day's reaction which had preceded it. The average of 20 leading industrial issues showed a net gain of 5.50 points on the day, or more than the combined net losses of 2.42 points on Wednesday and 3.00 points on Tuesday when the selling movement was in full swing. The average of 20 leading railroad issues recorded a net gain of 3.61 points, as against a loss of 2.99 points yesterday when hundreds of thousands of railroad shares were thrown overboard as a result of the adverse "Nickel Plate" merger decision, and a loss of 1.33 points on Tuesday.

The buying movement, being under the control of cool headed financiers, was more orderly than the reckless selling of distressed pools and small traders which preceded it, with the

MORE THAN $81,787,779 SPENT FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—More than $81,787,779 has been spent by the Near East Relief since its inception in 1915 in aiding refuges and orphans, it was shown in its annual report, issued today. In addition it has distributed $12,800,000 worth of flour.

Cleveland H. Dodge, treasurer of the organization, speaking at the annual convention, pointed out that for the first time in eight years the Near East Relief had a balance at the close of 1925 business. This was made possible through an increase of nearly a half million dollars in contributions over the previous year, he said. Total receipts for 1925 were $4,752,239.

The convention was attended by Near East Relief workers from all parts of the field of operations. Forty-four of them were decorated for meritorious services. Heading the list of those decorated was Dr. W. W. Best of Boston, who has been connected with relief work in Turkey for forty years.

Records for 1925 show that the organization served 68,158 children. They were in orphanages, homes, native schools, hospitals, refuge camps, industrial groups and clinics. During 1925 the relief body served 36,562,463 meals or enough to feed the entire population of New York city for two days.

An outstanding illustration of the organization's health programme occurred in Corinth, Greece, during the year. Following a devastating epidemic of malaria, the Near East directors directed a campaign of draining nearby swamps until the disease was stamped out. They then framed health legislation at the request of the governor of the province.

Donations during 1925 were received from fifty nations, while forty-four national churches including every leading religious faith, joined in co-operating with the organization's real programme.

Barclay Acheson, overseas director, reached New York today in time for the convention after having traveled more than 6,000 miles to report on economics and political conditions in Caucasian Russia and Armenia. With him came Dr. William W. Peet of Constantinople, high commissioner of the league of nations in Turkey. He reported on Turkish and Syrian conditions.

NEW MINISTRY HAS BEEN FORMED IN HOLLAND

THE HAGUE, March 4.—(AP)—Holland's prolonged cabinet crisis, which has lasted since November 14, ended today with the formation of a ministry by former Finance Minister De Geer, who was charged by Queen Wilhelmina to form a cabinet without regard to the party situations in parliament.

The last cabinet, headed by Colijn resigned after the adoption by the second chamber of an amendment to the budget by which the Dutch legation at the vatican would be withdrawn.

The new premier holds also the portfolio of finance. Dr. H. A. Van Karnebeek will continue as foreign minister.

During the months of his imprisonment in the death house, Pantano saw 13 slayers go through the door of the execution chamber, among them Morris and Joseph Diamond and John Farino, his alleged accomplices in the murder of two Brooklyn bank messengers.

Pantano broke down, weeping and laughing hysterically, when he was told that his sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment.

Mexico's Expulsion Of Catholic Orders

Story Told by Mother Superior Lorenza Rivarrez, Now a Refugee in New York.

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Mother Superior Lorenza Rivarrez, founder of the Order of St. Theresa in Mexico, who is now a refugee in New York, today told with tear-filled eyes the story of her expulsion from that country, together with other nuns and priests.

"My convent is no more," she said. "My nuns are hiding in homes of their friends, or, friendless, are left in the street. My thirty years of work have been destroyed by the government in a day."

The Mother Superior is one of a band of two nuns and ten priests who landed in New York yesterday on the Spanish Royal Mail Liner, Leon XIII. They are the first of Mexico's expelled Roman Catholic clergy to reach this country.

Mother Lorenza is accompanied by a Theresan Sister sent with her from the Havana convent, out of respect to her years and her services of the order. The two Theresian Sisters and a Carmelite nun, who has been ill since her expulsion from her convent, will sail for Barcelona, in their native Spain, on Saturday.

They keep shyly to themselves, spending much time in devotions. Mother Lorenza told her story, with Father Fabre, Chanoine priest, translating her Spanish into French, to a representative of The Associated Press.

"Thirty years ago I founded the college in Mexico City, with only a handful of novitiates," she said. "When the order of expulsion was delivered to me on February 27 by agents of the police, I had over 200 under the rule."

The order follows the rule of St. Theresa, teaching young girls and doing good works among the poor.

"It has been a very sad thing to see them driven out and the convent looted and closed," she said.

"What is there left for me? Retirement into the convent in Barcelona. I am too old to start again, the work I have spent my life accomplishing, which has been destroyed in one day."

Father Victor Fabre's story was much the same. Coming from France 32 years ago to do missionary work in Mexico, today, an old man, penniless, homeless, he faces a new start in San Domingo.

"No one can imagine the horrors that have befallen our church in Mexico," he said. "Priests and nuns of every order have been expelled, their churches and institutions looted and closed by order of the government.

"My own experience was that of being thrust out of my church in Mexico City, and with four others in this group thrust into prison for a week. I was brutally treated by police agents, and suffered a painful wound in the back.

"During the days in prison I received a constant stream of visitors from among the people. They are good people, and devout. They are badly distressed over the course of the government against Catholic clergy. If they had the strength they would be in open revolt. As it is they pray for the intervention of your country, to rescue them from a tyranous government.

"After the prison, we were marched with no belongings or papers aboard a liner for Havana. I spent my first 24 hours in the steerage, quartered with pigs. When the captain learned we were refugees he apologized, and gave us first class cabins."

WOULD WITHDRAW U. S. RECOGNITION OF MEXICO

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(AP)—Withdrawal of American recognition from the Mexican government was demanded in the house today by Representative Boylan, democrat, New York.

He contended that it was impossible for the United States to deal longer with that government in the face of the Mexican constitution, "which disregards the international code generally prevailing among the family of nations."

The time for "temporizing" with the present Mexican government, Mr. Boylan asserted, has passed.

"We can no more negotiate with Mexico," he said, "or continue friendly relations with that country than we could with Russia. The two nations are on a par as far as their attitude toward fundamental rights of humanity are concerned.

"Mexico, not so much by constantly recurring outrages against American citizens and seizures of American properties, as by adoption of a constitution of variance with international honor and the deepest instincts of civilization, has grievously offended against all those who subscribe to our constitutional guarantees of freedom."

In a statement inserted in the congressional record, he charged that under the Mexican constitution, "there is no such thing as religious liberty, untrammelled culture, education or freedom of worship."

OLD THREE-MASTER HAS MADE HER LAST VOYAGE

BOSTON, March 4.—(AP)—The old three-masted schooner Abbie S. Walker and her crew of four have sailed away on their last long voyage, as the old salts believe. The coaster which for 43 years has weathered the storms along the eastern seaboard, was given up for lost on the waterfront today. She sailed from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia on December 3 and after encountering severe weather, was forced to run into Winter Harbor, Me., for shelter. She left early in January for Boston and nothing has been heard of her since.

The Walker was commanded by Captain Arthur Ogilvie and her hailing port was Boston. She was built at Jonesboro, Me., in 1885 and was of 191 tons gross register.

It is understood that the company with which the schooner's cargo was insured has made a loss adjustment with the consignees, the Shawsheen Lumber company.

GILPATRIC'S EXPLANATIONS VAGUE AND UNSATISFACTORY

Questioning at Hartford Yesterday Merely Revealed That the Former Putnam Banker Was Lax in His Conduct as State Treasurer—Also Disclosed That His Bank Really Had No System of Bookkeeping—Clinton H. Scovill, Boston Accountant Engaged by the State, Exposed Possible Manipulation by the Former State Treasurer of Purchases of Liberty Loan Bonds—Gilpatric Will Be Taken Back to Atlanta Penitentiary Monday.

HARTFORD, March 4.—(AP)—G. Harold Gilpatric, defaulting cashier, embezzler and wrecker of the First National bank of Putnam, has completed his story in his attempt to aid the creditors of that institution, his brief "leave of absence" from Atlanta prison is nearing an end and he will be taken back to the southern penitentiary Monday.

Brought back to his home state on a writ of habeas corpus, the former state treasurer and leading citizen of his home town of Putnam, whose speculations closed the doors of his bank in August, 1924, and brought a financial crisis to a thriving community, for the past three weeks has been endeavoring to bring some kind of order out of chaos with reference to his tangled affairs.

He has faced his creditors, three times in bankruptcy court here and has spent many days with George M. Coffin, receiver of the wrecked Putnam bank in Putnam, explaining the maze of notes, mortgages, bond and stock transactions and business deals appearing on the records of that institution.

After a brief hearing in bankruptcy court here today, Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman abruptly ended the investigation, gave Referee Coffin the balance of this week to complete his check up of the Putnam bank books with the aid of its former cashier and ordered that the federal prisoner be taken back to Atlanta Monday. Gilpatric was taken back to his father's home in Putnam, his temporary place of confinement, this afternoon, and will remain there until he and his guard start for the south next week.

Several disclosures have been forced from the lips of the former banker during his brief stay in this state.

He has admitted that he was involved in scores of enterprises of a questionable character with reference to their financial value. He has confessed to the manipulation of by the early issues of liberty loan bonds purchased for the state while he was in office and has declared that possible the purchase of $720,000 in victory loans for the state and placed through his bank may disclose irregularities.

He has disclosed that the system of bookkeeping in use at his bank during the war, broke down completely in the liberty loan campaigns and that for a time, the bank had no system at all.

Continued questioning has brought from him the admission that he was lax in delivering government bonds purchased for the state; that he held up one purchase for 18 months, paying the interest at one time by clipping coupons from bonds placed in his bank for safe keeping.

The possible manipulation by the former state treasurer of purchases of victory loan bonds for the state figured at today's hearing in bankruptcy court. Through Clinton H. Scovell, Boston accountant engaged by the state to investigate these bond transactions, it was brought out that the state purchased $1,300,000 in victory loan bonds, the transactions being placed through seven banks of the state. Six of these banks were reasonably prompt in their delivery of the bonds, but there was a delay on the part of Gilpatric's own bank in completion of the transaction.

Previous to the bond delivery, it was shown, Gilpatric disposed of $500,000 of the bonds of the fifth issue and purchased in their place $500,000 of bonds in the fourth issue. Gilpatric refused to acknowledge such a deal but explained if such a transfer was made, the discounts offered by the fourth issue, making such bonds more attractive than those of the fifth issue, was his only reason for such action.

This viewpoint was upheld by Receiver Coffin who pointed out that at the time, bonds of the fourth issue were selling at 87 while fifth issue bonds were selling at par. The state would have benefited, he said, by the purchase of the fourth issue securities rather than the fifth issue bonds.

Transactions in the state school fund, in which Gilpatric was involved as a state treasurer, also were brought forth at the hearing today in an effort to learn why there were delays in such transactions and why some of them were combined. The transactions in question involved a $55,000 item of October 11, 1923. The sum of $40,000 was represented by a mortgage given to the Marot school of Thompson and $15,000 to Louis M. Reama. The state records, Mr. Scovell said, indicated that there was an unusual interval in the date of these transactions and the date on which the papers were recorded, and that both transactions were combined and one check was sent to Gilpatric's Putnam bank.

Gilpatric could give no explanation satisfactory to the Boston accountant, but explained that a third item should be included in the school fund transactions, one involving $100,000 to the Pomfret school.

Mr. Scovell intimated that two employes in the state treasurer's office had protested against the methods used in these transactions, but Gilpatric said he never had heard of such protests.

That he had no knowledge of assets not known to the trustee and receiver, which could be recovered and placed to the credit of the bankrupt estate, was Gilpatric's declaration when asked if he had told everything possible to aid the officials now clearing up the shattered estate.

John F. Carpenter, who represents creditors, had been expected to take up from one to three hours in questioning Gilpatric today but after conducting a ten minute examination this morning he announced to the referee that the questions would not aid in the recovery of funds for the persons who lost through the bank's failure and that he would not continue his investigation in open court.

With the return of Gilpatric to Atlanta, Mr. Scovell will continue the investigation for the state, ordered by Governor Trumbull, a committee of three prominent men including Charles G. Morris, former Governor Marcus Holcomb and Morgan B. Brainard has been appointed to conduct the inquiry.

SAYS PONZI IS READY TO MEET ALL OBLIGATIONS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—Frank Brennan, attorney for the defense, declared at the hearing today of Charles Ponzi, charged with using the mails to defraud, that his client was ready to meet all the obligations set forth in the certificates for "units of indebtedness" issued against the Charpon Land syndicate.

Following the appearance of Morgan Griswold, postal inspector, who made the complaint against Ponzi and H. G. Mitchell, of the St. Petersburg Better Business bureau, as witnesses, the prosecution asked that Ponzi present the entire group of papers pertaining to the syndicate. Upon the refusal of the defense to present the papers, contending that the government had no right to demand such, U. S. Commissioner Carl Noble continued the hearing until March 11. He said it would be useless to hear the point argued unless both sides were prepared for it.

Inspector Griswold testified that the "units of indebtedness" sold by Ponzi for $10 on a basis of 200 per cent. in sixty days would net the buyer $7,200 in one year, which he claimed was impossible for Ponzi to pay, on cross examination he stated that he had no report from anyone claiming actually to have been defrauded by Ponzi. Mr. Brennan declared that if he would hand over the signed certificate to Ponzi that he would meet the terms of the demand thereon.

Mitchell testified he had received the certificate of indebtedness from Ponzi through the mail but that it had not become due yet and he had not claimed his profit. He said he did not remember whether he read any of the advertisements of the syndicate before he made the purchase but that a circular was enclosed with the certificate.

Defense attorney pointed out that the advertisement also stated that the syndicate did not guarantee these profits in money but would give additional lots and place them on sale for the holder.

12TH ARREST MADE IN RUM RUNNING CONSPIRACY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 4.—(AP)—Jack Silverman of this city, who was arrested in Boston today as a fugitive from justice from Rhode Island, is the twelfth man to be apprehended in connection with the treasury department's investigation of the alleged conspiracy between rum runners and coast guardsmen to violate the prohibition act in local waters. He is one of 18 against whom indictments were returned in the case here Saturday by the federal grand jury.

Each of the other 11 who have been arrested has been held in $10,000 baff. They include a former state pilot and a former member of the coast guard. Others are sought. It is expected that the arrests and prosecution will deal the greatest blow to organized rum running in these waters since prohibition began.

FABRE LINER BRAGA HAD STORMY VOYAGE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 4.—(AP)—After a stormy trip, the steamer Braga of the Fabre Line docked this afternoon, one day late with 218 passengers from Constanza, Constantinople, Beriut, Alexandia, Jaffa, Smyrna, Piraeus, Marseilles, Lisbon and the Azore Islands.

Among Americans returning were Dr. and Mrs. Hugh O. Turrentine of Little Rock, Ark., who came home after two years with the Near East Relief at Leninakin, Syrian Russia, when last October they with other Americans and English subjects were victims of a hold-up in the Caucasus mountains by Georgian bandits.

Mrs. Turrentine said the robbers were considerate of the women, but robbed the men of most of their possessions.

SOUTH COVENTRY MINUS HALF A BUILDING LOT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 4—Town Clerk Louis W. Daniels of South Coventry has been busily occupied within the past few days making up the rate book from which the collector will collect the 20 mill tax on the completed grand list of $1,615,125. The tax rate was levied at the annual meeting of the town held last October at which time an appropriation of $3,000 was voted for graveling roads. The grand list compiled by the board of assessors, Louis A. Kingsbury, Frederick S. Wade and Franklin E. Orcutt, amounted to $1,640,152, about $37,000 more than in 1924. The increase is laid to natural sources and growth in building. Exemptions amounting to $25,000, practically all for soldiers, were made by the board of relief, comprising David S. Tillinghast, Charles A. Schroeder and John E. Wright.

In giving the figures of the grand list Thursday, First Selectman Dr. William L. Higgins presented some interesting statistics of the town of Coventry. There are 648 names on the grand list, 444 resident and 217 non-resident. The large number of non-resident taxpayers in the town, which showed a total population of 1,553 in 1920, is due to many cottage and land owners on the shores of Lake Wangumbaug. There are 528 dwelling houses, 816 barns and sheds and 32 mercantile and industrial buildings. The total acreage of the town, minus building lots is 23,226 acres.

It is singular that in the figures of the assessors who levied an assessment on house lots for the first time in the history of the town, there were 237 1-2 acres of house lots, leaving officials perplexed at the presence of one-half a lot. Coventry boasts of 296 horses and mules, 181 neat cattle and no less than 296 motor vehicles, enough to carry off the entire population in one procession. Coventry has done much in the past year to maintain her country and state aid roads in good condition. At the instigation of the residents who were highly pleased with the work being done, nearly $1,000 was added to the original appropriation of $3,000. Gravel has been placed where it is most needed and as a result mud-holes will be comparatively scarce in the town when the frost leaves the ground this coming spring.

Clarence M. Mathieu was elected exalted ruler for the coming year at the annual meeting of Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. E., held Wednesday evening. Exalted Ruler Albert J. Fourpaw was in charge of the session which was followed by a social hour and entertainment. Other officers are: Esteemed leading knight, P. D. Donahue; esteemed loyal knight, Maurice S. Leonard; esteemed lecturing knight, James H. Hurley; secretary, Louis J. Flynn; treasurer, Raymond A. Parkhurst, J. F. Bocash; trustee, John Reilly. This year's grand lodge session will be held in Chicago, July 12 to 15th. Exalted Ruler Fournier is the delegate from the local lodge, with Past Exalted Ruler Valentine L. Murphy, alternate. The installation of the new officers will take place at the meeting of April 7 with ex-Mayor Daniel Donovan of Meriden, past exalted ruler of the Meriden lodge, as installing officer. An "Old Timer's Night" will be the feature of the meeting of March 17th. The committee in charge consists of: James H. Hurley, Wilfred J. Laraude, James F. McGlone, Ernest Bottomley, Arthur Roy, John B. Edgerton, Michael J. Farrell, M. E. Sullivan, Charles Downing, and J. Z. Mathieu.

Mrs. Sarah E. Colburn, widow of Edgar A. Colburn, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eugene W. Latimer of South Coventry, early Thursday morning. She was born in Coventry, Rhode Island, September 14, 1852, a daughter of Cullen L. and Susan Greene Potter. Surviving her are three daughters Mrs. Louis W. Daniels, Mrs. Eugene W. Latimer and Miss Gertrude Colburn of South Coventry; two brothers, Albert Potter of Coventry and John of South Manchester and two sisters, Mrs. Austin Clark and Mrs. Fred Kaufman of this city. Mrs. Colburn was a member of the South Coventry Methodist Episcopal church and participated in many of its activities.

Copies of the new laws and a supply of dog license tags were received at the office of Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton Thursday and are now ready for the market. All dogs must be registered in the months of March and April. Six hundred canines made up the licensed dog population of the town of Windham last year. The number is expected to be about the same this year.

From the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles Carpenter of Bricktop road, funeral services for Matthew Danahey were held Thursday morning with a requiem high mass at St. Joseph's church at nine o'clock. Rev. Paul Bartlewski was the celebrant. The organ music was by Mrs. E. R. Portelance with Miss L. Monica as soloist. The services were large attended. At the receiving vault at St. Joseph's cemetery where the remains were placed, Fev. Father Bartlewski read a committal service. The bearers were Henry Carpenter, Leon Carpenter, Arthur Rell, Samuel Carpenter, Alfred Nichols and Peter Lavigne. Killourey Brothers were funeral directors.

Roland E. Jordan has been elected president of the Willimantic Country club, this action having been taken at the annual meeting held recently. Dr. Michael D. Riordan is vice-president; Kenneth N. Hillhouse, secretary; John F. Ahern, treasurer; Joseph B. Riordan, financial secretary and Joseph M. Berard and Willard H. Smith, directors for two years. The officers and directors comprise a board of governors who will select the committees for the year.

Walter V. Gavigan, formerly of this city, another graduate of Windham high school who went out and made good, on Thursday delivered an address, which is the first of a series to be broadcasted by him, from Station WLWL of New York city. Mr. Gavigan, who is still in his early twenties, is an honor graduate of Bates university and has been taking a special course in lecturing at Columbia university. He spoke most interestingly on the subject of "Books," the talk lasting 20 minutes. Mr. Gavigan has been a member of the faculty of St. Xavier college, Cincinnati, Ohio, and is gaining reknown as a lecturer on history and art subjects.

The bumpity-bump condition of the Main street railroad crossing, since the laying of the new rails, is causing people in vehicles to "rise to the occasion" and then some. If drivers are unaware of the necessity of proceeding with extreme caution. The rear seat occupants of an automobile driven over the crossing one night recently went up into the top of the machine, cut their heads and when the man tried to find his hat, he was sitting on it. Out of town autoists have remarks about this dangerous bump and expressed wonder that the condition had not been remedied.

result that trading was in substantially reduced volume. Total sales today, as compiled by Associated Press tabulators, were 2,626,400 shares, as compared with 3,755,700 in yesterday's record breaking session.

Thousands of eyes were focused on hundreds of tickers in the financial district when the market opened. Word had been flashed from the floor before the opening gong sounded that offerings of stock had been substantially reduced and that buying orders were in the majority. Prices bounded upward 1 to 5 points within the first few minutes of trading. This was regarded as a good omen, but was not accepted as conclusive evidence that the market had turned for the better. Professional observers wanted to find out whether stocks would "follow through" on the rally, or sag again under the weight of offerings attracted by the higher prices.

For several minutes the battle between opposing speculative forces centered around U. S. Steel common. It opened at 123 1-4, an overnight gain of 1 5-8 points. Bear traders, knowing that this stock was supported by the strongest financial interests in the street, watched the sales, and noticed that they appeared to be coming from widely scattered sources in small lots.

Then, apparently acting on the belief that the market was being allowed to take care of itself, they started to hammer Steel and forced it back to 122 1-8. Offerings were quickly absorbed and supporting orders increased in volume. Meanwhile all other sections of the list were forging steadily upward. Bear traders continued to put out short lines, at intervals, to test the character of the buying, but their offerings were quickly snapped up.

As the session wore on, word was flashed to all corners of the country and to European capitals that the break was over, at least temporarily, and that a sharp upward movement was in progress. The absence of any large blocks of stock being pressed for sale, and the persistent accumulation of small lots by so-called "bargain hunters," also heralded the end of the perpendicular decline which had reduced the quoted value of the securities traded in on the stock exchange and the New York curb market by between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000.

A canvas of some of the leading wire and commission houses showed that both the so-called big and little followers had been hard hit by the unexpectedly severe decline. In many cases, paper profits which had been built up to hundreds of thousands of dollars over a period of months were wiped out, or drastically reduced, by the violent drop in prices. Several large operators were forced to sharply curtail their lines of stock in order to conserve their buying power, but they were heavy buyers of stocks on the "scale down" yesterday, feeling that the decline, like the "bull" movement which preceded it, would be carried to extremes.

In the customers' rooms fo the big commission houses smiles again appeared on the faces of small traders whose furrowed brows and agonized expressions previously had testified to the nervous strain under which they were laboring. And, curiously enough, the rally also helped to revive many of the countless rumors, which accounted for the inflated value of many securities.

The upward movement gathered momentum as the session progressed, culminating in a whirlwind rally which sent over-extended shorts scurrying to cover. General Electric was in the vanguard of the advance, soaring to 329 7-8 and then easing to 328, where it was up 24 points on the day. American Can scored an extreme gain of 31 points to 312, and then settled back to 39. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe jumped 15 3-4 points to 179 3-4, closing 3-4 of a point below the top.

The rally was one of the most universal in recent stock exchange history, less than half a dozen active issues closing lower on the day while, over 50 showed net gainst of 5 to 12 1-4 points, and more than 200 closed 3 to 5 points higher.

Among the many groups of shares represented on the exchange, the oils had offered the best resistance to selling pressure, and the rally in some of those issues today carried them back to within striking distance of the year's high levels. Associated and Tidewater, which are expected to be consolidated within the next few days, were within 2 points of their 1925 peaks.

DANIELSON

BRIDEGROOM IS NOW HONEYMOONING IN JAIL

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 4.—A bridegroom went to jail for 60 days from Danielson Thursday morning. Emile Chagnon, 21, whose parents live in Webster, achieved this unusual distinction, if it may be so considered. He was arrested by State Officer Edward Siremens at the Baptist parsonage on Broad street Wednesday night just as Rev. C. J. Armstrong was to unite him in marriage with Miss Mary Clark, 18, of this place. In the town court Thursday morning Judge W. Penner Woodward imposed the sentence for 60 days in jail on an established charge that Chagnon had removed from this state and concealed a Massachusetts an automobile that he had purchased from the Collins Motor Sales company of Moosup on a conditional bill of sale, the financing through the L. A. W. Acceptance corporation of Worcester, formerly of Putnam.

Chagnon might have avoided his present predicament and been happy on his honeymoon if he had been willing to listen to reason and do what his agreement upon taking over the automobile pledge him to do. He elected, however, to play a game of hide and seek all through Wednesday with Officer Siremens, who had learned of the impending wedding and stood willing to adjust matters as pleased the complication in which Chagnon was fully aware he was involved. All efforts of the officer to get in touch with Chagnon failed through connivance and there was nothing left for the officer to do but arrest Chagnon just as he was to become a married man. The bride-to-be, a very good and loyal girl indeed, when advised, was expressed Thursday, heard what the charge against Chagnon was immediately upon his arrest, but insisted that the wedding be performed and her wish was granted.

There is a balance somewhat in excess of $500 due on the car that led to Chagnon's arrest. He disappeared with it from Jewett City about December 15 and failing to make the payments mentioned happened to be driving near to Springfield. Headed into New Hampshire and finally to Orange, Mass., where the car was held for return here. Even as late as Wednesday he could have addressed the differently over the car by making a payment. It appears that he followed bad advice and evaded the officer who was searching for him. His offer of payment in court Thursday morning naturally was rejected after a two weeks' expended to bring it before a judge. Chagnon, at one time employed in a local cotton mill here.

DEATH THURSDAY OF MRS. MARIA S. PRINCE

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 4.—Mrs. Maria S. Prince, widow of Frank Prince, died here this morning at 11:30 o'clock after an illness that began with a cold last Sunday. Mrs. Prince had been a resident of Danielson for many years and her death is a cause of great sorrow among her relatives and many friends. She was born in Southbridge, Mass., the daughter of Charles H. and Phoebe Sharp Dyer. Mrs. Prince was the first of three children, of the union and her death was the only survivor of the family. She was married at East Woodstock, she was married in marriage with Frank Prince Rev. Jabez Pack. In 1880 Mr. Prince came to Danielson to take a responsible position with the Quinebaug company and he continued his association with that concern until a few days prior to his death in 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Prince observed their silver wedding anniversary and the affair was made an outstanding event in their lives, a special feature being the presentation being the reading of a poem composed for the occasion by their son, Charles H. Prince of Franklin, Mass. Mrs. Prince for many years was a member of the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church and organizations within that body, was a charter member and for many years a member of a class of the Sunday school. She leaves two sons, Charles H. of Franklin, Mass., and Sprague Dyer Prince, who is president of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company and president of the Putnam County National bank of Danielson.

Josiah Linnell, 64, died Thursday morning at Baxter Center, where he had been a resident for a number of years. He was born in Harwich, Mass., and for many years followed a trade as a plumber, retiring a number of years ago to come to Foster to make his home in the Cameron family and has since remained there doing work about the farm. Mr. Linnell leaves a sister, a resident of Providence, and 7 brothers, who lives in California.

Thursday morning the funeral of Mrs. Emma Fitzpatrick, who died Sunday at a hospital in Providence, was held from her home near East Killingly with services at St. James' church at 10 o'clock. Rev. James McCullough, pastor celebrant of the requiem mass of requiem. The bearers were James J. Fitzpatrick, son of the deceased, George Stewart, Silas Lewis, Philip Lewis, Vere Peabody and George Harrington. The body was entombed at Holy Cross cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

There has been no lack of interest here in the spectacular drop in the stock market this week. Many Danielson people own stocks that have figured in the collapse, but there is no outward sign of worry among them. One man who regularly follows the market was as calm as a summer afternoon in discussing the break on Thursday. "I own my stocks," he said. "I have seen them go up and I have seen them go down before, but I am just sitting tight and waiting for normal conditions to come back again—and they'll come."

The poultry industry is developing by leaps and bounds in Killingly and other towns in this section of eastern Connecticut. One hears of 5,000 baby chicks here, 3,000 there, 6,000 at another place and so on. Dozens of people are in the business on greater or smaller scale. There appears to b an unlimited market for all the eggs and poultry this territory produces. A big proportion of the output goes to city markets, much of it to Providence. One hears of a man coming regularly into this territory from Cape Cod to buy eggs in case lots or in smaller quantities at times. He is but one of many buyers who canvass this territory regularly for eggs and poultry. The business is on a cash basis, goods paid for when taken away, and that's an important consideration.

Four weeks have elapsed since the first real effort began to dig out this section after the big snowstorm of February 4th. In the meantime there have been heavy rains and much thawing weather. The great proportion of the snow has disappeared, but between Danielson and Brooklyn, on the hill above the ledges, one will find snowbanks remaining that are five feet in height and frozen into practically a solid mass. It would appear now that April will be here or very close at hand before all the snow from the two big storms has disappeared from along the edges of the state highways.

All deposits made in the savings department of the Windham County National bank at the close of business on Saturday, March 6th, will draw interest from March 1st.—adv.

Vapors stop Colds

VAPORS reach a cold directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks Vapo-Rub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime:—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

REGRET DEATH OF MRS. A. M. GILDERSLEEVE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 4—News of the death of Mrs. A. M. Gildersleeve at Norwich has been received with regret by her many friends in Putnam and Woodstock, in which latter place she was born and lived for the greater part of her life. Mrs. Gildersleeve was a woman of unusual mental ability and with the exception of a slight deafness her facilities remained unimpaired almost until the time of her death, which was caused by an accident in which her hip was broken.

Until this accident happened she kept in close touch with everything that was going on in local matters and also ha da very intimate knowledge of national as well as international issues. Coupled with this intimate and accurate knowledge of current events, her reasoning and her conversational powers kept and maintained for her a very wide circle of friends.

The fractured bone which caused her death was recived from a fall at her home in East Woodstock, which she with the help of two maids, maintained and directed in spite of her age. The body will be brought to East Woodstock for burial.

She is survived by two children, Mrs. J. S. May of East Woodstock and Dr. A. M. Gildersleeve of Norwich, also by several grandchildren.

There will be a food sale Friday afternoon from 2 to 6 in the Community room of the P. S. bank under the auspices of the P. H. School Athletic association.—Adv.

The assistance of the Putnam chamber of commerce and Putnam citizens will be sought, as it is claimed that it will divert trade to Putnam which should be the natural trading center, that is now going to Southbridge, Mass. PRO HOCKEY PLAYER'S WAGE AVERAGES $3,500 IN 36 GAMES

NEW YORK, Mar. 4 (AP)—Increased popularity of professional hockey due in some measure to the inclusion of New York and Pittsburgh in the National Hockey League has been accompanied by a corresponding rise in the salaries of the players.

G. O. P. IN TEXAS TAKES FIRST STAND AS PARTY

DALLAS, Tex., March 4 (AP)—Peculiar quirks of the Texas primary law are giving trouble to the republican party, which for the first time in its history, is planning to hold a party primary in this state. The first primary is next July.

The law requires that any party polling 100,000 or more votes for governor shall hold a primary. In the last general election George C. Butte, republican candidate for governor received 300,000 votes, three times the vote ever polled by a republican candidate.

A dispute has arisen as to which party is to have the use of the ballot boxes during the coming July primaries. The law provides that these supplies may be used by the party casting 100,000 votes in the last preceding general election.

A formal demand from the republicans for the supplies placed county commissioners' courts in a quandary. Some counties have met the situation by purchasing duplicate sets of boxes, booths and guard rails, while others have attempted to evade the demand.

One of the chief differences between the Texas new and the primary laws of other states is that the former does not provide for a joint primary. If more than one party comes under the provisions, the parties hold separate primaries on the same day at different polling places.

The democratic party is the only one which has ever functioned under this law, and republicans are charging that it is a democratic law made by democrats for democrats.

Unlike the joint primary operated in connection with the same officials at the general election and in which voters of both parties participate, using ballots of different color and design, the Texas law provides for partisan primaries, conducted separately. Each has election officials selected by the party county chairman and with no official responsibility to the state for safeguarding the primary or protecting the count other than a possible appeal to the courts after the primary is over.

The primaries are financed by the candidates, the chief burden falling on candidates for county and precinct offices. These candidates are assessed on the basis of the pay attached to the office they seek. Candidates for state and district offices are assessed about $100 each.

The republicans declare that this is in effect purchasing the office, and that it is a peculiar wardship on them, because it is almost impossible to induce a candidate to contribute to a hopeless cause. Heretofore a republican candidacy in Texas has been an empty honor, with here and there an exception.

The law provides that every hour at election, judge must go to the door of the polling place and announce in a loud voice the number of ballots cast up to that time. It forbids anyone to transport voters to the polls in any vehicle, except cripples and those otherwise disabled.

BIRTH RATE IN ENGLAND IN 1925 LOWER THAN OF FRANCE

LONDONN, March 4. (AP)—London's empty cradles are causing much agitation. Only eighteen babies were born for every 1,000 of population in 1925. The rate for all England was 18.3 babies to every 1,000 persons.

Last year showed a lower birth rate than the less years immediately after the war. The decline is spread among all classes.

MORGANTHAU ON PHILIPPINES

Henry Morganthau has been making a private study of the Philippines with the result that he believed he was justified in responding to the appeals of the reporters in Manila for an interview. In all probability he didn't say what would have been highly pleasing to the Filipino politicians who have been working so long for independence but he spoke from the heart and in such a manner that left no doubt as to what he believes should be done for the good of the islanders.

It was Mr. Morganthau's advice that the Filipinos grasp the opportunity for insuring happiness and prosperity by tying up as junior partners with the United States and refrain from fostering that cyclone which should it burst would raise havoc solely in the Philippines.

What Mr. Morganthau had to say was in direct opposition to the activities of the politicians of the islands who are striving for independence. His advice was not a matter of guesswork. He didn't speak from prejudice and from lack of observation of conditions in the islands. He has been over the ground and he has observed what the situation is, what the danger is under the politicians plan and what the islanders should do for their own protection.

Mr. Morganthau is more than a casual visitor. He has an international standing. He has done much work among dependent minorities and people in distress. He was for a long time located in Turkey, where for a period of two years he handled, as American ambassador, the diplomatic affairs of nine nations. He investigated social conditions in Poland following the war and was chairman of the Greek refugee commission named by the league of nations.

Having come to the conclusion that the independence agitation was nothing more than a high explosive, Mr. Morganthau warns the Filipinos against it. It is no more than others have done but it is a valuable opinion added to others and enough to cause the islanders to open their eyes to the facts and be governed accordingly.

UNDERPASSES AND CROSSINGS

There were days when railroad crossings figured in much fewer fatalities than they do today. The crossings haven't changed but the use of them has. The speed of present day traffic minimizes the caution used.

But the danger of the railroad crossing is not much greater today than that of the underpass. Except that the underpass has been constructed within recent years, and barring the fact that the road runs under the railroad track at right angles, the underpass is invariably narrow and blind, and it is not surprising that there is a demand for the elimination of such dangerspots.

In many instances the underpass should be rebuilt and constructed at such an angle that there there will be no sharp corners to negotiate. Numerous are the underpasses where drivers of vehicles have little or no idea of what is going to be encountered in the way of traffic going in the opposite direction and it is impossible to find out until it is suddenly met. If the speed is reasonable and the car is under control there is no danger but that isn't always the case, although the knowledge that an underpass is ahead should be sufficient warning to any driver to negotiate it cautiously and on his own side of the road, especially when the highway takes the form of a letter S at such a point.

As crossings are eliminated and underpasses take their place modern engineering can be expected to give due consideration to the safety requirements of the highway and to construct such ways at angles that will permit a view of the road ahead. It is not surprising therefore that demands are being made for the modification of those underpasses which, have long existed where the roadway in some places will not accommodate two cars and where sharp corners invite accidents unless extraordinary care is exercised as cars going in the opposite directions meet at such a point. The time hasn't come when crossings or underpasses can be negotiated without the observance of proper precautions.

HELPING MANKIND

While Sir Henry Lunn must be regarded as the most concerned in the use which he is to make of his fortune, it is nevertheless a cause which will arouse the interest of many others. Sir Henry is a millionaire and he has decided to devote his fortune to the promotion of unity amongst the churches and concord among the nations. It is a cause which few if any others have adopted, but he is convinced of its desirability, and worth and is desirous that his fortune be put at work in its behalf at once. He is to turn over all his property and income except $2500 a year and his expenses to be devoted to this purpose.

This is another instance where the desire prevails on the part of a philanthropist to see the work, which he wants his money to do, started during his lifetime rather than after he has gone. It is quite natural that he should offer a suggestion or two at the time of organizing the work and after it has been started, and that he will have an opportunity to do if it is gotten underway while he is living.

Sir Henry Lunn was ordained as a minister and went to India from England where he served as a missionary. Following his retirement from that work he became a hotel proprietor and tourist agent and in this work he prospered and it is as the result of this prosperity that he is able to set in motion the efforts which he has apparently long cherished.

For the remainder of his life he deprives himself of the benefit of the wealth he has amassed and while he will continue to lecture and to forward in all ways possible the better understanding between denominations and nations he will be doing so almost as a laborer. His action reminds one of that taken by Dr. Conwell of Philadelphia in giving away his millions for the advancement of causes which were close to his heart and which were for the good of humanity.

GETTING MORE FOR LESS

Various inconsistencies have been pointed out in connection with the postal rates which have been in effect since the change was made to bring in additional revenue with which to meet the additional expense caused by increased salaries. The experience of The Pitcher-Hamilton company, paper merchants, is not so different from some others, but it is nevertheless interesting.

This company issued a pamphlet of 16 pages for the trade and it was classified in such a way by the post office department as to permit it to be mailed for one cent. A review of the situation resulted in notice to the effect that an additional half cent would be necessary on each copy.

Thereupon a study of the situation disclosed the fact that if the pamphlet was increased from 16 to 24 pages it could be mailed for one cent. That means that though there has been an increase of 50 per cent. in the weight the cost of mailing is reduced 33 1-3 per cent. The company says "it's hard to figure out, but it is true."

This idea of getting more for less is one of the strange operations of the existing postal laws and yet it is being done. There are those who found that they would be obliged to pay a surprising price for the forwarding of a certain package, but after stuffing it with paper and other weighty filling it was possible to have the government handle it for a smaller amount.

The postal rates were created in a hurry. They have been under investigation for a long time and it is no secret that there are many alterations that ought to be made.

ANOTHER YALE ENDOWMENT

Yale university is in need of additional endowment to the extent of $20,000,000 according to President James R. Angell. It is always remarked in connection with university pleas for funds that no institution is ever satisfied for long, and such is undoubtedly true of growing institutions.

President Angell points out the reason for requiring this additional endowment by explaining that the attendance has increased over 100 per cent and annual expenditures have more than doubled since the war whereas the university's endowment has increased only 74 per cent, leaving Yale's endowments inadequate and far below several of the sister universities.

The situation is that the university is not able to live within its income from tuition and endowment and would be incurring a considerable annual deficit were it not for the support of the alumni.

The additional endowment will permit of more nearly adequate compensation for the teachers, an increase in their number and an adequate endowment of the university library.

The plea for more funds for Yale may come often but the importance of responding to it is thoroughly appreciated by the graduates of that institution and there are reasons for believing that by the end of the next five years the desired increase in the endowment will be obtained. The alumni will be alert to the importance of maintaining the educational standards of the institution at New Haven.

AT THE CLUB

"If I had a wife," said the sandy-haired person severely, "I'd have her trained like my sister."

The large and amiable member snorted with amusement; he settled his tie and continued to chuckle.

"I, even I, can see the humor of that," he said, "unsistered and unwed though I be, as the poet chap says. Since reaching an age of discretion I have gleaned this and that in a rudimentary way regarding the peculiarities of the fairer sex and your naive remarks give me a laughing pain. Your idea of a wife is an obedient slave, I presume, bowing meekly to your slightest whim, while——"

"There you go," complained the sandy-haired person tartly, "always projecting your own ideas into the talk to label 'em as mine."

The large and amiable member gasped with resentment, but before he could draw breath for a comeback the sandy haired person had settled his spectacles more firmly on his nose and taken the floor.

"I'd have a wife thoroughly educated," he observed firmly. "Not the regular college variety that has become epidemic of late years, but education of a kind that would result in real efficiency. The kind of efficiency that regulates a household like a well-oiled machine. If I had to go to Seattle for a couple of days, for instance, I'd say to my wife, 'I wish you'd arrange to leave the children and close the house for a week, my dear, and take the 9 o'clock train west with me this evening.' And she'd say, 'Certainly, my love, I'll pack the bags at once and where are those silk shirts you wanted me to mend?'

The bachelor member snorted again, louder than before. "Yes, she would not," he observed. "What she'd really say is, 'You go to heck, you poor fish. Don't you see I can't leave home, with Junior to get ready for the fall term at school and the baby to have her tonsils out?'"

The sandy-haired person looked shocked. "Do you suppose for one moment," he asked in a pained voice, "that I'd be married to a girl who used such language as that?"

"Oh, maybe she wouldn't put it in just those words," agreed the bachelor member, indifferently, "but the substance would be the same. No doubt she would say: 'Really, Henry, I'm surprised that you can suggest such a thing. You might know how utterly impossible it is for me to leave now.'"

"Oh, by the way," added the amiable bachelor, with a sudden acquisition of interest, "speaking of trips reminds me that I saw some topping posters in the railroad company's window this morning. I went in and got the literature and I say, old man, if the railroad company's press agent isn't a worse liar than the general run of press agents, that place is some place. Why, the fishing they tell about in that pamphlet would make your mouth water. They say——"

"I know what they say," interrupted the sandy-haired person, with a wistful gleam in his eye. "What about it?"

"Let's go!" suggested the bachelor member enthusiastically. "Don't it ever occur to you that, keeping your house is a wearing job and that your sister needs an occasional vacation like any other human being? Don't be a hog! Ask her to take a trip with us."

"Hog nothing," thundered the sandy-haired person indignantly. "I asked her yesterday."

"Well?" said the amiable bachelor hopefully.

"She said," the sandy-haired person told him with a grieved frown, "that the housecleaning wasn't done and she was surprised I should suggest——"

The sandy haired person stammered and gulped as a slow grin illumined the face of the listener.

"Well, well," murmured the bachelor member, rubbing his chin thoughtfully as he led the way toward the grill, "I was hoping she said 'Certainly, darling! I'll be ready in ten minutes!'" —Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Another Commission Wanted

Mr. Editor: I demand that congress create a commission of expert business men to arrange all salaries of people working in the U. S. government service and to say what other allowances they should have.

The American people can't afford to be looted by graft pay and graft pensions.

The American has great pride, and he wants to pay his way to the last expense. He can do this if our statesmanship is good enough to give him protection against the schemes of the big-game promoters of this and other countries.

I want the same kind of commission created in this state of Connecticut.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The career of George E. Evans, the new executive head of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, furnishes another example of the American boy who by sheer ability rises from the ranks to become head of a great railroad system. Mr. Evans' service with the L. & N. dates back more than half a century, when he entered the company's employ in the capacity of a telegraph operator. Born in Cambridge, O., in 1856, he graduated from the high school in that town and at an early age became an expert telegrapher. He was so proficient that when only 15 years old he was employed by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad as station agent in his home town, a position he held for two years, after which he went to the L. & N. Seven years at the key fitted him for duty as chief operator and then in successive years he became chief despatcher, trainmaster, division superintendent, and in 1920, was made general manager of the system.

Stories That Recall Others

The Joys of Peacemaking

The real estate agent had done much business for a certain couple and they depended upon his advice and assistance frequently for the solution of various problems. One morning he got this as he took down his telephone: "I don't want to move but my husband wants to move" and the real estate agent recognized the voice of the woman. "I must do some shopping," she continued and my husband says he is going to move while I am gone. What shall I do about it?"

Before the surprised agent could reply the woman answered her own question. "I'll tell you what," she said, "you send a policeman out here to keep him from moving while I go out and shop."

From Small Beginnings

John Muir, the Pioneer's Boy, the Founder of National Parks

The great Muir Glacier in Alaska perpetuates the name of John Muir, a great American scientist and lover of nature. No man could ask for a more imposing monument than the white wall of ice that borders the cold, northern waters. In the schools of the United States pupils study John Muir's book, The Story of My Boyhood and Youth. The name of John Muir has become associated with the name of John Burroughs, for both men were ardent in their love of nature; both men made a deep impress upon their fellow beings; both men were simple and kindly of heart, and both rose from poverty to greatness.

In the early days of Wisconsin, people saw a strong, active youth of 21 at work on a farm. He wore rough clothing, his hands were calloused, and he thoroughly understood farming. Beyond that he knew but little. From the time when he had come from Scotland with his father, at the age of 11, he had worked hard on the farm. No one expected John Muir to become anything except a farmer, like his father. In just one respect was the young man different from the other young men of the neighborhood: he was determined to have an education when he found the time he studied. He had no money to pay his way around college, but he had the willingness to labor—and men who work can always gain money. He was 22 before he found the opportunity to go to college, and he had to work his way through, but he was not daunted by that. He worked.

In the University of Wisconsin he gained a training that stimulated his mind, and made him wish to see more of the world than he had yet seen. He left his father's farm and the other farms on which he had worked and set out to study the United States. A few years after he had left college he explored the wonderful Yosemite Valley, was enchanted by its beauty, and from then on was interested in it. He advocated making places of supreme beauty into national parks for the enjoyment of all. Later, he explored Alaska, visited the Arctic regions, and traveled throughout the world. He wrote many books, grew into a serene old age, and died at 76.

Once the Auto Was Denounced

Some of the towns in the United States 20 years ago denounced the automobile in resolutions, prohibiting its use in certain streets and at stated times, as after dark or after sundown.

Before a person was allowed to operate an automobile in Vienna, Austria, a score of years ago, his machine had to be inspected and approved by the authorities, recalls the Indianapolis News. Each car was required to be able to turn in a 20-foot diameter. In some places the speed was not allowed to exceed that of a horse going on a trot, and round curves and over bridges, or in narrow streets the speed limit was placed at the pace maintained by a pedestrian, Antwerp, Belgium, it is said, had such regulations.

A newspaper, printed in Fresno, Calif., 20 years ago, reported that automobiles had become almost as common in that city as bicycles. At the present time there is an automobile for every three persons in southern California. Bicycles are scarce.

Two generations of girls—English as well as American—have loved Little Women, Louisa M. Alcott's famous book, and have laughed over the experiences of Meg, Jo, Beth and Amy. In London it is proposed to erect a memorial to them and their creator, a Little Women bed in the Washington ward of the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn road. Each bed will be dedicated to a famous American. The connection of the ward with the United States began during the war. Now only English mothers and babies enjoy its comforts.

A Queer Family

Perhaps the queerest family group resides in the Atchison (Kas.) zoo. In a pen live Dixie, buck deer; six chickens and a big yellow alley cat. At night the deer curls up in its shelter, and the cat and the chickens hover in close proximity, absorbing the warmth from the deer's body. At feeding time the deer pushes its muzzle into the trough and then lets the chickens pick the bits of bran and grain from its face. And the cat has forgotten how to wash its face and hands. Dixie gives the cat a thorough tongue bath regularly. The cat will lie down in front of the deer and as soon as its face is washed will turn its back to the door for washing, and so on until its whole body is cleansed. There formerly was a goose in the family, but the deer in its anxiety to give the goose enough exercise ran the poor thing to death.

O'Brien Boy Thin and Pale

In a Little Over Two Months Gained Eleven Pounds

As a body builder, an appetite creator, and to make weak, skinny boys and girls sturdy, strong and full of energy there is nothing like Cod Liver Oil—any physician will tell you that.

But it's vile, horrible stuff to take, and is apt to upset any stomach, so now doctors are prescribing and wise parents are buying McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—sugar coated, and as easy to take as candy.

The son of George G. O'Brien of Mahwah, N. J., was thin and pale and did not get enough nourishment from his food. In a little over two months, he gained eleven and one-half pounds, and feels and looks one hundred per cent. better.

Mothers, if any of your children are weak, thin or puny, give them these tablets, as directed for 30 days, and watch them gain flesh and health from day to day—they seldom fail—but if the unusual should happen and you are not supremely satisfied with results—your druggist is authorized to return your money.

COLCHESTER MAN BLAMES BOTH DRIVERS IN SUIT FOR $10,000

Abraham Simonowitz of Colchester is suing both the driver with whom he was riding in a motor truck and the driver of the machine that was in collision with the truck in a suit that went on trial in the superior court at New London Thursday morning before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury. He asks $10,000 damages.

The plaintiff's attorneys had rested their testimony and attorneys for the defendant had called one or two witnesses when court adjourned for the day. The trial will continue next Tuesday and will probably take most of the day.

The Simonowitz suit is against David Feiden of Colchester, with whom Simonowitz was riding, and Lorenzo D. Fairbrother, of Stonington, whose machine was in collision with Feiden's.

The suit arises out of an automobile crash on the Norwich-Hamburg road, on Feb. 16, 1925, when a Reo truck, operated by Feiden, and occupied by the plaintiff and another man, figured in a collision with a Hudson car, belonging to Fairbrother. The crash occurred at the intersection of the Norwich-Hamburg road and the New London-Hartford turnpike, a spot that is called "The Willows."

According to witnesses in court Thursday, the Reo truck was overturned and the plaintiff and driver were pinned beneath the car, a portion of the cab being ripped away by rescuers in order to release the plaintiff and driver from the wreckage. The plaintiff claims physical and mental injuries. Feiden is a cattle dealer and on the day in question, according to testimony, was driving to see some stock, and the plaintiff was with him for the purpose of showing him where the stock was.

Attorneys Morris Lubchansky, Russel H. Corcoran and Warren R. Burrows appeared for the plaintiff and Attorneys Arthur M. Brown and C. V. James for Fairbrother, and Perkins, Wells & Davis for Feiden.

MORE MONEY NEEDED BY STREET DEPARTMENT

A special city meeting has been called for March 16th by Mayor Milo R. Waters to take action on two appropriations, both for the public works department of the city one for $4,000 for oiling and sprinkling, and the other for $16,000 to take care of the general expenses of the department for the remainder of the fiscal year. The recent snow storms have cost the city something over $9,000, this being of course an unavoidable expense. In order to give the citizens prompt service the street department cleared the streets from the heavy snows and this of course meant added expense of thousands of dollars.

The item of $4,000 asked for the oiling and sprinkling of the streets is to allow the street commissioner to oil the streets at the proper time rather than to wait until after the June meeting. This amount if voted at the special city meeting will not be included in next year's budget so that it is not, therefore, an added expense to the city, simply appropriating the money ahead of previous years.

Several unforeseen expenses that had to be cared for have confronted the street department this year. One of these, costing something over $1,400 was the caving in of a wall on Hobart avenue which had to be attended to. The public works department almost every year has some unforeseen expense to care for but so far this year the overdrafts have been below that of other years and the department has been conducted along real business lines.

GRANDMOTHER ACCUSED OF MURDER OF HER HUSBAND

CHICAGO, March 4.—(AP)—Mrs. Ellen Nusbaum, the grandmother accused of the murder of her husband, Albert, wealthy invalid contractor, so she might marry John Walton Winn, an ex-convict, also accused of the murder, today told the tawdry story of her romance with Winn.

Testifying in her own defense, she said she met Winn 11 years ago when he answered an advertisement her husband placed in a newspaper for a laborer. Winn worked for Nusbaum and boarded at the Nusbaum home, living there a year and a half. For the next eight years she said she saw little of him but wrote to him and sent him money in amounts of from $5 to $1 although once she sent him $300. She maintained that he was "nothing more than a friend but had some queer influence over me and I couldn't refuse him money."

A year ago Winn made threats against her life and had threatened her several times since, she said.

OUTRAGED HUSBAND WAS SHOT DEAD BY ROOMER

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—(AP)—William H. L. Paules, 51, was shot to death in his home today. Two hours later Jesse Stephens, who several weeks ago rented a room in Paules' house, was arrested by detectives. He told them they said, he had shot Paules and was on his way to consult an attorney.

Endearing notes alleged to have been written by Stephens to Mrs. Paules, are said to have led up to the shooting. The woman said she had received them from Stephens for the last three weeks. One of them, turned over to the police, read, "Dearest, the best words in the English language are I love you. Baby." Mrs. Paules said she had received other notes written in a similar vein, and that she had complained to her husband.

Today Paules ordered Stephens to leave the house. A quarrel followed and Paules was shot, three bullets taking effect.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 4.—(AP)—Richard Stewart, 35 years old, Negro of Wilmington, was today sentenced to death in the electric chair during the week of May for the murder of William James, 28 in Wilmington last August.

Stewart told Mrs. James a week before the murder that he had decided to kill her husband, Assistant District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell said in moving for sentence. On Mrs. James' refusal to run away with him, he asserted, the Negro walked into her husband's bedroom and riddled his body with shots from an automatic as he slept with two of the children. Later he mangled the body to an unused well and hid it with stones.

BOSTON, March 4.—(AP)—A warrant for the arrest of 11 year old Fred W. Driel of Ashmont on a charge of manslaughter was asked in the Dorchester district court today by Sergeant Walt of the Fields Corner police station. Driel was alleged to have shot and killed his chum, Arthur M. De Stefano while "playing Indian" Wednesday night. Action on the warrant was suspended by the court pending the official report of Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, whose preliminary finding termed the shooting "purely accidental."

Fred fired at Arthur with a revolver purchased from a mail order house. According to information given the police, the weapon was loaded with blank cartridges, but the one fired at the boy contained enough lead to kill him.

"And your milk. It's wonderful. That's one of my weaknesses—milk, and I can appreciate it fully in your country."

Lady Cynthia and Captain Mosley left tonight for Niagara Falls.

IF HAIR IS DRY BLAME CONSTANT CURLING, WAVING

Girls just must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the luster, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 25-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless, and fading hair.

"Danderine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Danderine" is pleasant and easy to use.

SUNNY JIM, PET CROW, AT LAUREL HEIGHTS

It was a cool grey morning and the little group of ambulatory patients from the men's shack of the Laurel Heights Sanatorium, one of the state tuberculosis sanatoriums in Connecticut, sat wrapped in thick coats or blankets, taking the outdoor cure in their corner of the sanatorium grounds next to the grove beyond.

Not yet strong enough for occupational therapy, they were content to dream of a new lease of life that opened for them as each day brought a little more strength. They were happy that their weeks, in some cases months, of infirmary confinement were over and they were able to walk slowly from their shacks.

Their little friends were with the group of convalescents that morning. There was a woodchuck that the little group had tempted from beyond the grove. He was there every day for the members of the group took turns in extracting a bit from the sanatorium table for him. A tame woodchuck, he was, that ate unafraid from the hand of the invalids, whose eyes had looked the long winter through upon sanatorium infirmary walls, days of human weaklines who had lain close to the edge of life until the sanatorium regime had given them an ounce of new strength each day, and they were able to creep outdoors.

The woodchuck came shyly and went just as he came after he had taken his bit, and he looked trustfully at the silent group whose eyes followed him like a friend making a social morning call.

Then the rabbit came. Wise in his caution, Bunny never appeared until the woodchuck had gone. The group of patients had a bite for him, too. He stayed longer and was petted and the older of the group told the newer members how they had come upon him wounded in the brush, bitten by some enemy, probably a dog, his shoulder torn and bleeding, and how the surgical staff of the sanatorium had bound his wound and he had smelled the first road of recovery along with the patients before he had gone back to the woods. Now Bunny, no more than the woodchuck, ever missed his morning visit to his friends of the little group. One of two of the sick men stroked Bunny's fur and told him that he was winning back his health faster than they were.

Bunny was about to take his path back to his hole in the brush, when a loud cry of distress sounded from the topmost bough of the oldest pine tree in the grove. The eyes of the invalids followed the sound of avian conflict and saw two bluejays fiercely attacking a nest that they knew from its size and shape to be a crow's nest.

They saw as they looked, that the old birds had gone away and that the jays, pirates and ancient enemy of fledglings, were pushing their bills into the nest while the shrill cry of the young crows sounded a piteous call for help.

Themselves unable to walk and to climb and give relief, some of the group called to one of the sanatorium attendants who quickly climbed the tall pine and found that the attack of the jays had killed all but two of the nestful of young crows. The pair were given shelter in one of the outbuildings of the sanatorium and gradually grew sturdy and mature.

Tame as household pets after a few weeks, the pair looked upon their benefactors as their closest friends. Mornings, at the sign of activity in the shack, "Jim" and "Jen", as they were christened, flew lightly against the window near the beds of their friends in the sanatorium and pecked loudly enough to announce themselves, giving a low sound of greeting. They hovered on the shack roof until the sitters-out made their appearance in the seats on the lawn.

Sounds which passed as crow talk developed and it was before long possible for quite a conversation to be carried on between the birds and the patients, through the medium of a mysterious vocal expression which was improvised by both parties.

The most intelligent display of the talents of "Jim" and "Jennie" was given, however, when an object was thrown to them. Diving from their vantage point on the roof of the shack, they caught it in mid-air and at once passed judgment on its value. If it proved a twig, it had no attractions—no value for "Jim" or "Jennie," and they dropped it to the ground and flew back to their outlook point on the sanatorium ridgepole.

If it was a penny, the crow carefully and gravely carried it to a hoard of favorite objects near the pine tree of his nativity, where it was later retrieved by its owner.

One day "Jim" gave an object lesson in discrimination that furnished conversation from cot to cot in the sanatorium as a live topic of interest. An affluent visitor at the institution, when told to toss a penny for the crows to catch and make away with, instead threw a 50 cent piece into the air. Instantly, "Jim" was under it but his quick wit told him that here was a valuable prize and he flew away with it into the woods. He could not be followed in time to rescue the coin and it was never found, for "Jim" refused all invitations to lead the owner to its hiding place.

The first sadness that crept into the crow vaudeville occurred in mid-summer when a boy became alarmed because "Jen" perched on his back in a friendly way. Rudely and ignorantly brushing off the pet bird, and throwing it to the ground, he broke "Jen's" leg. Cries of protest, anger and anguish broke from the mouths of the patients, but "Jenny" was beyond surgical help, and had to be killed, and "Jim" and the shack patients were inconsolable for a time, and some of the shack men wrote home that they felt as if a pet dog had been lost after years of comradeship.

"Jennys" death created an even closer bond between the sitters-out and "Jim" and their daily companionship brightened their rest cure treatment until the past week when a real crime tragedy occurred. "Jim" did not come that morning to peck at the shack windows with his matin message of good cheer. Nor was he visible after breakfast and before long a searching party was made up which went to his pine tree haunts. There under the evergreen where he had been first discovered, his dead body lay, and the autopsy which was ordered and held to disclose the cause of the death of the sanatorium pet revealed that he had been poisoned.

There is gloom in the men's shack at Laurel Heights and the healing of the patients does not go on as fast as it did when "Sunny Jim Crow" and "Jen", or even "Jim" alone, was alive.

It will probably never be known whether "Jim" was poisoned deliberately by some malicious individual, or whether he wandered to some lot, where poison had been spread to kill rats, but woe betide the person whom the shack men of the sanatorium can prove guilty of placing the fatal dose where "Jim" could find and eat it.

There is no talk of a successor, or of a substitute for "Jim," but he has left a memory of black sunshine that will scatter rays wherever his life story is told in the homes of the shackmates of Laurel Heights, when they win back their health and return to their families.

PRICES OF FOOTBALL TICKETS FOR GAMES PLAYED BY "BIG THREE" HAVE BEEN RAISED

NEW HAVEN, March 4.—(AP)—Five dollars hereafter will be the price to alumni for single tickets to football games played by the "Big Three"—Yale, Harvard and Princeton—between themselves, by unanimous agreement. The announcement was made at Yale tonight for itself and sister universities.

This will mean an increase in price from $3 a ticket to alumni while by the agreement single tickets to "members of the university community" shall be $2, or $1 less than heretofore.

Increase in revenue sought by the change in prices will be applied "solely to maintenance and development of general athletic facilities and not to increasing budgets of intercollegiate athletic teams."

It is pointed out that adequate maintenance and development of proper facilities for general student participation in athletic sports require increased annual revenue. Yale, in its comment upon approval of the increase, points to necessity of increased income to maintain ice hockey and general skating, to support its new golf course, and for additional recreational facilities.

The joint statement for Harvard and Princeton was issued on behalf of the Yale Athletics association by Professor George H. Nettleton, chairman of its board of athletic control and a copy was to be given out simultaneously at the other universities.

The joint statement says: The respective athletic committees and boards of Harvard, Yale and Princeton, after careful study of their general athletic facilities, needs, and resources have unanimously reached the following conclusions:

1—That adequate maintenance and development of proper facilities for general student participation in athletic sports, require substantially increased annual revenue. The decreased purchasing power of the dollar had inevitably increased operating expenses of every sort until the choice now rests between abandonment or material curtailment of the policy of athletics for all and increased revenue for its proper support.

2—That the proposed increases in annual revenue shall be applied solely to maintenance and development of general athletic facilities and not to increase the budgets of intercollegiate athletic teams. The existing agreements limiting total budgets for coaching and individual salaries shall be maintained.

3—That, in view of the primary and paramount financial requirements of the respective universities for general educational endowment, increased annual revenue for athletic purposes should be secured through sources of direct athletic revenue, and that accordingly the price of football tickets shall be advanced as mutually agreed. There shall be, however, specific provision for the university community (faculty, student and administrative bodies) through season and individual game tickets at substantially reduced prices.

4—That the general price of single tickets for the three Harvard, Yale and Princeton football games shall be five dollars, and that the price of single tickets for members of the university community shall be two dollars. It is agreed that each university shall determine the details governing the university privileges, in substantial accord with the general understanding.

The respective committees, boards and representatives concerned unite in this statement of their mutual agreement and of the circumstances that have led to its unanimous adoption."

The comment of Yale upon the agreement was made by Professor Nettleton who said:

"During the current year the board of control has studied with especial care the present needs and resources of the university for general athletics. The representative membership of the board ensures full consideration of general university and academic interests.

"The board has unanimously approved the conclusions reached in the joint agreement with Harvard and Princeton. It heartily supports the policy of general athletics not merely as it adds individual physical development but as it enhances the value of intramural sports. The Yale board has long recognized that the general economic factors of increased costs and the rapid increase, both actual and proportionate, in the number of students participating in general athletics, would inevitably require increased financial revenue. With especial consideration and support of the university's recently announced plan to secure largely increased endowment for educational purposes, the board has sought to conserve all essential university interests.

"The recent provision of adequate facilities for hockey and general skating depends directly on increased financial income. The Ray Tompkins memorial property, given to the university to encourage general student participation in outdoor athletics, such as golf, cross country running, skiing and other winter sports, offers unusual opportunities for developing general recreational facilities. Important capital expenditures must soon be made for additional tennis courts, for new track and baseball stands, and for replacing the present track and baseball cages which must be abandoned on account of the erection of the Sterling library. These are specific illustrations of the general situation.

"Conditions at Harvard, Princeton and Yale differ in detail but agree fundamentally. It is natural, therefore, that independent study of local needs has confirmed the support of a common policy and has brought unanimous agreement on the best means to support that policy while conserving essential financial support for university educational purposes."

TICKET RAISE MEANS $35,000 FOR HARVARD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 4.—(AP)—A net increase of $35,000 a year in Harvard's athletic revenue will be the direct result of the Harvard-Yale-Princeton joint agreement to raise the price of football tickets from three to five dollars, said graduate treasurer Fred W. Moore tonight.

Although no official statement was made, it was expected in Cambridge tonight that the increase in football revenue would bring the long deferred construction of a new swimming pool and a new gymnasium into the realm of actuality. Plans for both have been drawn up for some time.

Included in the program of athletic expansion, long delayed through lack of funds, is provision for a new athletic administration building, complete drainage and levelling of Soldiers' field, additional squash courts and a new baseball cage.

KENNEDY SAYS PRINCETON FORCED TO RAISE PRICES

PRINCETON, N. J., March 4.—(AP)—Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the Princeton board of athletic control in a statement issued tonight concerning the agreement between Yale, Harvard and Princeton, by which alumni will pay $5 for tickets to the "Big Three" games and "members of the university community" will pay $2, said the step was necessary because of Princeton's policy of athletics for all.

He stated that the annual income from athletics must be increased or support withdrawn from teams and sports which are unable to operate without a deficit but which provide healthful exercise for many undergraduates.

Further, he said, Princeton must in the near future provide an indoor sports building for the use of athletic teams.

COLLEGES INVITED TO USE PHILADELPHIA STADIUM

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—(AP)—The Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America will be invited at its meeting tomorrow night to hold this year's track and field meet in the new municipal stadium, Philadelphia, as a part of the Sesqui-Centennial sports of program. The invitation will be presented by Dr. George W. Orton, sports director of the centennial. The I. A. A. A. A. outdoor championships in the past have alternated between Pennsylvania and Harvard. This year it is Harvard's turn. The meet will be held May 28 and 29.

MORE QUALIFYING GOLF TOURNAMENTS THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, March —(AP)—An extensive increase in the number of sectional qualifying tournaments for the 1926 national open championship was considered favorably by the championship committee of the United States Gulf association today.

Acting upon a recommendation of the Professional Golfers' association, the committee discussed plans to provide 12 or 15 qualifying events, covering practically every section of the country. Only three such tournaments were staged last year—in the east, at Lido; in the middle west, at Onwentsia, Chicago; in the far west, at San Francisco.

The 1926 open plans closely parallel those of the Professional Golfers' association championship, for which 21 sectional tournaments were staged last year. The latter organization will increase this number to 33 this year; however, Secretary E. R. Anderson said today.

Mr. Anderson was in consultation with the U. S. G. A. championship committee, which was represented by H. H. Ramsey, chairman; Findlay S. Douglas of New York, Herbert Jacques of Boston and W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburgh, who is president of the association. Mr. Ramsey said a definite announcement regarding selection of courses for the qualification would be made within a few days.

"This step will add a great burden to the U. S. G. A. officials," he said. "But we are prepared to take it for the convenience of the players. It will save them time and money."

The association took no action with regard to changing the qualification arrangements for the amateur tournament, the championship field of which was reduced from 32 to 16 for the first time last year. It was indicated that solution of the amateur problem would await development of plans for improvement of the open event.

STRIBLINGS PROTEST ERTLE AS THIRD MAN IN RING

MIAMI, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—With little more than a week of training remaining Gene Tunney and Young Stribling continued their workouts today for their forthcoming bout at Hialeah, March 12. Doubt still clouds the issue of naming a referee, following vigorous objection raised to Harry Ertle, New York ring arbiter by "Pa" Stribling, father-manager of the Georgia contender. Stribling, senior together with Billy Gibson, pilot of Tunney's pugilistic career and Promoter Jess Bauch, today considered the ten possible referees suggested yesterday.

The coliseum being erected especially for this fight near completion today. The bowl occupies a site at Hialeah about eight miles from Miami, a short distance north of the race track.

Crowds of admirers are watching the two boxers take their workouts. Persistent rumors that Governor Martin would interfere with the match were denied at the executive offices in Tallahassee tonight.

PLAINFIELD LOSES TO SO. KINGSTON BUT WILL SEEK REVENGE IN GAME TONIGHT

The Plainfield team suffered a defeat in the first game of the Southern New England championship played at South Kingston, R. I., Thursday evening, the South Kingston team winning by a 44 to 32 score. However the Plainfield team will endeavor to get revenge in the game this (Friday) evening at Plainfield when these two clubs clash in the second game of the series.

This series is attracting much attention in all southern New England, so much so, in fact, that the Cashman Athletic company of Providence has offered a large loving cup, emblematical of the Southern New England title, to the winner. The donators of the cup, however, stipulate that the series must be three of five games rather than two out of three as first planned. With this as an incentive to supreme effort both teams are playing at top speed and some of the best basketball that New England has seen in many seasons is being played in this series. The winner of the series will challenge for the New England title.

In the game at South Kingston Thursday night the score does not really tell the story. The South Kingston team, which is made up mostly of former players of the Boston Whirlwinds, New England champions, took the lead early in the game and at half time were leading by a score of 23 to 9. Plainfield staged a sharp rally at the beginning of the second half and crept within two points of the Kingston team. Then battling almost toe to toe for a brief period Kingston pulled themselves together and with a fine passing game drove to the front never to be headed.

Not to alibi the Plainfield team in the least it is only fair to say that the Plainfield aggregation took the floor with only a two or three minutes' practice session after a long and hard ride. The Plainfield boys were unused to the floor and the lighting effects but in the second half showed that they are foes worthy of any team in New England.

The game tonight should be one of the biggest drawing cards in Eastern Connecticut as two of the best teams in New England will clash in this encounter. Manager Salisbury will depend on the same lineup that played at South Kingston last night while Manager Nigrelli of the South Kingston team will use practically the same team in tonight's game.

YOU ARE THE MAN

When things do not go as they should,
Or just as you would have them go,
It will not do a bit of good
An acrimonious face to show.

When you have failed it is no use
To snarl, or grumble, or complain;
Spend not your words in vain excuse,
But up, and at your work again!

When Fortune on you seems to frown,
It is no use to be downcast;
Later some effort she may crown;
Stand up, and battle to the last!

When Fate against you seems arrayed,
And you with indignation burn,
Brace up, undaunted, unafraid,
And on your heel with courage turn.

When friends desert you, or deceive,
Or those that praised you once are dumb,
O'er your condition do not grieve,
Your hour of victory may come.

Entirely crush you? No one can,
And put you by upon the shelf,
Except one quite important man—
And that one man is you, yourself!

—Thomas F. Porter, in Boston Globe.

The fact that June 2 is the date of the great English derby this year is causing no end of misgivings among superstitious race followers in the British Isles. June 2, as commonly expressed in figures, is 2-6-16, or the double of 26, which figure in itself double of the terrible 13. So the turf followers are predicting that most anything may happen in a race on such an unlucky day.

COOPERATIVE EFFORTS AMONG FARMERS

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Once in a while there is a gleam of dawn in the farm east. Omar, the Persian poet, tells us of a "phantom of false morning" which precedes the true dawn and might perhaps be mistaken for it. It behooves us all to be sure that we make no error in our own observations. To cry "Lo Morrow dawns," before we are sure the glimmer we note is that of the real daybreaking might easily lead to sore disappointment.

Nevertheless, there is now and then a lifting in the eastern clouds which has much promise of being the real thing. And anyway, even Omar's phantom of false morning did precede and prophesy the true dawn. Even though the light we see lessen and fade away, infertilely, "When winter comes shall spring be far behind?"

A recent Associated Press dispatch from Springfield, Mass., said:

"The Eastern States farmers' exchange, a co-operative feed and fertilizer purchasing organization, [illegible] did a business amounting to $5,970,965 in 1925, an increase of more than $400,000 over that of the preceding year, it was shown by reports read in the annual meeting here today. The business was handled at a saving of 2.8 per cent. There is no profit in the exchange, the patrons being the sole owners and each member platting the annual [illegible] to an equal

I don't know just as much about it as I do—perhaps more. You may be heard of this co-operative farmers' exchange before, and know something of its work. This dispatch contains all my knowledge. But that small amount seems to me more than a little interesting and hopeful.

Apparently, this Massachusetts organization confined itself to the purchasing of feed and fertilizers. Yet it bought and distributed to its members almost $6,000,000 worth of these two items last year. The members are stated to number 16,000. That seems to indicate that the average buy was about $373 worth of feed and fertilizer for each member. In view of the present prices for these farm essentials, it isn't a large sum.

When I was running a truck-garden of less than ten acres I used to buy all the stable and hen-manure my neighbors would sell me, add all made on my own farm, and then buy commercial fertilizer to fill out the lack. Manure and fertilizers were both cheaper in those days than they are now. Nevertheless my bill for them used to run close to $200 a season. The same amount would cost me more than $300 today.

Of course, I was practising intensive cultivation and lavish fertilization. I had to, in order to get bountiful and profitable crop returns. But then it was only on ten acres,—a very small fraction of the area a big farmer has in cultivation. And my bill didn't include feed. It was solely for fertilizer of one sort or another. Even a small herd of dairy cows would eat up more feed than that in a single winter.

The most interesting thing in the Springfield dispatch, however, seems to me the fact that the cost of handling this $6,000,000 business was only 2.93 per cent, $2.88 per $100. I don't know what retailers expect now-a-days, but the merchant with whom I used to deal most, 30 years ago, told me that he was trying to do business on a 20 per cent basis of profit though he said other dealers told him he must get at least 25 per cent if he expected to "play safe." There is a big difference between even 20 per cent and 2.93 per cent. If that difference measures the actual difference in the cost of their feed and fertilizer to these farmers it would have amounted to over $50 for each $300 buy.

I have yet to see the farmer who would reject a saving of $50 on his feed and fertilizer bill as something not worth the trouble of taking. Most of the farmers I know are tickled if they can save 50 cents,—let alone $50.

I remember having talked, one time, about the wonderful comeback of the Danish farmers in the last 50 years. From a state of almost abject poverty in which they were housed and fared little better than their mangy swine, they have risen to what all travelers agree is the highest state of prosperity and comfort known by any working farmers in the world.

They have achieved this by two expedients: First, by concentrating their population on the two things which their circumstances and conditions made it possible for them to excel in,—in their case bacon and butter; and Second, by co-operative buying of all their supplies and co-operative selling of all their product.

By the first expedient, that of producing only the two things in which they could produce the very best, they have come to dominate the world market in those two things. Their bacon and their butter are the standard and fix the rates for practically every market in Europe. And in selling that bacon and butter, they, the producers, through their co-operative agencies, fix the price. They do not ask the purchaser what he is paying and take whatever price he offers. Instead they tell him at what price he can take their goods,—or leave them.

By the second expedient, that of co-operative buying, they get their feeds, not by the hundred pounds, nor even by the ton, but by the cargo. They buy most of their feed right in this country, a steamship load at a time, freight it across in their own chartered ships, and distribute it where wanted at a cost very much lower than the dairyman of New England has to pay for exactly similar material. Buying in huge quantities, they are able to secure prices and transportation at exceptionally low rates.

Instead of buying where they can and paying whatever price they're asked, they have at least as much to say about that price as the seller. Instead of selling at any old price some one else offers, they have at least as much to say about what he shall pay as he does.

And so they save money on what they buy and get more money for what they sell. They are not mulcted both ways, going and coming. They hold the cool end of the poker at least half the time.

It has been said over and over again till the saying has become hackneyed, that American farmers can't be got to co-operate. The thing may work in Great Britain or in Denmark or in Sweden, but it won't in this country.

Of course, this isn't true in any sweeping sense. The citrus growers of California co-operate to their own profit and without increasing prices to consumers. There are numerous co-operative creameries saving money and making money for the dairymen of the northwestern states and of Canada. Co-operation among the small fruit producers of the Hudson valley has put their industry on a sound and paying basis. And it seems there's been all the time a big co-operative feed and fertilizer buying exchange right in our own midst, doing a $6,000,000 business annually at a cost of less than three cents on the dollar.

Upon the basis of a recent survey the department of agriculture at Washington estimates that there are now more than 12,000 active farmers' business organizations in the United States. The number has doubled since 1915. These organizations represent a variety of farming enterprises. They include those selling farm products, buying farm supplies, operating creameries, cheese factories, canning plants, grain elevators, stockyards and warehouses.

It is probably true that there are some farmers who can act together, co-operatively, and some who can't and won't.

It isn't co-operation which is on trial, but those who might and could co-operate.

There is a certain amount of give-and-take involved in farm co-operation. Naturally it isn't for such as want to take all the time and give none of the time. It requires the surrender of some hobbies and the rejection of a good many whims. Naturally it isn't for those who are convinced that they are always and everywhere exactly right and their notions divinely inspired truths. It calls on its sharers not to regard wholly their own welfare but to look also on the things of others. Naturally it is not for those whose idea of neighborliness begins and ends at their own line fences.

No one but a congenital idiot would assert that the farmers of New England are less capable or less intelligent than those of Denmark or Sweden or than the factory operatives of Great Britain. But those who assert they will never co-operate assume that New England farmers are crankier and stubborner and greedier than others, and that these qualities effectually prevent them from getting together and acting together.

Well, I have known one or two awful cranks on New England farms. I have met several who were so stubborn and "sot" in their ways that an earthquake couldn't stir them. And I have run into one or two who could give any Poland China boar points in hoggishness.

But these were exceptions—not "shining exceptions," but muggy and zeneorous rarities. They are so uncommon as to stand out by reason of their infrequency. Just as we remember and talk about the one or two big meteors we've seen at intervals of years, but hardly notice the much more brightly shining sun, which we see almost every day as a matter of course.

Taken as a whole New England farmers are bright enough and sensible enough and sharp-eyed enough to recognize a good thing when they see it. It is reasonable that they should want to be shown the value or virtue of any proposal before they take off their coats and go in for it. I've known bankers and grocers and railroad presidents to feel that same way.

And they certainly are slow in making up their minds. We'll have to give them time.

DANCE CONDEMNATION IS SECRET OF SUCCESS LEE

NEW YORK, March 4 (AP)—Sammy Lee, who was called from Broadway to put jazz into the Metropolitan Opera ballet when it was decided to present Carpenter's "Skyscrapers," has given much thought to the mystery of why certain dances become hits.

His conclusion is that generous helpings of condemnation, which may be expected from all sections of the country, provide definite assurance of popularity for a new dance.

"Take a little glance into dance history and you'll find that almost every popular dance was condemned shortly after it came out," he said. "The polka, the tango, the fox trot, the shimmy, the Charleston and numerous others all were helped along by unfavorable criticism.

"I don't believe there is any more harm doing the Charleston than there is in dancing an old-fashioned waltz. But I recognize opposition made the Charleston famous."

Most of the new dances are evolved on the musical comedy stage, in Lee's opinion. Occasionally some particular step strikes popular fancy with audiences and many of the persons try them out when they get home.

"There's a desire within them to duplicate what they saw on the stage," the director explained. "Soon the dance finds itself on the dance-floor. Then some one launches forth with a criticism and the creation is started onward, usually to success.

"The stage likewise carries the dance to the country at large. It is danced on the vaudeville circuits. Musical comedies take it up and before long even the small towns have seen and are dancing the new hit. Dancing teachers help in the popularity march, but I don't believe there is any organized exploitation."

Lee has danced all his life. About six years ago, he directed the dancing in The Gingham Girl and the originality displayed by his chorus of eight girls brought him fame on Broadway.

Since then, he has created and directed the dancing in 60 musical shows including Lady Be Good, Tip Toes, Cocoanuts, No, No Nannette, Sweet Little Devil and Captain Jinks.

Lady Be Good now is playing at the Drury Lane in London and before the year is over Lee hopes to have four or five more of his shows there, one of which he will do with Irving Berlin and Freddie Lonsdale.

Broadway looked upon Lee's invitation to the Metropolitan for the Carpenter ballet as significant.

HISTORIC JAPANESE TEMPLES BURNED WITH PRIZED RELICS

TOKYO, March 4 (AP)—A sacrifice to the annual fire season which comes each year with the advent of the dry months in Japan was the loss of the historical Kwannon Temples, which burned so swiftly that keepers could not rescue even the standing statue of the Goddess Kwannon. The main Kwannon temple was more than 100 years old.

Five blocks of houses were destroyed in another fire which ushered in the high fire hazard period.

RACIAL RELATIONS WORK IN SOUTH BECOMING WORLDWIDE

ATLANTA, March 4 (AP)—Work in the south for better relations between the white and negro races is attracting world-wide attention and in several places the actual plan is being followed.

"The twelve million negroes in this country are but a small part of the world's colored population and the relation of the races here is only a segment of a world wide problem," said Kenneth MacLennen, secretary of the Missionary Conference of Great Britain and Ireland, who has just made a study of the southern plan. "You may feel encouraged, therefore, to go forward with your efforts, seeing that they mean so much to millions in other lands."

Having met members of the interracial commission, composed of leading white and negro citizens of the south, Mr. MacLennen learned that the organization, which had its start here largely through the efforts of the late John J. Eagan, had been extended into many northern communities. Approximately a thousand committees are at work promoting the best interests of the two races.

The basis of the plan is consultation and cooperation. Conditions are discussed frankly and decisions reached so that these leaders may work together for a mutual objective.

England, South Africa and India are showing special interest in the commission's work, said Sherwood Eddy, of the Young Men's Christian association, who commended efforts to eradicate lynchings. Similar committees are being organized in British South Africa, he said.

NEAR EAST RELIEF STARTS MOVEMENT AMONG YOUTHS

NEW YORK, March 4 (AP)—A "youth movement," in which American ideals of service and international good will are emphasized, is being promoted in the Near East, says Charles V. Vickson, general secretary of the Near East Relief, in a report to his board of trustees.

Nearly 140,000 orphans have been rescued and restored to normal life, or now are in the orphanages of the Near East, he says, and this army of young people is being organized into "service leagues" on the general principles of the American Rotary clubs and other similar associations.

This is being done to further the ideals of peace in the belief that these boys and girls will furnish the leaders of the coming generation and bring about a new and better civilization in their land.

In connection with efforts to counteract so called disorganizing influences, the secretary says that all the major allied powers, with the exception of the United States, were occupied in "materially increasing armaments and military forces in the Near East" during 1925.

The relief organization spent $4,219,000 in its work last year and because contributions amounted to $4,752,000 was able to eliminate a deficit of $298,000 and have a small balance for 1926.

A great many orators mix the oil of eloquence with the water of weak argument.

The meeting of the operating heads of the eastern railways to consider the request of trainmen for the appointment of a joint conference to discuss the workers wage demand will be held next Monday in the Grand Central Terminal building, New York.

Happiness, like charity, should begin at home—but the home itself must be worthy of the people who live in it. Furniture of fine character, such as that included in these marvelous home outfits will work wonders in making yours the contented and happy home you want it to be!

Please don't think, because of the incredibly low prices at which complete three and four-home outfits are offered now, that this is inferior furniture in any sense of the word. Every piece of furniture provided for living room, bedroom, dining room and kitchen is of the up-to-date design and good inner construction that makes it an investment for a generation!

EDWARD J. BURDICK DIES—WAS STRICKEN WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 6—Edward J. Burdick, 56, whose death occurred at his home, 5 Spruce street, Thursday morning at 2.30 o'clock, was well and favorably known in Westerly. Wednesday he was a visitor in New London. Returning to Westerly, while at the Vars drug store he became ill and was taken to his home. Death resulted from weakness attendant upon a shock suffered not quite a year ago.

He was active in military affairs of the town and was generally present at the state armory on Dixon street for military events. Though never holding civic office, at election time he was zealous in seeing that voters visited the polls. Previous to his last slight shock he was employed in the office of the printing press works of the C. B. Cottrell and Sons Co.

He served in Co. E, First Regiment, Rhode Island Militia, working his way up through the non-commissioned offices and was elected second lieutenant just before the Spanish-American war. He went out with Co. K, First Rhode Island Volunteers and served in the Spanish-American war from May, 1898, until the following April. During the war he was promoted to first lieutenant. After the war he kept up his interest in the Rhode Island Militia and served in the outfit with headquarters here until he retired in December, 1903.

Mr. Burdick was the son of the late Lafayette and Frances A. Burdick. He was born in Mystic, Conn., April 25, 1870. After attending the public school of the town of Stonington and Mystic Valley institute, he came to Westerly and started to learn his trade as a machinist at the press works of the C. B. Cottrell company. With the exception of seven years when he was employed in the office of the New England Granite works, he was engaged at the Cottrell printing press plant up to the time he was taken ill a year ago.

He was united in marriage with Miss Beatrice M. Gourlay of this town in 1903. Besides his wife he is survived by a daughter, Marjorie, and two sisters, Mrs. Annie M. Allen of Correctionville, Ia., and Mrs. Nettie F. Spencer of the West Side. A twin brother, Fred J. Burdick, died about nine years ago. Lieut. Burdick was a charter member of Hope council, No. 6, Junior Order, United American Mechanics, a member of Robert Brucker camp, Spanish-American War Veterans, and the Pawcatuck Congregational church.

Clarence A. Vars, master; Raymond C. Hiscox, senior warden; Lewis R. Greene, junior warden and past masters, Albert E. Barber and Fred N. Robinson, all of Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M., of Westerly motored to New London Wednesday and attended Brainard lodge to witness the working of the Master Mason degree.

The session of the Third District court Judge Oliver H. Williams on the bench will be held this (Friday) morning at 9 o'clock. With the sessions of superior court for Washington county out of the way by reason of final adjournment of the February term, more attention can be given the cases in the district court by local attorneys.

John P. Sanborn, long a resident of Newport, R. I., having held high civil and fraternal offices in the state and who has relatives in Pawcatuck, died early Thursday morning at the Hotel Driscoll, Washington, D. C. Mr. Sanborn until failing health prevented, made occasional visits in Westerly.

He left with his wife to go south for his health. Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn were taken ill in Washington while on their return. The body will be brought north for funeral services at his home. Mr. Sanborn, formerly a member of the state senate, was for years associated with General Charles Brayton. He was editor of the Newport Mercury since 1872, and was also a member of the school committee. He was prominent in the Masons. He is survived by his widow, who is very ill and by two sons Airah and Royal, and a daughter, Mrs. Albert Howard, who was with him at the time of his death.

From the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Dolan, 42 Franklin street, Thursday morning at 8.45 o'clock was held the funeral of John J. Dolan, a former resident of Westerly, who died Monday in Brooklyn, N. Y. A requiem high mass was celebrated at the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 9 o'clock by Rev. J. P. Cassagne, S. M. During the service Thomas V. Cancy sang "Calvary." Burial was in the family lot in St. Michael's Old Cemetery, where the committal service was by Fr. Cassagne. The bearers were Joseph Bray, John Holliday, Robert Bonner, William Ledward, James A. Dunn and John J. Dunn.

At the March meeting of Harold W. Merrill post, No. 16, American Legion, held in the post rooms Wednesday evening it was voted to form a Legion Auxiliary. This decision is in accordance with the policy of national Legion headquarters, which has issued as a slogan "No bachelor post by 1926 convention." The entertainment committee reported that arrangements had been made for a concert by the Rhode Island college glee club. The auto show and Shenandoah flag committees also reported progress on their respective projects. Ten new members were elected. It was voted to hold two meetings each month hereafter instead of one, on the first and third Wednesdays of the month.

Commander Walter F. Thorp presided at the meeting. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Adjutant John L. Sullivan. Doughnuts and coffee were served at the conclusion of the business session.

Prayer was held at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the home of W. A. Rook. Rev. Marvin S. Stocking, pastor of Grace Methodist church officiated at the house. Among the surviving relatives of Mr. Rook are two grandchildren, Evelyn and Isabelle Rook of Grove avenue. New Discovery Banishes Sleeplessness, Quiets Nerves and Stops Headache

The most wearing-out process which could afflict a person is that which is caused by lack of sleep. Fitful, insufficient slumber tears the nervous system to pieces and causes much of the weakness, irritability and susceptibility to disease which is often blamed on other causes.

Lack of sleep ages one, destroys beauty and certainly shortens your life. And yet it is so easy to have the deep refreshing slumber of childhood. A sleep that will make you feel like a new person and add five years to your life—a slumber that will banish the "blues" and give you the strong, healthy nerves which mean a sunshiny, cheerful outlook on life. And you can get all these benefits from a new, harmless, easy-to-take preparation called Neura.

Neura contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs. The results from the use of Neura have been so remarkable, however, that it is now dispensed by Lee & Osgood and druggists everywhere with a guarantee to return the small cost if you are not amazed and delighted with the results from the use of the very first package. Get a good night's sleep tonight by taking Neura today.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Farmer Brown's Boy Is Followed

This only foolish folk who flee
From that they neither hear nor see.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy had started for home. It was moonlight, so he could see very well, especially as there was snow on the ground. He wasn't at all afraid. There was nothing to be afraid of. Anyway, there never had been anything to be afraid of. He was going home to spend the night while Farmer Brown stayed at the sugar house. Early the next morning he would go back and he would take with him his rifle, as Farmer Brown had suggested. As he tramped along he began to have day dreams. He was thinking of Puma the Panther, and

"It is Puma the Panther. I know it," he said much imagination. Nothing and nobody is following me."

So he once more started on, and began to whistle. He hated to admit it to himself, and wouldn't admit it to himself that he had a scary feeling. Nevertheless, it was true. Whistling helped to keep from admitting to himself that he was scared. He wished he had Bowser the Hound along. He would have felt easier with Bowser there. But Bowser wasn't there, so Farmer Brown's Boy just whistled a little louder and tramped on.

Presently he came to a place where the hemlock trees on either side of the road made it dark. He was halfway through, when once more he stopped. He had heard nothing; he saw nothing; yet he knew that some one was following him. How he knew he couldn't have told. It was just a feeling. People have feelings like that sometimes. He was as sure that he was being followed as he was that he was standing there that very minute. And Farmer Brown's Boy guessed who it was that was following him. "It is Puma the Panther. I know it," said he. "I know it just as well as if I could see him. He has been following me almost ever since I left the sugar house. Father would say it is my imagination, but I know better. I wish I had that rifle with me now. I've heard that Panthers often follow people, but that it is not to attack them. It is merely out of curiosity. I hope that's true. My goodness, I do hope that's true. I wish Puma didn't have so much curiosity. I don't like that prickly feeling up and down my backbone. I suppose I might as well admit that I'm scared, but I don't want to admit it. I won't be scared. No sir! I won't be scared."

Once more he began to whistle. He wanted to run. He wanted to run all the way home. But he wouldn't run. To run is the worst thing one can do. Who runs from an animal tells that animal at once he is afraid. So Farmer Brown's Boy whistled his loudest and walked his fastest and gave a sigh of relief when through the Old Orchard he saw the light of home. As he entered the dooryard he looked back, but not even a moving shadow was to be seen. Nevertheless he knew that he had been followed as far as the edge of the Green Forest.

TULANE COACH ONE WHO HAD NO COLLEGE BEFORE TRAINING

NEW ORLEANS, March 4 (AP) Clark Shaughnessy, head football coach at Tulane University, which went through the 1925 season without defeat, is one of the small group of athletes who had no athletic training before entering college.

Shaughnessy went from his birth place in St. Cloud, Minn., to the University of Minnesota. At Minnesota, "Doc" Williams did not overlook men who weighed 190 pounds and could run. Shaughnessy came out for the team to find out what it was all about.

A typewritten list of players who were to make the first trip to play Michigan was posted and Shaughnessy decided that he was an added starter when he saw his name at the bottom, written in pencil. He played every position on the team except center, making his most sensational record at fullback.

His basketball career was shoved upon him. He was sitting in class when a note was handed him from the athletic director, asking him to hurry out and join the basketball team on a trip to play the University of Illinois. Shaughnessy had never played basketball and knew nothing of the rules.

The procedure was almost the same in track. He was pressed into service to take the place of an unavailable half-miler when he did not own a pair of spiked shoes and had never worn them.

Shaughnessy became a member of the St. Paul boat club, although he had no previous experience in a boat. With this club he went to Canada for the A. A. U. races to decide the four oared championship. At the start the St. Paul club got ahead of the line and was ordered back. As they were backing up, the starting gun sounded and all the boats raced past them.

"I'll not train a summer and then not row," yelled Shaughnessy. "Out into it." They did and won.

URGES WOMEN'S CLUB AS SUPPORT TO REAL DRAMA

NEW YORK, March 4 (AP)—Organization of a national women's club for practical support of good plays, is proposed in a letter to the Federation of Women's Clubs by Channing Pollock, the playwright, who is urging "real drama" in America and theater.

Under his plan, the club would assume the production of several plays annually, each of which would be cast from the original companies in the supporting cities.

"The idea in question is that every woman's club in America should stand back of the organization which would be a club of clubs Federation of Women's Clubs," Mr. Pollock said. "Every member would pay dues of ten dollars a year and in return would receive four tickets a year to the theater.

"Of each ten dollars, one would go for overhead expenses of the organization and the other nine for the tickets. The plays would be selected by a committee of clean-minded, intelligent persons. They would be picked for their qualities as entertainment and not for that sterile and academic dullness which is the ideal of most self-appointed arbiters and has done so much harm in the theater.

"One hundred and fifty thousand members all over America would guarantee the production of four fine plays, if they did not do one dollar's worth of business outside of the organization. A million members would mean enormous support for a great many more than four plays.

"With such a large membership, this support could be divided among any number of plays and might almost revolutionize the theater.

"For example, in the case of a play like John Galsworthy's 'The Show,' which has little immediate chance of production in America, our organization could go to any manager and say 'We guarantee you a season's profitable business and a profitable tour if you will produce 'The Snow.'"

In the playwright's opinion there is "no limit to the plan;" the organization could go into production, or back production, of a kind "almost unknown in our theater." The Little Theater movement, he believes, could be organized in a smaller way along the same lines.

"Mind you," he said, "I'm not insisting that the theater shall be run for innocent children; merely that it shall be run for intelligent grown-ups. Where you have good taste, good purpose, good art there can be no question of morals.

"Great art so envelopes and obscures everything else that, where there is great art, what we call morals are noticed only by prigs and psychopathic prudes. Strictly speaking, there are no such things as clean plays and dirty plays . . . there are only good plays, and bad plays, and no good play can be dirty and no dirty play can be good."

SEEK TO MAKE MEMORIAL PARK OF SITE OF OLD FORT NEGLEY

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 4 (AP)—Fort Negley, a sugarloaf mound of eight or ten acres located in South Nashville, which served as a Union stronghold while Nashville was in the hands of the Federals in the Sixties, may be restored and preserved as a memorial park.

John Trotwood Moore state librarian and archivist, hopes to interest congress and the states which sent troops here during the Civil war, in the plan to buy the hill, restore the fort and preserve it.

Traces of the parapnets are still to be found.

NEGRO BUS BOY TAKES RANK WITH BEST OF YOUNG POETS

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—Vachel Lindsay, American lyric writer, was dining at a local hotel before his lecture on American poetry when a young negro bus-boy came up to him and put some sheets of paper on the table as he cleared away the plates.

That was how Lindsay came to know Langston Hughes, whom Carl Van Vechten ranks with the best of the younger American poets.

"I could not then talk to Lindsay," said Hughes, "because it is a rule of the house that bus-boys must not hold conversation with the guests. I did whisper to him that I liked his poetry and hoped he would think well of mine."

To his great surprise, Hughes learned from the newspapers next morning that Lindsay not only liked his work but also found it good enough to read with the verses of other American poets.

Some of these poems appear in The Weary Blues, which Knopf has published for Hughes. The negro poet first began to appear in magazines and then won his first and third prizes in a contest held by a negro magazine for the best negro poem of the year.

Hughes is no longer rustling dishes. He received a scholarship to Lincoln College, where he will continue his education with his writing.

MOVE SILK CARGOES WITH SPEED AND CARE OF GOLD

SEATTLE, March 4 (AP)—Silk cargoes with values running into warded figures characterize their movement from the Far East to Atlantic seaboard manufacturing centers.

In two weeks this year more than $29,000,000 worth of this commodity was unloaded here and dispatched east by express train. In 1925, Seattle was the port of entry for $230,000,000 worth. It is handled with a care scarcely less than that shown in the transportation of gold.

The silk trade can brook no delay either on water or land because of high insurance rates and quickly mounting interest charges. Once the bales of silk reach port, after the quickest possible sea voyage, they are transferred to paper-lined baggage cars and sent eastward with express tain speed. Usually silk shipments are large enough to make up special trains but if not sufficiently bulky the shipments go in baggage cars attached to limited passenger trains.

Insurance rates on silk are not made public, the policies reading that the rate is "as per other agreement." The reason for the secrecy is another secret of the trade.

Liability of the carriers runs about five cents on the hundred dollars of value, which is in itself a considerable item as silk averages $2,000 a bale, and the liability charge like the insurance, is on a time basis.

When insurance and carrier liability are added to the cost involved in a cargo of silk ranging from $1,000,0000 to more than $10,000,000 expeditious transportation becomes an economy rather than an expense. Interest charges reach $1,000 to $1,500 a day.

The Arabia Maru has set the record for a single cargo, docking with 10,124 bales of raw silk and 100 tons of manufactured silk or a total value of $11,000,000. This was rushed to mills in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New England on two special trains consisting of 25 cars. Sixteen engines, two of them electric were used to haul the shipments to Chicago, where it was transferred for shipment on east.

The special trains run on schedules calling for no stops except to change engines at function points or through mechanical necessity.

Speed records for overland transportation of silk is claimed by the Great Northern Railway, which hauled 16 cars of raw silk and one passenger coach from Seattle to St. Paul in 52 hours and 35 minutes. The same trip in 47 hours and 10 minutes being favored by the grades westward bound. The time for the 5,071 miles was 99 hours 45 minutes.

BALLOON HAS RIGHT OF WAY OVER AIRPLANES IN NEW RULES

DAYTON, O., March 4 (AP) New traffic rules for flyers and balloonists devised and compiled by the Aeronautic Safety Code sectional committee and the American Engineering Standards committee are being studied by McCook and Wilbur field officers here. The code represents five years work.

Under the rules, balloons receive the right of way in the air over airplanes and dirigibles. The balloon corresponds in the air to the sailing vessel at sea. Dirigibles, like auxiliary water craft, have the right of way over planes, which correspond to steam craft.

Aircraft meeting head on shall pass to the right and an overtaking craft also shall pass to the right.

Dangerous proximity when approaching is set at 1500 feet.

The code is the work of fifty experts representing 20 organizations.

MORE THAN MILLION HOMES IN RUSSIA NOW HAVE RADIOS

MOSCOW, March 4 (AP)—Radio is becoming popular among the Russian masses. About 1,000,000 home-dwellers now have amateur wireless sets.

The government charges a license fee of 50 cents a year for a crystal set and one dollar a year for a tube set. Amateurs are allowed to use transmitting apparatus as well as receiving sets. Importation of radio equipment is prohibited, all apparatus being of Russian manufacture.

New Emulsion Conquers Chronic Constipation, Asserts McCoy

Brings Natural Bowel Action in 10 Days: Says Man Who Has Made McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets Famous the World Over—Guaranteed

This new preparation which McCoy guarantees to entirely overcome the most stubborn case of chronic constipation in 10 days or less is known to druggists as McCoy's Rinolin.

It is not an experiment, because it was tested by thousands of men, women and children, suffering from habitual constipation, before a bottle was sent to any druggist.

In this big test, McCoy's Rinolin proved beneficial in every instance—in the great majority of cases after a 10 days treatment the bowels begin to function normally and naturally and continued to do so for many days with no help whatever except in some cases a glass of water in the morning.

And now Lee & Osgood Co. and all druggists have McCoy's Rinolin and Mr. McCoy has told everyone of them that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless they are benefited.

So you can buy at any store a bottle of McCoy's Rinolin with the distinct understanding that if taken as directed for ten days it does not cause the bowels to function naturally and regularly you can have your money back.

And McCoy's Rinolin is such a pleasant preparation and so easy to take—children really like it.

Think it over; why go on using harsh salts and violent cathartics, that can only purge, when McCoy's Rinolin will cause the intestines to get back to natural action and normal peristalsis? Rinolin tonight—Pep tomorrow.

BIG NEW SUB V-1 LEAVES NEW LONDON FOR TESTS NEAR MONTAUK POINT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 4—The big submarine V-1, which has been at the submarine base here 10 days getting ready for a series of tests in the sound, left this afternoon for a point off Block Island, where the craft will remain over night and tomorrow will go to the vicinity of Montauk Point where the tests will be carried out. On board the undersea craft this afternoon were Lieut. Com. E. L. Cochrane, of the bureau of constructions and repairs, Washington, who will remain aboard the craft until the tests are concluded; these will take place within a short distance from where the S-51 went down with 26 members of her crew on the night of Sept. 25th last when the submarine was rammed by the Savannah liner, City of Rome.

One of the "O" type of submarines carrying a group of newspaper correspondents and camera men, followed the big submarine out of the harbor and into the sound to be present when the tests are made.

The V-1 is the first of a new class of large sea-going submarines and is also as large as any undersea craft previously constructed by the federal government.

The V-1 is designed primarily to accompany the fleet at sea in any weather and to maintain any speed of which the fleet itself is capable.

The craft will be assigned to the battleship fleet and her duty will necessitate cruising under much more severe conditions than have formerly obtained.

The ventilation system is much more extensive than that fitted on any previous undersea craft constructed by the United States.

To provide for communication with the shore and other vessels two boats will be carried, one a navy standard 16-foot motor craft and the other a standard 26-foot launch. The V-1 is rated by steam generated either by the heat of the engine exhaust or by a fired boiler. The same facilities are used to make fresh water for drinking and washing purposes. The craft is propelled by four Diesel engines. A pair of engines may be used to propel the boat at slow or moderate speed and the other two engines will be used when high speed is required.

INSURANCE MAN HURT— STRIKES POLE AT MYSTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 4—W. T. Hopkins, 171 Pequot avenue, employed as a manager of the New London office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, sustained painful injuries this forenoon when he suffered the fracture of two ribs when the automobile he was driving collided with a telephone pole in Mystic. He was given medical treatment at Mystic and then removed to his residence here.

Mr. Jacques started for Westerly about 9:30 o'clock and while driving into Mystic, near the railroad station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, the driver suddenly lost control of the steering gear. The machine plunged across the highway and crashed against the telephone pole, the car was badly damaged. It is believed that the steering gear became disabled, causing the driver to lose control of the car.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CONVEY MOURNERS TO NOON FUNERAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 4—The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad will provide a special train to convey relatives and former intimate friends of Frederick G. Noon, veteran railroad freight train conductor, whose death of pneumonia occurred yesterday at Lyme and where the committal service will take place in Duck River cemetery. The funeral will be held at Mr. Noon's home, 13 Colver street and the special train will leave the union station one hour later. A large number of railroad employes is planning to attend the funeral and burial.

Two young women, Blanche Davis Ennis and Evelyn Ennis, were ordered out of New London and to stay out of the city prosecuted as incorrigibles by Judge Comstock tomorrow. They have been in and out of the police court during their stay here the character of women they are accused of being was evidenced in articles their possessed. They claimed to have homes in Providence and they were possessed of some money to pay their fares to the Rhode Island metropolis, but were not allowed to get a hurried start away from this city. A policeman escorted them to the train to make certain that they did not tarry for longer than was necessary. There is a new ordinance now in force in the city of New London which governs the character of those desiring to stay in this city. New London does not want the manners of the sailors of the government ships. Why this is apparent from the number of complaints made and how many arrests are made for nearly every one of the sailors here in a lengthy manner those responsible for it will not have any more any time they desire to for some time after when they can do so. The girls were sent away today and a third and fourth were have been arrested as bad ones within a few days.

Bruno Camalucci, employed at the Electrolibre works, was in the police court today for failing to support his wife. He did not deny that he had not provided for his wife, a girl of 4 Lee street. The pair have been married a year and a half. On a night in February the wife expressed a desire to attend a dance, but Bruno would not consent. The wife ignored his wishes and participated in the dance with women of her acquaintance. This started things and Bruno removed his furniture from his home. Since then he has refused to support his wife. The case was continued today at the 5th of June and Bruno was ordered to pay his wife $7 a week. He agreed to do this and gave a bond that he will fulfill his obligation. Councilor Streeter, who is superintendent of the La Pointe works became the surety on the bond. He said he had known Camalucci eight years and that he regarded him as an exemplary young man.

Patrick Scully and Arthur Gavin, soldiers from Fort Wright, were on a spree yesterday and finally got in the vicinity of Smith street, where they created trouble and where they were finally arrested. They went into the general store of Mrs. Rose Cavalla and ordered a taxi to take them to the city proper. Then they refused to make use of the taxi and finally Scully smashed a large window in the store. This led Mrs. Cavalla to call the police. Officers found the soldiers merry and drunk. The soldiers represented that they did not remember anything that happened yesterday. They had a quart and a half of wine in their possession, but said they did not claim it and did not know that they ever possessed it. They were charged with intoxication and with a breach of the peace, and were fined $30. That took them to jail.

Stanley Wilk, another sailor, was fined $5 for intoxication, but John McDonough, also a sailor, was given his liberty on suspension of judgment. On the whole, this was soldier and sailor day in the police court.

There is a general belief that there is not much frost in the ground because this section has been favored with pretty good weather during the winter. The idea as to frost is erroneous though, for linemen setting poles today declared that the frost was eighteen to twenty inches deep. There is an abundance of ice on lower Shaw cove below Hamilton street, indication of the low temperature that has prevailed of late.

It is understood that members of the city council will consider the laying of cement for the roadway on Montauk avenue in the making of a budget of expenses for the ensuing year. The cost of repair of this avenue has been great in recent years, because the macadam has been badly worn and frequent treatment of it has been necessary. It is likely that avenue will be the first one in the city that will receive cement for a roadway. The first cost will be large, but the saving on repairs will be enough to pay the cost in a few years.

Archibald S. Macfarlane has sold a building lot on Jefferson avenue to Morris Turetsky.

Weiner was ordered to present himself in court by Patrolman William Graham this afternoon. Several days ago the building at the corner of Main and Hallam streets, owned by the Crowell-Crawford company, was broken into and a considerable quantity of lead stolen. The boys openly admitted their act and declared that they converted their loot into cash by selling the junk to Weiner.

In the municipal building last night, a community council for New London and vicinity was formed. Dr. E. D. Middleton presented some of the health and sanitation problems of navy and coast guard families residing in New London on an income inadequate to secure proper housing. Mrs. Arthur B. Calkins and Professor F. S. Hitchcock and Mrs. Viola Hazelside expressed strongly the need of conferences and joint action of the various public and private agencies concerned with the general problem. Dr. Bruce Hewitt, U. S. Public Health Officer, R. N. Benner, and Harvey Ledbetter explained that an expert was needed for the purpose of obtaining a complete, up-to-date health survey, which would provide a basis for the best steps in the promotion of public health and in the development of work along the various health agencies. Dr. Hewitt was elected chairman and Health Officer Peuvrell and Dr. Middleton were elected first and second vice chairman respectively.

Whiton Machine company, has tendered his resignation to accept the position of production manager for the Pure-Cold Products Co., New York, which has recently formed and of which Thomas A. Scott, this city, is a director. Mr. Barlow has been a resident of New London a little over four years, coming here from Dayton, Ohio, to accept the position of city manager.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Jessie C. Brabander, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brabander, 3 Beckwith street to William E. Thomas, Troy, N. Y., a member of the crew of the United States coast guard destroyer Burroughs, stationed at the local state pier. The wedding took place Feb. 25 at the residence of the bride's parents and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, pastor of St. James Episcopal church. The big 30 ton transformer of the Connecticut Power company, which is being moved from the power house on Water street to the sub-station, off Williams street has reached a point on Williams street. The moving of the transformer caused a disruption of trolley traffic Wednesday, but today cars on the main line and the New London-Norwich line were not interrupted.

A section of woodland adjacent to the Ocean avenue highway bridge caught fire early this evening. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters and Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman and the Pequot Hose company responded. The New London firemen did not combat the blaze, however, as the location of the fire was in Waterford. A telephone message to the Waterford town fire house caused the Waterford apparatus to respond. After a half hour's work the fire was subdued with chemicals. It is believed that the fire originated from sparks from a passing locomotive.

The members of the New London police department are seeking a two days' respite every month as against a day off monthly, which is now the case. City Manager William A. Holt is now considering the request and it is understood that he is seriously considering the abolishment of the annual vacation of two weeks if the two days a month lay-off is granted. The members of the force have enjoyed a two weeks vacation yearly and with pay.

Mrs. Middleton of 154 Pequot avenue has been annoyed by school boys and this afternoon she asked the police department to come to her relief. Her complaint is that boys ring her doorbell and then run away.

The police have a puzzling case of auto parking to solve in the morning. A Ford car has been parked in front of the police station for a couple of days. The fellow who was operating the car showed a license and made claim to the possession of the machine. Later another man appeared and said he was the owner of the car. He displayed the same license the other fellow possessed. When that fact was called to his attention he explained that the car was his property and said he had kept the license in the machine. The fellow who left the car there had borrowed it and had no license to operate it. He didn't explain how he came to loan his car to a man who had no license and left a license in the car that he might make use of. Then the license was examined and it was discovered that its use had expired some weeks ago.

MALCOLM M. SCOTT IS EXALTED RULER OF ELKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 4—The local lodge of Elks selected its officers at the annual meeting this evening. Malcolm M. Scott was elected exalted ruler and other officers were advanced one step toward promotion. The meeting was attended by an unusually large number of members, for there was a contest on for the selection of a trustee. Joseph G. Harrigan, who has served in the office for some 20 years, was a candidate for reelection, but there was some opposition to him by members who desired to put a candidate in the office who was of their selection. In the end they were disappointed and Mr. Harrigan was reelected. He has been one of the workers in the lodge and in the office all the time. He is now on the board of trustees and his selection to stay in the position was a recognition of his services and faithful work in the two decades past. Several candidates were installed and a meal followed the initiation and both there was an entertainment.

Scott will make a competent head of the lodge for he has worked his way up through all the chairs and is an enthusiastic worker. He is possessed of a good voice and likes the principles of the order. He is a member of the city council and has been the chairman of that body, so that the city will be in close touch with all that is going on in civic affairs.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

The charming Norma Shearer, who is co-starred with Lon Chaney in The Tower of Lies, directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and coming to the Breed theater on Sunday is again seen in a role which calls for a wide range of acting on account of the great number of years through which the story runs.

In the early part of the picture she appears as a child, then a young woman and finally as a woman of 30 who has become hardened from contact with the world. The success of Miss Shearer in the dual role of Lady of the Night caused her to be cast in the role of the heroine of Selma Lagerlof's great Swedish novel. Chaney and Miss Shearer are supported by a remarkable cast of well-known characterplayers, which includes: Ian Keith, Claire McDowell, David Torrence, Edward Connelly, William Haines, Leo White, Bodile Rosing and Anne Schaefer. The film is based on Selma Lagerlof's novel The Emperor of Portugallia.

At the Breed

Thunder Mountain, the picture version of John Golden's Broadway success, Howdy Folks, will open at the Breed theater today with Madge Bellamy and Leslie Fenton as the leading players. This romance of the Kentucky hills deals with the life of the crude mountaineers who live in poverty and ignorance in the fastness of the Blue Ridge district. It is a story made up of comedy and pathos, romance and thrills and one you will not want to miss.

The fifth chapter of the Green Archer, a two reel Imperia, Comedy and the Pathe News complete the program.

Broadway Theater

An extremely refreshing program opened last night at the Broadway theater to a very delightful and receptive capacity crowd that packed the theater.

The Keith vaudeville program proved a revelation to the lovers of comedy acts, which really were funny.

Musical Mack opened the program with a refreshing musical novelty.

Those two clever colored comedians, Charlie Johnson and Lloyd Johnson in The Steward and the Cabin Boy were great in a fast singing, dancing, and comedy offering.

Frank Baker and Betty Fry presented Sarcasms in which the keenest kind of good fun and song interspersed with music made them stand out sharply.

Webb and Hall, two Italian character comedians were as funny as any act seen here in some time.

Cleverness and Clumsiness was presented by Bob and Lucy Gillette. The world's greatest woman juggler is featured and you'll go wild with fun with the funny capers and pantomimic nonsense by the male member.

The Teaser is in town—and she's teasing laugh after laugh out of the audiences at the Broadway theater, where the new Universal comedy-romance, starring Laura La Plante and featuring Pat O'Malley, is setting new box-office records.

It's a lilting, snappy comedy surrounding a pretty girl who tries to flirt to annoy her aristocratic family —a lover who takes lessons in etiquette and gets jealous—and in between 'em comical tribulations that spell ructions galore there runs a silver thread of romance—the play is really a love story with comical interludes and a few thrills as decorations.

Laura La Plante plays a 1925 model flapper with a flirtation complex that lands her in troubles galore—all the way from a threatened alienation of affections suit to a scandal that involves her aristocratic aunt. Pat O'Malley swaggers through the role of a flashy cigar drummer, who falls in love with the blonde charmer, takes lessons in etiquette to become a proper husband for her—and then, when all reformed and able to eat with his fork, finds that he'll have to revert to the primitive and do a little fighting for his lady-love. And, of course, every film fan knows that fighting's one of the best things Pat does!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Capitol Theatre, Willimantic

The return of Marty Dupree and her popular Musical Follies to Willimantic is hailed as the outstanding of coming features in the local theatrical productions. Marty Dupree and her troupe will play at the Capitol theater, Willimantic, for three days beginning next Monday, March 8th. In this production which is given as a revue, there are six scenes. Miss Dupree's love of detail, her tendency to create, the surprise, interest, her fondness for departing from established custom and her willingness to spend money lavishly in pursuit of a coveted idea, marks her organization as the premier attraction of its kind, on tour. From a production standpoint this show rivals the biggest musical shows of Broadway. The person who goes to the theater simply for the purpose of passing criticism will find this production well nigh flawless. In it is introduced as a bit of vaudeville, a bit of grand opera, a bit of burlesque and just a flash of the legitimate, the whole making quite the most entertaining hour and a half of amusement that could possibly be devised. In conjunction with the principals mentioned, who include Wallace Melvin, Lou Caron, Steve Hughes and Francis McCarthy, it must not be overlooked that a chorus of food-looking and clever girls comprise the chorus. These young, pretty, winsome and clever girls are a most necessary asset to all musical shows and theater-goers will find them a feature of Marty Dupree's talented production.

Quick Relief for RHEUMATICS

Local Druggists Sell Rheuma on Money-Back Plan

If you suffer from torturing rheumatic pains, swollen, twisted joints, and suffer intensely because your system is full of that dangerous poison that makes thousands helpless and kills thousands years before their time, then you need Rheuma, and need it now.

Start taking it today. Rheuma acts at once on kidneys, liver, stomach and blood, and you can sincerely exclaim: "Good riddance to bad rubbish."

Many people, the most skeptical of skeptics right in this city and in the country hereabouts, bless the day when Lee & Osgood Co. and other druggists offered Rheuma to the afflicted at a small price and guaranteed money refunded if not satisfied. If you have rheumatism get a bottle of Rheuma today.

RECOVERIES IN STOCKS.

NEW YORK, March 4.—(By The A. P.)—Impressive recoveries took place throughout today's stock market after one week of steadily declining prices. Scores of issues rallied 5 to nearly 25 points on buying orders supplied by powerful financial interests, hundreds of small investors attracted by the high yields obtainable in many issues and, lastly, by the short covering operations of bear traders who have overstayed their market.

The market was strong from the outset, indicating that forced liquidation apparently had run its course, and that fresh buying power was being supplied in large volume. Brokers no longer witnessed the spectacle of large blocks of stock being dumped overboard in seeming disregard of bids, but instead there was a persistent demand for 100 to 200 share lots.

Total sales were 2,626,400 shares as against 3,735,700 in yesterday's record breaking session. The average of 20 industrial issues showed a net gain of 2.50 points on the day, or slightly more than the combined declines of 2.42 and 3.00 points in the two preceding sessions. The average of 20 leading railroad shares recorded a net advance of 3.61 points, as against a loss of 2.89 yesterday, and a loss of 1.13 points the day before.

General Electric was the bell weather of the advance, soaring 24 full points to 329 1-8, and closing within a point of the top. It was closely followed by American Can, which tumbled 21 points to 313 and then rallied to 309.

Other high priced shares also advanced with startling rapidity on a greatly accelerated turnover. Gains of 5 to 10 points over extended short interest in Allied Chemical, American Brake Shoe and Foundry, American Water Works, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit, Commercial Solvents A, and B, Du-Pont, Federal Mining and Smelting preferred, Foundation Company, General Motors, S. S. Kresge, Pere Marquette, Pullman, Sears Roebuck, Texas Gulf Sulphur and Woolworth jumped 3 to 12 1-4 points, and U. S. Cast Iron advanced over 15 points higher at 150.

United States Steel common was taken in large blocks at advancing prices in the last hour, showing a net gain of 3 5-8 at 125 1-4, after having touched 125 3-4. Baldwin closed 4 points higher at 109 1-4. American Smelting showed a net gain of 1 1-2 at 137, and there were corresponding gains in scores of other active industrials.

The recovery in the rails was led by the so-called "merger issues" which were the weak spots in yesterday's session. "Nickel Plate" common, Delaware and Hudson, Lackawanna and Ohio, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific preferred, "Katy" preferred, Frisco common, Pittsburgh and West Virginia and several others showed net gains of 3 to 5 points on demand for the Pere Marquette which closed 7 1-2 points higher at 77 1-2, was stimulated by the announcement that directors would meet for special dividend action within the next few days.

While a sprinkling of issues failed to share higher on the day, among them American Steel Foundry preferred, Lima Locomotive, Indian Motocycle, Liggett and Myers, Norfolk and Southern and Simmons Company, several of the oil issues, which as a group had offered stubborn resistance to recent selling pressure, were again within striking distance of the year's highs.

Commodity markets were irregular. After a break of 4 cents a bushel in the corn market, cotton closed 50 points net higher, and cotton futures showed net advances of 9 to 20 points. Raw sugar was unchanged but futures were 2 to 5 points higher.

Bonds held steady at 4 1-2 points off days. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Sterling ruled steady and francs 1-8, but French francs generally lower around 3.72 cents. Belgian broke 25 points to 12.75 cents and Norwegian kroner fell 8 points to 21.10 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 4—(AP)—The force of liquidation which had swept over the bond market for several days seemed to have spent its force today and many issues retrieved their recent losses. Prices of active issues rallied 1 to 6 1-2 points, off setting the few scattered points of acute weakness.

With the vigorous recovery in the stock market, the need of forced selling of bonds to fortify weakened speculative accounts was removed, thereby lifting most of the pressure from bond trading. The more optimistic view of the financial district regarding railroad merger plans, replacing the first feeling of anxiety which followed the upset of the Nickel Plate project, also promoted considerable repurchasing of the so-called merger issues.

Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s strengthened by the possibility of a better deal for stockholders, with the rejection of the Nickel Plate merger terms, held their ground better today and scored an advance of almost 4 points. Most of the Erie and Nickel Plates issues also rallied about a point. Substantial recoveries in other railroad liens, reflecting a return of confidence after the first scare over the Nickel Plate decision had worn off, embraced Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Chicago Great Western, Denver & Rio Grande, International Great Northern, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, Norfolk Southern, Frisco and Western Maryland bonds.

Local traction issues snapped back briskly and other utilities, such as International Telephone 5 1-2s and Pacific Telephone 5s joined in the rally. Skelly Oil 6 1-2s regained all of yesterday's 6 1-2 point loss, imparting a better tone to the oil group. American Ice convertible 7s, however, reacted 5 points to a new low level for the year.

The first public financing for the port of New York authority reached the marketing stage when a $14,000,000 issue of 4 1-2 per cent bonds was awarded to a syndicate headed by the National City company on a bid of 97.25. Proceeds will be used to construct new bridges in the port district.

The $6,000,000 loan recently arranged for the Department of Caldas, Republic of Colombia, will be offered tomorrow at a price of 95 1-2 for the 7 1-2 per cent bonds. A $5,000,000 loan for the Roman Catholic church of Bavaria also will take the form of a public bond offering, it is later date.

Avoid Poorly Balanced Breakfasts

Start the day with Quaker Oats —food that "stands by" you.

IF you feel tired, hungry, "fidgety," hours before lunch, don't jump to the conclusion of poor health. Thousands have unenergetic mornings because they start the day with wrong breakfasts.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

SAYS DOMINANT SPIRITUAL LIFE IS THE PRESENT NEED OF AMERICA

What ailed Gerald Chapman? He started a career of non-creative action and the end soon came, said Dr. Charles O. Judkins, nationally known clergyman of Glens Falls, N. Y., during the course of his sermon Thursday evening at the United Congregational church. Dr. Judkins is conducting a series of mass meetings at the United church under the auspices of the Norwich Y. M. C. A., Thursday being the second evening in the series. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church conducted the devotional period, gave the scripture reading and offered the prayer.

Last night I tried to show you what the real fault of our time is, said Dr. Judkins. Tonight I want to show you where that trouble begins. The preacher then gave a short review of his sermon of Wednesday evening after which in a brilliant discourse he described the source of the unbalance in our western civilization. Where is the trouble located? he asked. Where can we find it? I find that this unbalance is in the individual. The cure for the unbalance rests with the individual. What in the individual is wrong? What is unbalanced? What is the cure of the unbalance? Who is the individual person who is out of balance? What is life for? Life is not for happiness but for action. A man's body is not for happiness; it is for action. Your body dies on happiness but lives on action. As long as a man keeps hard at work, keeps thinking, keeps acting, he will have an active mind. The happiness he gets is a by-product of mental activity.

Non-creative action soon comes to an end. Speaking of Gerald Chapman, the notorious bandit who is under sentence to hang in this state for the murder of a police officer, Dr. Judkins said that Chapman's career is close to an end, probably, and that he can't imagine the court letting him free. What ailed Gerald Chapman, he asked. He started a career of non-creative action and the end soon came.

Don't say civilization is wrong. Say, I am wrong in it! The moment we reach the point where we want no work and all pay we are on the downward hill. Unless we maintain poise and balance in our lives we are surely going the same way ancient Rome and Greece went. What are the creative forces in the human being? There are three great main creative forces in every human being. The first is the instinctive forces; second, institution, or pure spiritual vision. With reference to the first force Dr Judkins said there are three great instincts, ego, herd and sex. There are three phases of the intellectual force, thinking, feeling and willing. Institution has but one function, spiritual.

Watch yourself and see if you aren't largely instinctive. Ego says I am, I can, I will. The herd instinct says we must get together first for accumulation and second, to construct. No man can do anything alone. Those two instincts are the master movers in all business. Those two instincts are the driving force in business. These instinctive creative forces of American life have gone far enough without a dominant spiritual life.

Dr. Judkins will continue his sermon series at the United church this (Friday) evening.

L'UNION ST. BAPTISTE HELD DISTRICT CONVENTION

The district convention of L'Union St. Baptiste of America was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Occum with Joseph T. Marsan of Taftville presiding. After the opening song of the federation by the choir, prayer for the deceased members was uttered by Rev. F. R. Dessureault.

Twenty councils, represented by 300 members, answered the roll call by Secretary Boulais. Alma Fortier of Goodyear spoke briefly of the first anniversary of Council St. Joseph, following which Mrs. Arsella Rousseau, president of Council St. Cecil of Willimantic brought forward the banner of the carillon, which Mrs. Laura Grenier, honorary president, presented to the president of Council St. Joseph. In making the presentation she said:

We members of Council Ste. Cecile of Willimantic wish to remember the members of Cuncil St. Joseph on the first anniversary and also the good work you have done for the union and St. Joseph parish. We present you this banner which is the emblem of your faith and society and may the year 1925 bring joy and happiness to all members. We hope its membership will double.

The president of Council St. Joseph accepted the banner and the choir sang la drapeau du Carillon.

A $50 check which was nailed to the table by Miss Aldea M. Lessard of Occum, a delegate at the last convention in Danielson, was brought up. The contest showed that Council Ste. Cecile of Willimantic was the winner.

The next business meeting is to be in Taftville in May.

The entertainment programme for the afternoon was announced by the president, Moise Lafrenier, and included songs by Cecile Lafreniere, Aldora Savageau, Mr. Fournier, Regina Savageau, Mrs. Beatrice Bernal, and songs by the quintette consisting of Miss Aldora Savageau, Regina Savageau, soprano, Cecile Lafreniere, Mrs. Beatrice Bernal, alto; Mr. Fournier, tenor; with Miss Roselda Champagne at the piano. NORWICH LIONS HEAR WHAT OTHER CLUBS ARE DOING

Tauesday noon at the Wauregan hotel, the monthly business meeting of the Norwich Lions club was held with President William A. Anderson in the chair. The song leader was Dr. Clarence G. Thompson and William Huber was the accompanist. Benedict C. Fuller was the five minute speaker. He spoke on What Other Clubs are Doing as follows:

When we realize the number of service clubs throughout the country and that the large membership of men which composes them are in turn the representative business men of their several communities, we can visualize what a potential force for good these organizations represent.

There are at present 2618 Rotary clubs with 113,000 members; 1450 Kiwanis clubs with a membership of 95,000; and 1,000 Lions clubs whose membership numbers 50,000; and all these growing rapidly. Numerous other clubs such as Exchange clubs, etc. make an approximate total of 6,000 clubs with 250,000 members. Think what a mighty force this chain of good will and this great man force represents in American life.

Throughout all parts of the country these clubs are cooperating in worthy towards the civic betterment of their respective communities. They are also engaged in such similar activities as caring for the needy, helping to educate and train youth and urging better conditions generally. The character of these clubs changes but slightly in different localities. However they are all continually building and striving for greater service everywhere.

I doubt if many of our members read carefully the many interesting items regarding activities and accomplishments of other Lions clubs nearby as which appear each month in the Lions club magazine, so will take this opportunity to relate a few of them. The Fall River club recently started out to raise a fund for crippled children which now amounts to $2,700. The New Britain club put on a Lions club frolic recently which netted a handsome sum, every cent of which went into their fund for orphans and crippled children. The New Haven club helped put over the community cheer drive and provided Christmas cheer for crippled children in the form of Christmas baskets and other things to make a happier Christmas for them. The Providence club has supported the handicraft and junior achievement work in the schools for two years, expending $5,500 in cash and much time and energy. The Waterbury club helped to take care of poor families at Christmas time and have a committee at work now arranging for putting up a permanent Christmas tree in a park in the center of the city.

There are many other interesting activities of other clubs which might be mentioned but you can all read about them by perusing more carefully each month the Lions club magazine.

President Anderson gave a brief talk on the various club activities scheduled for the next few weeks. The club voted a sum of money for the Boy Scout fund. William O'Neil was awarded the attendance contest prize, a fountain pen, donated by Frank Eggleton. The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

How Mrs. V. R. Sweet Lost 40 Pounds

Wonderful French formula works wonders even in most stubborn cases of obesity—NO DIETS—DANGEROUS DRUGS OR EXERCISES.

Hundreds of letters of fat people who have reduced with SAN-GRI-NA tell the same story as Mrs. Sweet of Albion, Idaho.

"I was able to take off several pounds of fat every week without any effort or harmful effect—at the same time I greatly improved my health—I ate all I wanted, did not have to exercise or take dangerous drugs and thanks to SAN-GRI-NA my dream of getting back to my normal weight is at last realized.

If you are a fat woman let me tell you what to do: Get a box of SAN-GRI-NA today, take two small tablets before your meals and safely lose a few pounds of excess fat each week—It took four boxes of SAN-GRI-NA to reduce me of forty pounds—It made me look at least ten years younger and entirely transformed my health and appearance. I gladly sign my name to this letter because I am happy to be able to help every fat man or woman regain a slender, healthy normal figure.—Mrs. V. R. Sweet."

NOTICE—SAN-GRI-NA is a scientific discovery made up from the formula of one of the best French medical authorities on obesity—It is guaranteed absolutely harmless and not to contain dangerous drugs or chemicals—IT HAS REDUCED HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE WHERE EVERYTHING ELSE HAD FAILED—SAN-GRI-NA is not a new, untried or unknown formula—it was used for years in Europe by most reliable obesity specialists with remarkable success. It has now been introduced in America and is sold by the leading druggists at a price within the reach of all.

SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed absolutely harmless, and positive to reduce you or money refunded. Sold at all good drug or department stores or you can send direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

On sale at Lee & Osgood's, Dunn's or Morgan's drug stores.

DIPHTHERIA MAY APPEAR IN UNEXPECTED WAYS

The diphtheria bacillus usually grows in the throat, nose or larynx of the patient but occasionally it is found in unexpected locations, says the bulletin of the state department of health. For example a recent case of nasal diphtheria following scarlet fever in a child aged six was complicated by ear trouble which resulted in a running ear. The nasal diphtheria cleared up after the administration of antitoxin but the ear continued to run and a culture from the discharge was positive for diphtheria bacilli. The virulence test, however, made on the culture proved negative.

In another instance which recently came to the attention of the department, an infant aged 10 days was found to have a discharging ear. Examination of smear from the ear showed what appeared to be practically a pure culture of diphtheria bacilli. No virulence test was made. This case is of special interest in view of the fact that young infants are ordinarily thought to be immune to diphtheria.

Once in a great while diphtheria infection of the eye may occur. This is probably one of the most serious and damaging of the acute infections to which the eye is subject. The diphtheria bacillus may also at times gain entrance to wounds and cause infection of wounds.

Unusual cases of infection like those mentioned above are of course rare. The occurrence of such a case merely serves as a reminder that unusual forms of diphtheria may at times occur. But the usual forms of the disease do far more damage than the unusual forms. Since toxin-antitoxin has been found to be an effective preventive agent, the occurrence of diphtheria signifies failure to use this readily available means of prevention.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN ARE TO ORGANIZE EXTENSIVELY

An extensive campaign of organization work throughout the state was planned by the executive board of the Federation of Democratic Women's clubs at its meeting in Waterbury Wednesday.

Plans were made for carrying out this purpose by an enlarged and active board under the direction of Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, the chairman. An educational program will be prepared for the club to teach democratic women the machinery of government and the fundamental principles of the democratic party.

It was decided to have the biennial convention in June in Waterbury, where there will be speakers of national reputation.

Several appointments were made by the board. Miss Regina Martin of Hartford was made chairman of the program committee. Mrs. James A. Curry of Hartford, Hartford county chairman, and Mrs. William Harris of New Haven, chairman for New Haven county.

Before the meeting Mrs. Welch, retiring vice-chairman of the state central committee and other members of the board called on the newly-elected vice-chairman, Mrs. Alice Mooney, to extend their greetings.

The next meeting will be held the first week in April in New Haven.

EMPLOYED 35 YEARS WITH SWIFT & CO.

The 1925 year book of Swift & Co., contains the following about Herbert C. Adams, manager in this city for the company, in whose employe he has been for 35 years:

"In the 35-year class we find the name of Herbert C. Adams, the Norwich manager for Swift & Co. A native of Massachusetts, Mr. Adams went to work for the company at Providence in 1890 and came to Norwich with which city he has since been actively identified in numerous ways, in 1895.

"While the best efforts of Mr. Adams have naturally been devoted to the interests of the great company he represents, and of which he is one of the most trusted local managers, he is widely known for his services in other ways, and he is one of the most active and popular members of the Norwich Rotary club. Like all others in his class of the long 35 years' service he has reason to be proud of his enviable record."

Of the 50,000 employes of the company there are about 1,200 who have been with it for 25 years, 164 for 35 and 40 for 40 years.

WILL REORGANIZE NORWICH BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL

The regular meeting of Norwich Central Labor union was held Tuesday in Carpenters' hall and was largely attended. Secretary J. J. Egan of the Connecticut Federation of Labor was present in the interest of the reorganization of the building trades council and gave a very interesting address. It was a unanimous vote of the delegates from the building trades to reorganize the council and March 18 was set as a date for the next meeting at which officers will be elected and the building trades council put on a working basis.

President Donohue reported that arrangements had been made for the showing of "Labor's Reward," a moving picture at the Broadway theatre on a Sunday afternoon in April. This picture is a part of the educational campaign now being run through the courtesy of the American Federation of Labor. It is a regular five reel picture accompanied with a lecture and is absolutely free of admission and the officers of the Central Labor union sincerely hope that there will be a large attendance when the pictures comes.

MORE POLICY HOLDER DEATHS THROUGH AUTO ACCIDENTS

Deaths from motor vehicle accidents in January to the number of 290 were recorded among the approximately seventeen million industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. This marks an increase of 21.4 per cent. over the rate for January, 1925.

"It is discouraging to record the fact that still another year has opened unfavorably with respect to automobile fatalities," said Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the insurance company. "The death rate for this cause among the industrial policyholders of the company in January, this year, was 13.6 per 100,000, while the rate for the corresponding month last year was 11.2."

RIBS BROKEN IN CRASH WHEN AUTO HIT POLE

Windsor Jacques, superintendent of the New London office of an insurance company, suffered three fractured ribs and lacerations of the face shortly after 10 o'clock Thursday morning in Mystic, when his automobile crashed into a pole. Following the accident, Mr. Jacques was treated in Mystic and removed to his home at 184 Pequot avenue, New London, where he is now under the care of a physician. Although painful, his injuries are not considered serious.

The accident happened when Mr. Jacques dropped a cigarette on the floor of the machine and, in attempting to put his foot on the cigarette, temporarily lost control of the machine.

On taking his eye from the floor of the car Mr. Jacques saw that the car was headed toward the pole and in a quick effort to step on the foot brake, stepped on the accelerator instead, causing the car to crash into the pole. The car was considerably damaged and Mr. Jacques cut about the face and jammed behind the steering wheel.

HORSES DROWNED BY BREAKING THROUGH ICE

Two horses owned by Wilfred and Walter Scott of Niantic, were drowned and the driver, Charles Chapman, escaped with only a drenching Monday afternoon when the ice crust of Whistletown pond over which the horses were being driven, gave way. The team was hitched to a heavy farm wagon. Chapman drove over the pond as a short cut. On previous trips, the ice had been safe but during the early part of the week, the ice cracked slightly. From a distance, the ice appeared safe enough to bear the weight of the horses and wagon.

Magnesia Best for Your Indigestion

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have how discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia, especially prepared for stomach use.

AIMS TO DISRUPT TEXTILE INDUSTRY OF THE COUNTRY

Albert Weisbord, College Graduate, Seeks to Create Conflict Where Contentment Now Prevails—Has Organizers at Work in Lawrence and Providence—Hopes Ultimately to Extend His Tentacles Throughout the Country—Object is One Big Union—Paterson, N. J., Silk Workers Deride the Assertions of the Meteoric Labor Leader.

PASSAIC, N. J., March 5—(AP)—Albert Weisbord, A. B. and L. L. B., graduate of two American universities, today told of his plans for trying to extend the New Jersey textile strike throughout the east in that industry. He said his ultimate aim is one big union of all labor organizations. His career are from the College of the City of New York, and Harvard Law school.

Comparatively unknown until a few weeks ago, he has organized the Passaic strike until it involves 8,000 workers. He now has organizers working in the key spinning districts of Lawrence, Mass., Providence, R. I., and Paterson, N. J., in the Lawrence district, he said, 25,000 workers were ready to strike, as were 10,000 others in Paterson. He admitted that there were slight prospects of an immediate walkout in the Providence district eventually, he said, he hopes to bring more of the 1,000,000 textile workers of the country into the conflict.

GOVERNOR OFFERED TO ACT AS ARBITRATOR IN STRIKE

PASSAIC, N. J., March 5—(AP)—The announcement of Governor Moore in Jersey City that he would be willing to act as arbitrator between textile strikers and mill owners met with no action today by either side. The day was unmarred by disorders between police and strikers.

Col. F. H. Johnson, vice president and general manager of the Botany Worsted mills, Passaic, said that he would have to hear from the governor direct before he could say whether he was willing to arbitrate. Other mill officials expressed the same attitude.

Albert Weisbord and other strike leaders indicated they would take the governor's offer under consideration.

Twice today strikers marched through Clifton and although they were not allowed to picket the Dundee Textile company plant, police did not attempt to disperse them. In the morning about 50 strikers marched past the mill while in the afternoon about 900 paraded.

There were few children, no baby carriages and no gas masks in evidence among the strikers. Several wore trench helmets. There was evidence that feeling among the strikers against police was not running so high and that police were less inclined to break up strikers' gatherings.

Warrants for two Passaic policemen were obtained today by John L. Hughes, of Newark, attorney for the American Civil Liberties union, but Police Chief Zober said they had not been served when the men went off duty. The charges were made by Mr. and Mrs. Victor Navroc, Clifton storekeepers, and two others, who said Patrolmen Edward Hogan and Cornelius Strukey had beaten them. It was at first incorrectly stated that the policemen were members of the Clifton force.

Weisbord's assertion that the Paterson silk workers would soon go out on a sympathetic strike was denied by Fred Hoelscher, secretary-treasurer of the association of silk workers of Paterson. He called the prediction "bosh," and other silk workers' leaders agreed that there would be no sympathy strike.

FOUR MEN OFFER THEIR SERVICES AS MEDIATORS

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—A group of four New York men offered their services late today as mediators in the New Jersey textile strike.

Their proposal, sent to the strike headquarters at Pasaic, follows:

"We are prepared to serve as a body of four representatives who shall negotiate on your behalf with the owners and managers of the establishments in which you have been employed. We are prepared to urge an acceptance of the demands made by you and to submit the result of our negotiations to you and your general strike committee before the final acceptance thereof."

COUNTESS OF CATHCART IS GRANTED FREE ENTRY

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Vera, Countess of Cathcart, obtained free entry into this country today when Federal Judge Bondy reversed a ruling under which hundreds of foreigners have been turned away on the ground of moral turpitude.

Judge Bondy, in ruling that moral turpitude constituted only acts in violation of the laws of the country where they occurred, said that alien manufacturers and sellers of liquor might as well be barred on the grounds of moral turpitude as persons charged with violations.

Under the ruling today the countess may remain in this country six months, with the same status as that of all foreign visitors.

Immigration officials had endeavored to have her barred because of her admission of adultery wit hthe Earl of Craven, with whom she eloped to South Africa before her divorce in England.

This constituted no violation of the laws of the Union of South Africa, District Attorney Buckner notified the court.

A special representative of the department of labor at the hearing today announced that the government would take no further action.

ALLEGED FORGER HAS FORFEITED $3,000 BOND

BRIDGEPORT, March 5.—(AP)—Henry I. Rubin, Stamford, charged with forgery, failed to appear in criminal superior court this afternoon and the bonds of $3,000 were declared forfeitured by Judge L. F. Waldo Marvin.

Rubin's counsel said the accused had been notified to appear in court, and had said he would be present, if no explanation could be made of his absence.

Rubin was charged on three counts with forging chattel mortgages. His case was first called for a hearing on Tuesday, but several days of grace were granted before the calling of his bond.

The other bonds of $1,000 each were forfeited when Gregory J. Pozzi and Eugene Galsolan, Westfield, Mass., did not appear to answer to charges of illegally transporting liquor. They were arrested in Newtown by state police on last January 25.

COLD WAVE IN NEW YORK AND NEW ENGLAND

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—The cold wave throughout New York and New England drove the thermometer to sub-normal temperature today, but warmer weather was predicted for tomorrow.

Western New York temperatures were 16 degrees below the average for this date and north of Boston the mercury descended below zero. Official weather reports showed a minimum temperature of 2 degrees below zero at Greenville, Maine, but unofficial readings went as low as 15 degrees below at Windsor, Vt.

Along the southern New England coast temperatures hovered around 12 degrees above, and the lowest in New York today was 18. Sharp winds along the coast added to the discomforts of the belated cold wave.

STATE POLICEMAN M. R. KEITH HAS RESIGNED

HARTFORD, March 5.—(AP)—State Policeman Merrill R. Keith, who has been on duty at the Danielson barracks, has resigned to become chief of police at Northbridge, Mass. He will go to his new position on Monday, leaving the state police department on Saturday. Superintendent Robert T. Hurley said today. Policeman Keith has been commended for his efficiency during his work with the department.

BANDITS GET HARVESTER COMPANY $80,000 PAYROLL

CHICAGO, March 5, — (AP) — Nine robbers firing shot guns and revolvers to scare 50 employes, 12 of them girls, held up the offices of the International Harvester company here today and escaped with an $80,000 payroll. No one was hurt.

It was the second time in the last few months that the International offices had been held up, about $40,000 having been taken the first time.

Leaving two automobiles in front of the building, the robbers overpowered two watchmen and entered the office, shattering windows and lights with their bullets. The telephone operator was dragged from her switchboard, where all connections were severed. All employes were told to stand in a corner or lie on the floor.

Two bandits, apparently knowing where the money was kept, went to the door of a locked room, where the pay envelopes were to be distributed, slashed the glass and took the money. Meanwhile, one of the guards who had been overpowered crept unnoticed upstairs.

At a signal from the leader, who was masked, the gang dashed for exits to meet the shots of the guard from the second floor. They returned his fire, smashing more windows, but hitting no one.

The stolen money was covered by insurance. An employe who did not report for work today is under suspicion.

"GREEK SCULPTURE", TOPIC OF TROWBRIDGE LECTURE

NEW HAVEN, March 5.—(AP)—Speaking on "Greek sculpture; Phidias and Parthenon," Lorado Taft giving the first of the Trowbridge memorial lectures at Yale, today, characterized the Parthenon as a "miracle of skill, so amazing that our age cannot grasp its perfection."

"In 3,000 years of incessant industry," Dr. Taft said, "the Egyptians made no advance in the art of sculpture. Their earliest known efforts are more startingly vivid than the products of later ages.

"The Greeks, on the other hand, show a steady and astonishing progress. In a short 150 years (600 B. C.-450 B. C.) they evolved from a 'kindergarten' period into an artistic maturity without parallel in the story of man. With unerring good sense they avoided the alternate pitfalls of realism and of symbolism. Their sculpture is neither 'taxidermy' nor grotesque monstrosity.

"The famous frieze of the Parthenon was derived in part from a naif motive on the Cnidian treasury at Delphi; in larger part was suggested by local events. This transcript of a heroic ceromonial is a marble fillet of rhythmic splendor. The pan-athenian procession was a pageant of unusual simplicity and dignity. The artist selected certain significant features and gave it an ideally sculptural rendering. It is a translation of life into sculptural terms."

CUNARD LINER AUSONIA STRUCK TERRIFIC GALE

CHERBOURG, France, March 5—(AP)—The Cunard liner Ausonia, en route to New York, struck a terrific gale between Southampton and Cherbourg.

The heavy seas smashed windows of the dining saloon and passengers were knocked down like ninepins. A number of them received cuts and bruises through being dashed against tables. No one, however, was seriously hurt. The purser, W. D. Brown, was among those injured.

The material damage to the liner was hastily repaired during the call at Cherbourg.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

ASSEMBLING FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS SESSIONS

PARIS, March 5—(AP)—Paris was the scene of unusual diplomatic activity today upon the eve of next week's league of nations gatherings at Geneva.

Premier Briand received Baron Avesnans, the Italian ambassador, and Count Skrzynski, premier of Poland and entertained Foreign Minister Ninitchitch of Jugoslavia at lunch. The enlargement of the council of the league and the allotment of additional permanent seats are known to have been the principal topics of these conversations.

M. Briand is understood to have told all his callers that the French attitude continues unchanged in favor of permanent seats for Poland, Spain, and Brazil. It is also understood that M. Nintchitch conferred with the premier concerning the prospective pact between Italy and Jugoslavia.

TWO SENSATIONAL ART ROBBERIES IN LONDON

LONDON, March 5—(AP)—Two sensational art robberies have taken place in London this week. A small picture by the English artist Birket Foster was stolen from the royal academy. The constable paintings were in the diplomatic gallery, which is on the floor above the memorial exhibit of paintings by the American artist, John Singer Sargent.

The stolen studies with many other similiar works were screwed to the wall, and there is considerable mystery as to how the thief escaped with the pictures unnoticed.

OPPOSED TO INCREASE IN AVIATION APPROPRIATIONS

WASHINGTON, March 5—(AP)—Indications were given at the white house today that President Coolidge is opposed to any considerable increase for army and navy aviation.

The president believes that the budget estimate of $674,000,000 for war and navy department activities during the coming fiscal year should be ample to take care of efforts to strengthen the air service.

As for men, if it should be decided to increase the number engaged in aviation, he is of the opinion they could be taken from other branches of the two services without weakening the general military structure.

The president estimates that 558,000 American men would be available almost overnight for military service in the event of emergency and the amount of money now being appropriated for both the army and navy, in his judgment, is ample to insure adequate preparedness and to equip and place to the best advantage the men in active service.

As for aviation expenditures, the budget recommendations for approximately $70,000,000 for the army and navy air services, he feels, are sufficient, with funds that might be transferred from other branches of the military service, to strengthen this arm and carry out the recommendations of his air board.

TALK OF FREE LEGAL AID FOR DESERVING POOR

NEW HAVEN, March 5.—(AP)—The establishment of a free legal aid service to the deserving poor, the salaries of the judges of the federal courts and representation at the annual meeting of the National Bar association, were subjects taken up at a special meeting of the New Haven County Bar association here today.

It was voted to empower Chairman Philip Pond to select two delegates, who are to attend the meeting of the American Bar association in Washington on April 25.

The chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of five, which is to inquire into the advisability of establishing a free legal service bureau for the deserving poor, who cannot afford to engage lawyers to look after their interests in matters of litigation.

Regarding the question of the salaries of federal judges, it was decided to support the bill now before congress, which provides increases for those judges. The secretary of the association, Daniel J. Bailey, was instructed to request the Connecticut senators and representatives to support the bill.

Successful Test Of Submarine V-1

At Submersion of 200 Feet the Hull Merely Creaked and Groaned.

NEW LONDON, March 5—(AP)—The submarine V-1, the colossus of Uncle Sam's undersea navy, has proved her right to be assigned to active service with the fleet of first line submarines.

As the climax to availability tests, which have been conducted off Block Island, the last few days, the giant V-1, today was submerged to the 200 foot level, the maximum depth at which she is supposed to operate. The result was continued in a message to the submarine base here, this afternoon which read:

"Deep dive completed successfully."

The tests which were conducted by three submarine experts were made some 20 miles southeast of Montauk Point lighthouse, Long Island, where the ocean floor 200 feet below the surface is comparatively level for considerable a space.

The huge hull, with nearly 100 men aboard, was taken first to the 125 foot level, where observations were made. By stages of 25 feet in a movement downward, the dive was completed to the 200 foot level when the craft was held motionless for a short time. At 200 feet, the water exerted a pressure of 88.8 pounds at every square inch of its surface, causing the hull to creak and groan.

While the craft remained immovable, a study was made of the water pressure on the pressure hull.

During the deep dive, the V-1 was in constant communication with the O-2, submarine school ship which accompanied the larger vessel to the scene of the tests. Cruising about also was the coast guard patrol boat CG-157.

Captain E. J. King, commander of the base, in commenting on the success of the test, said he had been certain the hull would withstand the pressure at that depth. He added that he did not know of a single instance where the pressure hull of a submarine had failed during depth tests.

While the V-1, V-2, and V-3, all in commission, were built to withstand a dive of 200 feet, there are now under construction, three submarines, the V-4, V-5, and V-6, which can be taken to the 300 foot level, he said.

The V-1, which is 341 feet long and 27.5 feet wide, carries a crew of seven officers and 34 men, more than twice the number of the crew of the S-51, which was sunk off Block Island last September with the loss of 33 of the 36 men aboard. The V-1, built by the navy department at Portsmouth shipyard, was commissioned October 1, 1924. She recently returned from a 14,000 mile orulse in southern waters.

RUSHING WORK ON THE FRENCH FINANCIAL BILLS

PARIS, March 5—(AP)—The chamber of deputies, working against time in an attempt to dispose of the financial restoration bills so they can be sent to the senate tomorrow morning and finally voted before Premier Briand leaves for Geneva tomorrow night, made considerable progress today.

The deputies passed articles taxing salt and increasing the tax on alcohol. However, an amendment proposing the organization of a corporation with 200,000,000 francs capital, with the state owning two-thirds of the stock, for the exclusive sale of petroleum and sugar slowed up the work involving a long debate. In the course of this Finance Minister Doumer said the proposal needed further study and pointed out that it was a rather delicate matter to organize a monopoly in a product for which France is entirely dependent upon other countries.

The chamber refused to disjoin the amendment and send it back to the finance committee, but during the discussion M. Doumer impressed the deputies with the difficulties in the way of immediate realization of such an innovation, and its authors withdrew it.

Indications this evening were that the chamber would finish with the financial measures during the night, and that a final effort to compromise its disagreement with the senate on the financial program would begin tomorrow morning.

Merger of Light And Power Companies

Two Separate Groups in This State Will Have Stock Valuation of $9,712,000.

HARTFORD, March 5.—(AP)—Mergers of two separate groups of light and power companies in this state, involving aggregate stock valuation of more than $9,712,000 were approved by the public utilities commission in decisions handed down today.

The Meriden Gas Light company, the Meriden Electric Light company, the New Milford Electric Light company, the Woodbury Electric company and the Westport Electric company, were authorized to merge with the Connecticut Light and Power company. All of these companies are now owned by the Connecticut Electric Service company, a holding corporation for power and light companies. The Connecticut Light and Power company, will pay $6,891,300 for the stock, property and franchise of the other five companies by an exchange of stock for which an issue of 66,812 shares at $100 each will be made.

The second merger approved is that of six companies in the northern part of the state, the Connecticut Power company, Connecticut River company, the Northern Connecticut Light and Power company, the Thompsonville Water company, the Stafford Springs Aqueduct company and the Somers Electric company. These concerns are owned by the J. G. White Corporation, of New York.

The headquarters of this company will be in Hartford, and plans call for the construction of a $200,000 plant at Windsor Locks pending the development of a $6,000,000 hydro-electric project there. The plant will convert water power of the Windsor Locks canal and Connecticut river into electric power for the use of mills in the vicinity and for sale to other power companies.

Regarding the merger of five companies in the central and southern part of the state with the Connecticut Light and Power company, the commission finds that the proposal will not require any additional public financing.

The merger will be accomplished by an exchange of stock of the Connecticut Light and Power company, for which it proposes to issue 56,912 shares of its unsued authorized common stock of the par value of $100 each. These shares are to be exchanged as follows:

Transfer to the stockholders of the Meriden Gas Light company, in lieu of $1,000,000 of outstanding capital stock, 31,905 shares, amounting to $2,189,500.

Transfer to the stockholders of the Meriden Electric company, in lieu of the $730,000 outstanding capital stock, 28,751 shares, amounting to $2,875,100.

Transfer to the stockholders of the New Milford Electric Light company in lieu of $150,000 of outstanding capital stock, 2,358 shares, amounting to $235,800.

Transfer to the stockholders of the Woodbury Electric company in lieu of $15,500 of outstanding capital stock, 191 shares amounting to $19,100.

Transfer to the stockholders of the Westport Electric company, 3,617 shares, in lieu of $353,400 in capital stock, amounting to $361,700.

There was no opposition to this merger presented to the commission which finds that "based upon the evidence submitted and taking into consideration the fact of an already existing unified ownership of the several companies and the possibility of free interchange of electric current throughout the entire distributing system, the commission is of opinion and finds that the merger should be approved, subject, however, to the confirmation thereof by vote of the stockholders of several petitioning companies.

"If the proposed merger produces the results anticipated and claimed by the petitioners, rates for service should have a downward and not an upward tendency."

CONDITIONS ARE BECOMING NORMAL ON STOCK EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Trading on the New York stock exchange today returned to almost normal conditions, heavy buying of the railroad shares, particularly the Van Sweringen issues, contrasted with a renewal of liquidation in many industrials as prices sought their proper levels after four wildly exciting sessions. The first three of which witnessed a violent general decline and the fourth an almost equally violent recovery.

Total sales today were 2,101,300 shares, a compared with 2,626,400 yesterday and 3,785,700 in Wednesday's record-breaking session.

Today's advance in the Van Sweringen issues probably received its impetus from reports that bankers were preparing the construction of a new financial structure for the "Nickel Plate" merger to replace the one rejected by the interstate commerce commission.

NEW CHECK-UP TO BE MADE ON INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

Squads Are to Investigate Situation East of the Ohio River and North of the Potomac River—Arguments Made Before House Ways and Means Committee For the Creation of a Separate Prohibition Bureau of the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—An administration program for sweeping reorganization of the government's enforcement activities was taken up today by the house ways and means committee, while wets and drys continued their charges and counter-accusations against each other.

Creation of a separate prohibition bureau in the treasury department, as provided in a bill drafted by Representative Hogan, was urged before the committee as an immediate "essential step" toward effective enforcement by Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition agencies of the treasury.

On the floor of the house, misrepresentation was charged by both sides of the controversy. Representative Griffin, democrat, New York, urging modification of the Volstead act and assailing the Anti-saloon league, said it should be called the "total abstinence league." Representative Stevenson, democrat, South Carolina, attacked the New York member's appeal for modification on the basis of personal liberty as "high-strung hypocrisy", citing Mr. Griffin's vote in favor of the proposed child labor amendment.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary Andrews' office sent an order to prohibition administrators throughout the country announcing organization of special squads of experts to cope with the industrial alcohol diversion situation, which, he said, "is one of our biggest problems in the area east of the Ohio and north of the Potomac."

The treasury department has gone as far as it can in centralizing its activities until "regularizing" legislation is enacted, Mr. Andrews told the ways and means committee. There can be no hope of efficient administration, he said, so long as the present organization stands. A separate bureau, he predicted, would obtain sufficient revenues from bootleggers to pay for its expenses in six months.

His present task of coordinating three units engaged in various phases of enforcement work is "too big for one man," he continued, urging bureau status also for the coast guard and customs services. The prohibition bureau, he said, should have control of border patrols and of the issuance of permits for whiskey withdrawals in order to prevent "leakage."

States and local governments must relieve the federal government of much of the "police work". Representative Cramton said, but he thought this should not go so far as to allow lack of responsibility in one section to destroy the effectiveness of the national program.

CALLED FOR CONFAB ON ARMS CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP)—Ambassador Houghton at London and Minister Hugh Gibson at Geneva, have been requested to return here for consultation with Secretary Kellogg regarding plans for the preliminary arms conference to be held under auspices of the league of nations.

The two American diplomats will sail for the United States on the President Roosevelt, March 7, and are expected to being conferences with Mr. Kellogg about March 15.

The return of Mr. Gibson, who will represent the United States at the conference, had been previously announced by the state department, and it was said authoritatively today that the reason for Ambassador Houghton's summons to Washington lay in his familiarity with British armament policies and his knowledge of the German attitude on armament questions, gained during his service as ambassador to Berlin.

From the two diplomats, Secretary Kellogg expects to gather information of great value to guide him in formulating instructions for the American delegates who will attend the conference when the time and place is finally determined. A decision on the date and place for the armament discussions probably will be arrived at while the diplomats are en route to this country.

There is little, if any, ground for belief that Ambassador Houghton will be added to the membership of the American delegation tentatively selected by Secretary kelloKgg. The chairmanship of the American group is expected to fall to Mr. Gibson.

FALL OF BRIAND MINISTRY IN FRANCE THREATENING

PARIS, March 5.—(AP)—Extremely gloomy prospects for the Briand ministry prevailed in the lobbies of the chamber of deputies tonight when an all-night session was started for action on the financial restoration measures. It was the general impression that at best the cabinet could only win with the slimmest majority, and that it was possible, even probable, that it would be defeated. There was even much talk of a ministry headed by M. Caillaux, the former minister of finance, to succeed the Briand cabinet.

The battle royal was expected to come on the tax on business transactions, but a vote is not looked for until after dawn.

BRIDGEPORT BANK MAN HAS SHORTAGE OF $11,000

BRIDGEPORT, March 5—(AP)—Clarence W. Kuhne, assistant treasurer of the Mechanics and Farmers Savings bank, arrested today, charged with falsifying accounts, on complaint of State Bank Commissioner John B. Byrne, covered a shortage of funds for about 11 years, a shortage he claims he did not create.

Kuhne's explanation involved a woman, but officials have failed to identify her. He said he covered her stealings to save her from disgrace and he paid out of his life at least ten years ago. This woman, Kuhne told the commissioner, was a clerk in the bank. On a summer vacation twelve years ago, she fell in love at first sight with a man, married him, and came back to work keeping her family and friends in ignorance of her marriage but confiding in Kuhne then a fellow clerk. That husband prevailed on the woman to steal from money she handled in the bank and $5,000 was the amount she told Kuhne at the time, Kuhne had taken. Discovery had appeared imminent and she pleaded with Kuhne, according to his explanation, that he save her from exposure.

Commissioner Byrne telling his own story from the point where Kuhne left off, as spokesman for the bank, said that Kuhne all these years had covered the shortage, which appeared to be $11,000 not $5,000, by slipping out of their proper place individual ledger cards whenever a trial balance was taken and the total amount equalled the total entered on the cards.

COOLIDGE CONFIDENT OF CONTINUED PROSPERITY

WASHINGTON, March 5—(AP)—President Coolidge is convinced the country faces continued prosperity and that the recent drop in security values on the stock market benefitted conditions rather than forecast any slump in business and industry.

The break in the market early in the week, in his opinion had a stabilizing effect and had the tendency of placing the market on a more sound foundation.

Business conditions and the outlook were discussed at today's cabinet session, the president receiving optimistic reports, particularly from Postmaster General New and Secretary Davis of the labor department.

Reporting as to the volume of postal receipts in 50 important cities, Mr. New said that the total for last month was 8 per cent. greater than in February, 1925. In January they exceed receipts of the corresponding month of 1925, By six to seven per cent.

Mr. Davis advised the executive that, while strikes were in progress in some localities, there was practically no unemployment.

With regard to conditions in the securities market, the president holds to the view that, while there was speculation there, it had not reached into industries or commodities. The commodity market, as he sees it is sound.

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—One of the largest consolidations in the history of the American oil industry today brought together the Associated and Tide Water Oil companies, with total assets of more than $240,000,000. The two organizations will be combined under a new corporation—the Tide Water Associated Oil company—formation of which was engineered by Blair & Co., Inc., and the Chase Securities corporation of New York.

In addition to nation-wide operations covering the Pacific coast, midcontinent and Atlantic seaboard territories, the new company will fall heir to an export business assuring it a strong position in the international field. Additional acquisitions are foreshadowed by its charter which grants the company powers to purchase the securities of other corporations.

ALLEN MACKLIN'S WIFE MAKES OPEN CONFESSION

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 5. — Allen Macklin, 38, wanted in several localities for infractions of the law and 15 year old Frances Hubbell, his second living wife, were under detention by state police in Hartford today, accused of robberies in Simsbury and Hebron. Mrs. Macklin, No. 2, has confessed to be an accessory to fact in both robberies in which her husband is implicated as the master mind. The investigation of state police officers has disclosed that it was Macklin who entered the home of Everett G. Lord in Hebron on the evening of Jan. 29 last and stole $500 in cash from a desk drawer and that he was the thief who broke into Hall's Bros. Radio store in Simsbury some days ago and appropriated contents valued at about $600.

Disclosures brought to light through an investigation of Macklin's doings by a representative of The Bulletin read much like a popular novel. Allen Macklin appeared in the little village of Hebron about one and a half years ago. He came in the role of a city slicker. The unsuspecting villagers learned nothing of his past and Macklin apparently on his good behavior, mixed out as a farm hand to H. Clinton Potter and soon won admiration as a model young man. He became an active member of the church and won prominence and popularity among old and young for his ability in acting on the stage. He joined the Hebron Dramatic club and took important roles in all the productions.

The last September came a forced marriage with Frances Hubbell, aged 15. The girl had been placed some years previous in the home of Edwin C. Smith of Hebron by a Hartford welfare bureau. She had been in the seventh grade of grammar school in the previous year. Macklin was 22 years her senior. With his good reputation broken Macklin took his bride with him and removed to Hartford. He secured several jobs, failing to stay at any one employment. It is said that one of his employers near Hartford claimed that the man stole chickens from him.

Jan. 29, Macklin remembering what he had observed while playing on the confidence of the people of Hebron, took his bride along as an accomplice and drove a hired automobile to Hebron. While the Lord family was attending an entertainment in the town hall, Macklin entered the house through the unlocked rear door and appropriated a $500 role of bills, which he knew was kept in the desk. He had previously made a friend of the family watch dog and the apparent quiet attitude of the animal during an intrusion which so mystified the family is now explained. A little over a week ago Macklin committed the burglary in Simsbury. It was this last theft which led to his arrest by Hartford state police on Feb. 22, while he was at his rooms on Oak street, Hartford. At that time he was being sought by Stafford state police for complicity in the Hebron burglary. Lacking the bonds of $1000 he has since remained at the Elms street jail in Hartford.

After a search it was found that his wife had become employed by the Chemerse Thread company in this city and she was residing at The Elms, the company boarding house. She was taken into custody Thursday and brought to Hartford for questioning. She made an open confession and the investigation by the officers is practically completed. Macklin has a wife and child living in Canada. He is wanted by that government as a visitor and also in the states of Michigan and Georgia. A series of charges probably including that of bigamy are being prepared against Macklin. His recent ride is being detained at the house of correction in Hartford.

(Special to The Bulletin)

The first plan was for a part of the town known as the river road, which is already supplied part of the way. J. B. Palmer offered to give the poles and place them. Since then, it is planned to have a blueprint of the town made by the Eastern Connecticut Power company and find out if the rest of the town can be supplied, through the operation of the property owners. This would mean street lighting, as well as house lighting, if is expected.

Mrs. Mortimer Murphy, of 95 Peck Street, says:

Makes week's wash whiter than ever with half the work —and lengthens life of clothes!

New kind of soap soaks clothes cleaner than you could rub them.

MILLIONS of women now get their family wash cleaner, whiter and sweeter than ever—quickly, safely, and without putting their hands to a washboard!

No need now to scrub the life out of clothes. No more parboiled washday hands. Just soak the week's wash in Rinso suds overnight, or an hour or two in the morning. Then rinse—the dirt floats away—and your wash has been soaked immaculately clean. Even the most soiled spots need only a few gentle rubs between the fingers to make them snowy white.

Goodbye old-time bar soap!

Rinso is a new kind of rich, mild soap—granulated. It is all you need on washday, even in hardest water—no bar soap, washing powders or chipped bar soap—just Rinso.

Rinso loosens the ground-in dirt and stains. It's fine for boiling, too, though boiling isn't necessary as Rinso whitens better than boiling—sterilizes, too! Fine for washing machines; recommended for safety, and for a whiter, cleaner wash, by 23 leading washing machine manufacturers.

Saves hands—saves clothes

No laundry soap is easier on hands or safer to use than Rinso. You could soak your finest white table cloth in Rinso for days without harm, for it contains no acids, harsh chemicals, or bleaches—nothing to injure white clothes or fast colors.

Clothes last much longer with Rinso, for it ends washboard scrubbing—the great cause of clothes wearing out. Get Rinso for small cost from your grocer. Follow simple directions on package.

"Rinso is a wonderful time saver. Before I began using Rinso I had to get up early in the morning to get the clothes ready to boil and my house was all steam. Now, since I use Rinso, I soak the clothes an hour in warm Rinso suds. The dirt all loosens with very little rubbing. Then I rinse them and hang them out to dry. Rinso saves time, strength, labor—will not injure the hands, and I have a cleaner, whiter wash than when done in the old way."
Mrs. Mortimer Murphy, 95 Peck Street, Norwich, Conn.

Helped in Caring for them by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Glasgow, Ky.—"I am the mother of seven children, the eldest being only 13 years, and I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to pull me through the roughest places of my married life. At one time I was so downhearted that life was a misery. A friend in Indianapolis, Indiana, told me of the Vegetable Compound, and after taking a few bottles of it I became myself again and it was a pleasure to do my housework and gardening. Since then I always use your medicine when I feel weak from overwork and it straightens me out."—Mrs. Melissa Barnes, Route 2, care of O. F. Steenbergen, Glasgow, Ky.

New Orleans, La.—"I could not do a thing after my first boy was born. I was so weak, I had no appetite, lost weight and was not able to do my work. QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid, liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

Open sores on leg for more than year

Healed healed in few weeks

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 24:—"I have been troubled with running sores on my leg for a year or more and all the medical attention and treatments I tried did no good. One day I saw an advertisement for Resinol Ointment in the newspaper and I bought a jar of it. In less than three weeks my sores healed up and have been well ever since. As my wife has been sick for nearly a year and had bed sores we induced her to try this salve and the sores are healing splendidly. I have bought several jars of it and believe me it will always be on the shelf in my bath room." (Signed) Alfred E. Bass, 1014 Monroe St.

DANIELSON

MANY PEOPLE HELPED BY WELL CHILD CONFERENCES

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 6. — Another Well Child conference will be held in the town hall building next Tuesday afternoon. Such conferences have been carried on throughout Connecticut for the past three years and have proved to be of a great power for good. In the large cities such conferences form a daily part of the health centers activities. In the smaller towns they have become monthly events for thousands of mothers. All classes of mothers meet as these events are held. The message for each one is "Health for all the children". Some mothers have successfully followed rules of hygiene and they bring healthy children to the conference month after month. Other mothers are just learning the value of establishing health habits and the need of frequent examination, and as a result of this are readjusting their home conditions so that their children's health may improve.

In one rural section where the field worker had found difficulty in locating a somewhat wandering family, it was found that, due to the influence of the conference, the family had moved into a better house with more sunlight, and the little one who had been directed into special treatment for paralysis was showing great improvement. What has been accomplished in many cases can be duplicated for the children of Danielson. The Well Child conference welcomes all mothers and their children.

Of local interest is the following from a Providence paper: "Discharge of a $36,000 attachment placed some time ago by the Allen Hippodrome corporation upon property of Frederick H. Sibley was recorded yesterday (Thursday) at the city hall. A quit claim deed was also recorded whereby Frederick H. Sibley of New Haven (formerly of Danielson) deeded property on the north side of South Angell street to May H. Sibley."

Residents of East Killingly and Goodyear are saying nice things about the effort of the Danielson Chamber of Commerce to get improved highways out of those communities. Goodyear has a state highway outlet to Dayville, but is very anxious for an improved route direct to Danielson via Maple street.

New machinery has been added to the equipment of the Acme Products company plant, formerly the Aseptic Products company, in East Killingly, and the mill is running nicely. The plant is one of the industrial assets of the town of Killingly and a feeder to its general prosperity.

State vs. George W. Davis of Providence. Marked ready.

George W. Davis of Providence was arraigned on a complaint charging him on March 4th with the operation of a automobile truck on the Noonan Neck hill road, while intoxicated. He entered a plea of guilty.

Solicitor Ferguson told the court that the defendant, an automobile mechanic, was operating a truck of the General Baking company of Providence, when the same was driven off the road and into some rocks by the road side, smashing the truck. Then brought to the police station there was no question about his intoxication. The defendant bore a good reputation, never having been arrested before, and his employers thought well of him. A shipment had been left at 9 a. m. and the accident occurred at 12 o'clock, when in the meantime he was reported as having taken several drinks. Solicitor Ferguson, while agreeing that auto operators under the influence of intoxicating liquors should receive a jail sentence, stated that this was not the question and no jail sentence should be given.

The attorney representing Davis said that the manager of the General Baking company thought well of Mr. Davis and would continue him in their employ as he was a valuable man to them and would not claim expense for repairs. He said that this experience had taught his client a lesson.

Judge Williams stated that it was rarely the case to find both the coming as to a non imposition of jail sentence and defendant's counsel agreeing on their representation of conditions he fined Davis $200 and the payment of costs. Attorney Ferguson asked that the defendant be left upon his attorney's recognizance.

UNCASVILLE

The Ladies Aid society of the Methodist Episcopal church gave a New England supper Thursday evening in the community house. A goodly number were present and a fine supper was served, in charge of Mrs. Richard Johnson, president of the society, assisted by the following committee: Mrs. Potter, Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. Samuel Lightowler. The kitchen was in charge of Mrs. Charles Ramage, Mrs. Ida Watson and Mrs. Hubert Dart. Those who served the supper were Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. Howa, Mrs. Ruben Bolles, Mrs. Samuel Lightowler, Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. Potter, Mrs. B. Hewett and Mrs. Ella Church. The coffee was made by Mrs. Charles Hope. Tickets for the supper were sold at the door by Mrs. Cora Botham and Mrs. Mary Chapman.

The March meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance union is to be held at the home of the president, Miss Nellie J. Starr, March 11th.

The schools of the town will open March 8th after a vacation of one week.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Charles Hurlbert entertained some of her friends in honor of her birthday. Among those present were Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Charles Ramage, Sr., and Mrs. Addie Rogers. Refreshments were served and all present had a very enjoyable afternoon.

REGISTERING ALIENS

The need of requiring all aliens to register is not a new proposition. It has been urged on several occasions by Secretary Davis of the department of labor as a means of meeting a situation which exists to the detriment of the country.

When the senate committee on immigration is urged from Chicago to enact such legislation, because of conditions which prevail in that city, it is simply adding emphasis to what has already been said. Chicago has produced new evidence which speaks for itself.

Under our restrictive laws there are many who cannot get admission to this country through the regular channels when they want it. This leads to the disregard of our laws and the smuggling of such individuals, with the result that no one knows how many such aliens are today within the country. There is no way of checking them up. They can devote their efforts to getting the benefit of all the advantages the country affords or they can turn their attention to the breaking of laws and the commission of crime. Some may become entangled with the law in such a way that their status will become known and their deportation will follow, but others may remain for an unlimited time and laugh at our efforts at lawmaking.

We declare through our laws that there is a restriction, but we do nothing of the sort when it comes to keeping out or checking up on the bootlegged alien. In justice to those who respect our immigration laws tabs should be kept on those who violate them. Such can be done through requiring all aliens to register each year. Such is no more than would be required in other countries and it is only what the situation demands here.

Asking the senate committee for such a provision does not necessarily mean that it will be recommended but it cannot be overlooked that there are constantly increasing reasons for adopting such a method of meeting an unsatisfactory situation.

CHILDREN AND FIREARMS

No little distress is manifested when the life of one child is taken by another through the use of firearms or other dangerous weapons. The situation is much the same whether the children are playing with a loaded gun, a revolver or some other death dealing instrument.

In Dorchester, Mass., an eight year old boy was killed by a shot from a revolver in the hands of another. There was a group playing Indians and to make the situation more real the revolver which had been purchased by a 14 year old boy through the mail was brought into use. Apparently it wasn't satisfactory to use it unloaded, so real ammunition was purchased and through it the life of the youngster was ended.

Such a case serves to emphasize the need of placing greater restrictions upon the sale of firearms and it most certainly justifies the action of certain mail order houses in abandoning the sale of firearms. That there should be similar action on the part of others is clearly set forth. But above even that the Dorchester case calls for the assumption on the part of the parents of that responsibility which should have denied that boy the possession of a firearm, to say nothing of using a loaded revolver in connection with such play.

There is a menace accruing from a boy and a revolver which cannot be disregarded. No one will suppose that the parents thought for a moment that it would mean the death of some other boy because their son had a revolver and cartridges, but that is just what they should have anticipated and taken steps to prevent. A deadly weapon should not be entrusted to a 14 year old boy engaged in play. It is in fact not a plaything and if it were impossible for him to get it through the mails it is possible that dead boy would be alive today. But the possibility exists through the exercise of such parental authority that no gun could have been ordered, or if it had been acquired in one of several ways it should have been disposed of by the parents in a manner that would have prevented any killing.

PLAYGROUND SEASON

For various reasons we entertain the belief that spring is not far away. We know from experience that there cannot be much more winter. The daytime is longer, the sun is higher and warmer and down in Washington the public playground season has been opened. This week outdoor sports are being played down there and it will not be long before they are in full swing up here.

In Washington there are 25 municipal playgrounds, 12 public school playgrounds and it is possible that there will be two more municipal grounds opened later on. This marks a decided change from a comparatively few years ago. It is not difficult to remember when playgrounds were few and far between. Today they are to be found in every city and rendering a most important service.

Conditions are such today that playgrounds are required as a matter of protection to the children. Never was there a time when it was so dangerous to play in the streets, and it was in the streets that those of other generations did much of their playing. Safety demands that children be kept out of the streets and, when that is done it is advisable that there be playgrounds with proper supervision.

The children have a right to feel that they are entitled to such provision. They should have a certain amount of play, that play should be properly directed and it is so much more preferable that the children should be thus engaged than to be involved in all kinds of mischief instead of wholesome games and recreation.

The large increase in the number of playgrounds throughout the country and to gain in attendance indicate all too clearly how well the playground movement is meeting the situation. They haven't served to eliminate the deaths of children in the streets, for children aren't in the playgrounds all the time, but they have done a great deal to such an end. But for them the child fatalities would unquestionably be much larger.

CURBING THE FAKIRS

Those who set out to get funds from which they hope to obtain a generous slice are not always careful to see that they represent the situation just as it is. Many are the times when individuals have found their names being used as endorsers of certain projects when they have as a matter of fact done nothing of the kind. Such cases are usually more than an annoyance. They some pretty close to getting money under false representation, and it is needless to say they arouse no little ill feeling on the part of the individuals whose names are used without authority, and sometimes against the person's convictions.

This state of affairs has gotten to the point where the only way of stopping it in New York state seems to be to enact a law which will make it necessary for those who make solicitations for charity to do so under an established authority which will be responsible for them. This will make it possible to check up on the campaigns about which so much criticism has been raised and should put an end to the misrepresentation that has been going on.

There is no reason to expect that those who are engaged in promoting campaigns that will not stand investigation will be enthusiastic over the proposed New York state law, but those who have been caught by the fake efforts, the misuse of names and questionable campaigns will welcome the steps that are being taken in their behalf. They should, in fact, give weighty support to the legislation that has been proposed. Such safeguards are prompted by experience. Repeated efforts to steam the horse justify the placing of a padlock on the door.

THE MEETING AT GENEVA

International interest will center next week in the meeting of the league of nations at Geneva. There are important matters to come up for consideration. Among them is the admission of Germany. Germany has applied and there is every reason to believe that its admission will be but a matter of form, although there has been much said about its seat in the league council being made dependent upon the extension of the same right to one or more other nations.

This is a matter which concerns the enlargement of the league council. Poland wants a seat therein and so do Spain and Brazil. The desire of Poland is backed by France but it is not indicated that France will insist upon it above everything else at the coming session. Whether the council is enlarged may be brought up at the league meeting but there is no certainty that it will be disposed of. Diplomacy may direct that it be delayed until a later meeting at which time it will be possible to deal with it in a better frame of mind.

There was nothing of course in the Locarno pacts which made provision for or considered the admission of Poland to the council. That has been raised since and it is a matter that will be kept alive until it is disposed of one way or the other. The mere fact that it is being sought prompts others to do likewise. The situation is thus one which deserves to be given more than cursory consideration, and it is such that could be obtained following study by a special committee. The General meeting will thus be watched with interest to see in what manner it disposes of this question. It is not a case where hasty action is called for and it doesn't appear that such will be taken.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Signs of spring will grow more and more numerous from now on.

With 65 town forests in Massachusetts the idea would seem to be decidedly popular in that state.

An additional mill for extra city appropriations isn't going to mean a reduction in city taxation.

Everyone is now watching to see where and how the lion is going to make his entrance in March.

The man on the corner says: A little more sunshine and a little less wind will call out the marbles and the tops.

A few more expeditions to the polar regions and the real estate operators will be abandoning Florida and following the crowd.

If you have struck the bottom of your coal bin you are in the class with most of the householders who are still using coal as fuel.

United States Attorney Buckner of New York says: "We must have either more enforcement or less law," but he doesn't say which it will be.

If education keeps pace with some other things, there are those who are confident that children 50 years from now will be born with a high school education.

Perhaps the coal dealers in New York who are stuck with $7,000,000 worth of bituminous coal and coke would get more consideration from the consumers had the dealers shown a bit of mercy during the period of high prices.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

At a meeting of the Alumni council of Amherst college, last November, President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth made the following remark: "Two college presidents of my acquaintance were discussing about a year ago the ideal makeup of a college, and one said he would like sometime to be the president of a college of undergraduates all of whom were orphans, in which he might be rid of interference from parents." Very likely the rank and file of people never think that parents may be, and often are, the source of great annoyance to college presidents. One type of parents believes that his peerless son has not been fairly dealt with; another feels that if the tutor or professor had used a little more patience his boy would have made a better showing. Not only in college but in all the schools of lower grade, teachers and school committees are pestered with this sort of nuisance.

Is there not another source from which criticism, or, if you please suggestion, comes that irritates our educational leaders? There are too many graduates who feel that they could run a college better than the president and corporation do. Here is an alumnus who has had a great career as head master of some preparatory school. He gets it into his cranium if the president of his Alma Mater would adopt some of his ways soon the college would swell into a university eclipsing anything now in existence. Another graduate has become a wizard in finance, he too feels that if the college was run on some different plan there would be money to burn. So it is the poor dean or president who is most of the time "between the devil and the deep sea." Serving constituencies as academic officials do it is not easy to see how they can get away from this boredom.

"And where we love is home:
Home that our feet may leave,
But not our hearts.
The chain may lengthen
But it never parts."

Thus Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote more than 60 years ago, and it is as true now as then. Such sentiment does not change with the passing of the years or even the centuries, because of the eternal in human hearts. Love—mutual love is the basis of the home life, and if this is wanting even a palace is only a mockery. The distance is as wide as heaven is from hell between a real home and a mere eating house or a lodging place. Boys and girls when they make homes for themselves may walk away from the old homestead but their hearts always remain. They may live a thousand miles from their youthful paradise but the "scenes of their childhood are dear to their hearts." Yes, the chain may lengthen to one half of the circumference of the earth, "but it never parts."

Probably there have never been two persons in the entire reach of the world's history who have lived exactly analogous lives. There may be many points of close similarity between them, and yet they are never identical. One person may recall another, but their lives always differ in some respects. No person has ever yet exactly duplicated another person. This is only another way of saying that no two persons are mentally or morally alike, simply because nature loathes uniformity. It is often remarked that no two persons look alike, and yet when seen apart may be easily confused. But when seen together their unlikeness is clearly apparent. Do we realize what an unattractive place this world would be if all people looked alike, or, if there were no differences in mind and heart? It is a well-known fact that the lower one goes into savagery the more nearly alike people are.

While it is true that unlikeness increases as we ascend in the scale of being, still there are some ancients who are strong reminders of some moderns. For an illustration of this fact take the career of King Asa who was the strongest, the best and who held the sceptre of Judah the longest of any of her monarchs. This king struck right out from the shoulder against the prevailing sin of the day. He saw clearly that it was idolatry that was sapping the warm, red blood of the nation. He also saw that if long continued such a struggle would be fatal to the national life. But Asa was big enough to see that he was up against a first class job, for the virus of a luxurious idolatry was seeping through every avenue of Jewish life. He knew that the nation could not exist one half for Jehovah and the other half for idols. Was this like another who said: The Union cannot be half slave and half free?

With resolution Asa set to work to rid the nation of the cancer that was eating at the nation's vitals. As a matter of course his drastic action was met with intense hatred and the most bitter opposition. Dull indeed must be the mind that cannot see a parallel here to an uncrowned king who put down a rebellion and emancipated millions of slaves! Probably no man who ever sat on the throne of Judah was hated and assailed with such persistent animosity as King Asa. And when death exchanged an earthly for the immortal crown, at the end of 41 years of truly imperial service, it was not a faction, but a nation, that did him homage. Does not that remind you of another man who was hated in both the north and the south, but with the clouds cleared away, and the noise of battle stilled, not America alone, but the civilized world pays him homage?

When men speak or write on any subject urged by prejudice or passion, their opinions are not entitled to as much respect as those who are disinterested. The following is what an eminent Australian has to say about our prohibition. He is an expert who was sent to this country to get a correct and unbiased view of the subject. He says: "I traveled 38,000 miles interviewing judges of various courts, chiefs of police, employers of labor, and labor leaders. I have visited jails, prisons, workhouses, houses of correction, and alcoholic institutions." He was busy 18 months in collecting his evidence. In this search for information no prohibition organization was approached. He was simply after an unbiased and unprejudiced account. For this reason the conclusion that he arrived at ought to be of value as to the real working of the Volstead act.

He heard all sorts of idle rumors as to the failure of the scheme. Much was told him about the overcrowded condition of alcoholic institutions. "There is another side to the story," he says. "I visited Dr. Neal of Los Angeles, who once owned 43 alcoholic institutions, and during the 12 years prior to prohibition 125,000 patients passed through these hospitals. But, according to his own words, he had been put out of business after two years of prohibition. In Dwight, Ill., I found that the famous Keely Cure building—the largest of its kind in the world—was sold to the U. S. government two years after prohibition. Dr. Keeley still operates in the same town, but a brick cottage is large enough for him these days. He once had 50 hospitals; today he has but 12, and they are not doing much business." It is evidence like this that carries weight.

THE ENGLISH THAMES: A LITTLE RIVER OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

The Thames, one of the best known streams in the world, went on a rampage recently and gave the residents of the usually peaceful valley sights familiar to those who live along such old hands at flooding as the Mississippi, the Seine and the Yellow river of China. Chicken coops and dog kennels, garden furniture and even bungalows swirled along where England's holiday crowds normally play on a gentle little river.

What the Thames is like ordinarily is told in a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The Thames seldom has very destructive floods," says the bulletin. "It has no mountains in its basin; only gentle hills, and the run-off is usually slow. It is rather a small river as rivers go, only 161 miles long with a drainage basin of about 5,000 square miles. The Danube is ten times, the Mississippi 16 times, and the Rhine more than four times as long. Beside the million and a quarter square miles drained by the Mississippi, or even the 75,000 square miles drained by the Rhine, the Thames basin seems almost insignificant.

Grows Quickly

"The birthplace of the Thames is only about 20 miles short of the sea on the western side of England, northeast of Bristol and Bath. A small spring formerly gushed up at what is known as 'Thames Head' and trickled in a lazy little rill down a meadow. The outflow of this head spring is now piped away to furnish water for the Thames and Severn canal. But springs abound in this region, and about half a mile down the meadow the infant Thames is to be seen in the shape of a little runnel fully two feet wide. Another half mile, and the Thames is a really respectable brook. Soon its first mill appears, one of the many that dot its banks. By the time Oxford is reached, thanks to many little affluents, the stream is 150 feet wide, well deserving the name, 'river.'

"The Thames flows through a country rich in historic associations and beautiful rural scenery. The oldest bridge across the stream, fifteen miles above Oxford, was built in the 13th century by monks of a near-by abbey. Paradoxically, it is named 'Newbridge.' Already some four centuries old, this structure was the scene of a skirmish in 1644 between Cromwell's forces and those of the Royalists. Not far below Newbridge is the only surviving ropeferry on the Thames.

Oxford on Banks of Thames

"At Oxford, still about 60 miles above London, one comes upon a little town known throughout the world, because of the men of note who have gone from there to shape the destinies of Great Britain. This has been England's great university town since the twelfth century. Traditions are cherished in Oxford, and equally so is architecture. Oxford's old but carefully preserved buildings give it a marked flavor of Medievalism. The waters of the Thames, nearly doubled in size at Oxford by the inflow of the Cherwell, have long been the scene of inter-collegiate rowing contests.

"The Thames has a series of a score and a half of locks, and though a rather small stream, except near London, carries a considerable traffic on barges. By use of the Thames and Severn canal it is possible for barges to go through to the west coast of England.

Flows Through English Playground

"From Oxford to London, and especially between Reading and Windsor, the Thames flows through some of the most beautiful country in England. This is to London what Long Island and Westchester are to New York. Mansions, palaces, country estates, parks, colleges and quaint little towns are strung along for mile after mile; while the river itself, here about 300 feet wide, adds, with its numerous bends and lazy flow, a beauty and dignity of its own. At Windsor, 25 miles above London, is the show palace of British royalty; and almost in sight of it down stream is the modest little meadow, — Runnymede—where the limited status of the British monarchy was fixed for all time when the Barons forced King John to sign Magna Carta.

"At ten to 15 miles above London the Thames begins to be colored by the great city. Factories have crept into the little towns along the stream; the delightful rural spell which has held away all along is broken. Tidewater comes to Teddington, 15 miles above London Bridge, but the stream does not take on the appearance of an estuary until the muddy banks are reached at the upper edge of London.

Lower Thames Bustles with Commerce

"Old London Bridge, because of its narrow arches and wide piers, was almost a dam. It retarded the flow of the tide and made the river at London in old days a dirty eye-sore. The present London Bridge and the dozen or more others do not obstruct the flow badly and the river is much cleaner. The appearance of the Thames in the city, too, has been greatly improved in recent decades by the building of extensive quays which have replaced the mud banks that were exposed when the tide was low.

"The estuary character of the Thames is apparent at London Bridge where the stream is 750 feet wide. It grows rapidly wider below London, and at Sheerness, 30 miles down, generally taken as the mouth, it is six miles wide. From London to its mouth the Thames is one of the world's greatest shipping centers. Quays line the shores and into both banks great basins and docks have been carved, where ships are endlessly loaded and unloaded. There is hardly a flag flown that cannot be seen at the masthead of some ship in a casual trip along the lower Thames."

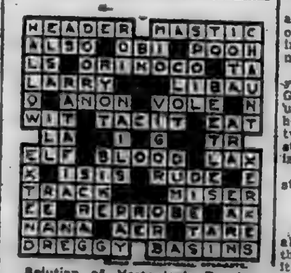
IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rt. Rev. James Edward Freeman, who declares modern social tendencies are bringing ruin to the United States, is a noted Episcopal clergyman who since 1923 has been bishop of the diocese of Washington, D. C. Prior to entry into the ministry he was in the legal department of the New York Central Railroad. One of the early events of his ministerial career was the founding at Yonkers, N. Y., of the Hollywood Inn, a workingmen's club, said to be the largest of its kind in the world. During the war Dr. Freeman department in its national camps throughout the country and in this capacity more than a million soldiers came to know him. He is the author of several books on sociological questions and also has done much special work in the departments of missions and social service of the Protestant Episcopal church.



Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ROXANNA'S LAST WORD

Mr. Editor: I am just gasping, being almost smothered in Mr. Poreda's "flood of words." But I still have one eye and one hand sticking out of the debris and like the "remain of the species" must have one last word before I expire.

Mr. Poreda, you have my number all wrong. I am not down on foreigners; far from it. I know several of them who are loyal American citizens and whom I am glad to call my friends, so that explodes that bomb. Those who would not be loyal in their own country would not be loyal here and are the ones we don't want. The others are welcome and well worthy of our respect and friendship.

As for political jobs, if I had considered them worth running after and quarreling over, and worth all the animosity and greediness which they seem to arouse I should not have alluded to them as "hard, green, puckery fruit." I should suppose any one could see that.

"A Citizen" seems to see things in a clear, sane manner and not through smoked glasses.

I think, Mr. Poreda, if you would do cross word puzzles you would find it much more fun than sticking pins into people just to see them squirm.

If you don't want to do that just keep right on raving and gnashing your teeth.

As for myself, I refuse to get angry over trifles. It is such a foolish and useless waste of energy and not worth the small amount of personal satisfaction which people with hair-trigger tempers seem to get out of it.

TESTING GOD'S WORD

There is one way of testing God's word that is infallible. Put it into practice. He offers to restore your soul. You are to take the divine prescription not merely to analyze it but to try it out. He that doeth the will of God shall know of the doctrine. You are not merely to ask, what is repentance? You are to repent, you are not merely to seek a definition of faith, you are to put your loving confidence in the son of God. Let this word enter your head in the pleading tones of Him who is the soul of the Bible saying, "Come unto me," and you shall take your places in the shining ranks of those who, here in the noise of battle and these amid the angelic throng, repeat with equal assurance the old acclaim, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul," and the reverent study of this book shall bind your soul unto Him who was the word made flesh, and in the life beyond the grave, with all the prophets and those who have kept the sayings of this book, they shall stand arrayed in white before Him who has prepared a home for those who have loved and served Him while here on earth.

Stories That Recall Others

Anxious to Begin Detecting

"I got $500 and I want to learn to be a detective," a youth frankly stated to a friend. "Where do I go to learn about it."

He misinterpreted the look of amazement that overspread the face of the person with whom he was talking. "Oh, I can get more if it takes more," he said.

Further inquiry disclosed that the youth came here three years ago from Germany and had not yet been naturalized. "I got my first papers out," he said and I will get the others in two years. What I want to do is to get started now so when I get naturalized I can begin detecting at once."

The youth was disillusioned but he still had his money when he departed.

A Primer History Story

Washington? Why, yes, he knew all about Washington, for hadn't he heard that name every time he went to visit his aunts, who live in the eastern part of that city? Again and again he heard that name from the lips of the grownups about him.

So, when February 21 arrived, his father promised him one grand frolic for the following day, as he would not have to go to work.

"Why won't you have to go to work tomorrow, daddy?" asked Eugene, age three.

"It's Washington's birthday," answered his father.

"East Washington?" inquired Eugene.

"No, George—George Washington," said father.

"Oh," said Eugene wisely, "and how many candles will he have on his birthday cake?"

From Small Beginnings

Henry Carey, the Schoolteacher's Son, Author of Sally in Our Alley

One day a London song writer was walking through the streets of London on a holiday. All the young laborers were out with their sweethearts. One couple of lovers happened to walk for some distance just ahead of Henry Carey, the song writer. With amusement he watched the awkward tenderness of the man, and the bashful coyness of the poorly clad girl. Through his mind there began to go the words of a song that should tell of this humble love:

Of all the days that's in the week,
I dearly love but one day,
And that's the day that comes betwixt
A Saturday and Monday;
For then I'm drest all in my best,
To walk abroad with Sally;
She is the darling of my heart,
And she lives in our alley.

When Henry Carey reached home after his holiday walk he sat down and wrote the now famous song, Sally In Our Alley. As soon as the words and music were made public the song became wonderfully popular. Everyone took it up and sang it, and even great statesmen, like Charles Incledon, established its fame by singing this simple song concerning humble love.

Henry Carey could well sympathize with the poor and the humble, for his own life had been somewhat of a struggle. In his boyhood his school teacher mother could give him little except a slight education. Seeing that her son had a taste for music she managed to give him training enough so that he could teach beginners something about music. Henry Carey was not contented with knowing a little, and he used part of his earnings to pay for instruction from the best masters. After some years he began to write both words and music for songs, burlesques and operas. He had a great gift of humor and of satire, and if he had lived in our day would have been the writer of innumerable comic operas. Both as a song writer and as a burlesque writer he became very popular. He had an intense hatred of sham and hypocrisy of every kind and he used his rifle of writing and of play-producing to ridicule all that was false and affected. In 1740, three years before his death, he sang a new version of an old song, and thus did for God Save the King what Robert Burns did for Auld Lang Syne. In this sense Henry Carey was the author of God Save the King, the national British anthem.

Value of Insulin

That the continual use of insulin may really cure and not just relay diabetes by storing the overstrained glands a long rest is the opinion of D. F. G. Banting, who first extracted insulin from the pancreatic glands of animals and made it available for use by diabetic patients.

"Regardless of the severity of the disease," said Dr. Banting, "all patients may now be maintained in near tree. Since this is possible, it is to be strongly advised that for we have abundant evidence that three to a recuperation of the islet cells of the pancreatic glands when the strain thrown upon them by high blood sugar is relieved sufficiently so that insulin cases the carbohydrate tolerance has no longer necessary."

Clarifies Move Against Dry Law

Rev. Dr. James Empringham, who a few days ago created such a furore, when he made a stand for the modification of the Volstead Act. He has now come out with a statement defending the Church Temperance Society's stand for the modification and has explained the work of the Health Education Society and its clinic. He is the national secretary of the society.

BELL HAD FIRST PHONE TALK HALF CENTURY AGO

BOSTON, March 5 (AP)—"Watson come here! I want you."

It was not Sherlock Holmes speaking, but Alexander Graham Bell delivering the first telephone message ever heard. And he got the right number, partly because there were no others to be had.

It was 50 years ago tomorrow that a patent was granted for the instrument which was looked upon as amusing and interesting, but a "worthless" toy. That original instrument, made in Boston in a dingy electrical shop, now has some 27,000,000 descendants in the world, 17,000,000 of which are connected with virtually every village and hamlet in the United States.

Electricians of the time were trying to develop the telegraph and Bell, who was interested, passed many hours in the dingy little electrical shop on Court street where Watson worked. The two became close friends and Watson was taken into the inventor's confidence.

There followed months of toil. There was hope increasing hope, then failure. Ultimately there was a partial success. It was in June 2, 1875, that Bell made his first fundamental discovery, quite by accident. Watson let a spring slip while the two were adjusting instruments at each end of a copper wire stringing between two rooms in the shop. The spring touch the sensitive wire. Bell heard a humming sound, perhaps not unlike those sometimes heard on a stormy night, and he knew success was near.

A few weeks later Bell and Watson moved their apparatus to two rooms on the top floor of an inexpensive boarding house. On March 10, 1876, three days after they had been granted their patent for an "improved telegraph" Watson heard the faint and scarcely audible voice of Professor Bell calling him over the wire.

But the telephone was far from a success so far as its usefulness was concerned. When exhibited at the Philadelphia centennial exposition it generally was conceded a failure. But the astonishment of the emperor of Brazil encouraged Bell to go on. Dom Pedro, a visitor at the exposition, placed the receiver to his ear and exclaimed in astonishment, "It speaks!" By fall of that year a line was successfully operated between Boston and Cambridge, a distance of two miles.

Local scientists then became interested and Bell was invited to demonstrate his instrument at Essex Institute of Salem. It was at this demonstration that Henry M. Batchelder, still a resident of Salem, as a newspaper reporter, telephoned the first news ever sent over the telephone to the Boston Globe. Mr. Batchelder now is a bank president in Salem.

Bell and Watson then continued to raise money for further experiments by charging 25 and 50 cents for admission to similar demonstrations. A month after the Salem call Bell talked to New York from Boston over a telegraph wire lent to him for the occasion.

Finally, three banking houses agreed to give the instruments a trial and after a few weeks found them a success. An advertising circular was issued calling attention to the fact that anyone could use the instrument, and that, "though the sound is audible and the articulation seems to be indistinct, after a few trials the ear becomes accustomed to the peculiar sound and finds little difficulty in understanding the words."

SURVEY SHOWS 16,500,000 CARS IN USE AT END OF LAST YEAR

CLEVELAND, March 5. (AP)—There were 542 passenger cars in use in the country last year for each 1,000 adult white males, it was disclosed in a survey made by Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economist, and vice-president of the Cleveland Trust company. The number of these machines in use at the end of 1925 was found to be 16,500,000.

Col. Ayres said there was nothing to indicate an approaching saturation point for passenger automobiles in the United States. The proportion of cars on the foregoing basis ranged from 400 in the middle Atlantic group of states to nearly 800 in the Pacific states.

English Parliamentary Tobacco Smoke

On the report of the finance bill in the British house of commons, F. A. Morris moved the reduction of the tobacco duties. He said the tobacco taxes were the source of the largest revenue from indirect taxation, but the total amount was diminishing year by year because of the high rate of taxation. Tobacco was almost a necessity, as the prime minister must realise. His pipe was a great help to him in directing the affairs of the nation. (Laughter and cheers.) The smoker was contributing more than his fair share of indirect taxation, while the tobacco manufacturers were making huge fortunes out of him.

R. H. Morris seconded, remarking that the revenue had fallen from 61 millions in 1920 to 52 millions last year.

W. Guinness said the proposal to reduce the standard rate of duty on unmanufactured tobacco from 3s 3d to 3s 6d would involve a loss of revenue of eight millions in a full year and six millions in the current year. The consumption of tobacco in this country, which was 93 million pounds weight in 1913, was 128 million pounds weight last year, despite the exclusion of Ireland. The tobacco duty had kept up its splendid record as a revenue producer. The beer duty had been lowered, but the loss from the reduction had not been recouped; in fact, the consumption of beer had gone down greatly. (Hear, hear.) The consumption of tobacco, however, was on the up grade.

Lady Astor was horrified that the great liberal party should bring forward a proposal to encourage smoking. Everyone knew there was a great deal too much smoking already. This new attitude on the part of the liberal party distressed her greatly.

Major Hore Belisha pointed out that it was largely to Plymouth and the Elizabethans that they owed the use of tobacco. It would have distressed Sir Walter Raleigh to think that in discovering Virginia he was going to produce so strong an opponent to tobacco as Lady Astor. (Laughter.)

The clause was rejected by 272 to 116.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Charles Morgan Coit.

(An Appreciation.)

It is with sorrow that friends have learned of the death of Mrs. Charles Morgan Coit, who passed away at her home on Broadway in the night of March 4.

All those who recall Mary Hillhard, in her youth and beauty, will remember how devoted she was to her home, her church, and the community. In the days of the Civil war, her home was with her uncle, Augustus Brewster, who was then the president of the Norwich & Worcester railroad. Besides being a loving home-maker for Mr Brewster, she was most active in her work in behalf of the soldiers, and also as a teacher in the infant class of the Second Congregational church where she was greatly beloved by the scholars of the Sunday school, one of the pronounced characteristics of her long life being her devoted love for little children.

The writer was one of the scholars in her infant class, and with tenderness, wishes to bear testimony to Mrs. Coit's love for her work and how, in after years, her memories fondly rehearsed those early days.

Her friends will never forget her activities during the strenuous and forceful days of the Civil war. This useful life she continued until failing health and home cares compelled her to relinquish her outside work but she never, however, lost touch with the community and always gave of her remaining strength and vitality, in words and deeds whenever possible. Mrs. Coit's garden was a thing of great joy to her and its profusion of blossoms and beauty she shared with all her neighbors and friends and she took delight, after and anon, to call in to her garden the passing child that she might give him a nosegay of bloom to make him more merry on his way. Her love for her friends was of enduring strength and all who knew Mrs Coit recall the loving thought given to the memory of her young husband who so tragically lost his life, and to the rearing and education of the two young sons who grew to manhood to bless her afterwards.

It is a great consolation to her family and friends to know that the passing of her spirit was without pain but in the tranquil peace of her perfect faith, love and understanding.

CLEVELAND TO BE SCENE OF MANY LIQUOR TRIALS

CLEVELAND, O., March 5.—(AP)—Evidences of illicit "rum ring" activities uncovered here in the last four weeks by the federal grand jury investigation of an alleged nation-wide bootleg alcohol conspiracy, will furnish courts with liquor trials for many months to come, the district attorney's office believes.

The grand jury recessed this afternoon until next Thursday. Quick action on a two hundred page indictment, naming one hundred persons in twelve cities and citing one hundred overt acts, is expected by District Attorney A. E. Bernstein upon reconvening of the investigators.

All of the evidence unearthed in the investigation can be amalgamated into the one big conspiracy indictment, the assistants working on the document declare, but from time to time, the leads that have been uncovered will be followed up and additional indictments will be sought.

The indictment will affect persons living in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, San Jose, Pittsburgh, New York and Providence, Bernstein has declared.

If a cooper can't make a barrel of cider he can at least have a starving ... Chase.

PROPOSING TO HAVE REGULATION OF ELECTRICAL WIRING IN THIS CITY

Two score electrical contractors and journeymen, assembled in meeting Friday evening at the chamber of commerce rooms, Thayer building, after a lengthy discussion, voted unanimously that a committee of contractors and journeymen be named to confer with a committee appointed by the gas and electrical commission for the purpose of presenting to the court of common council a recommendation that an inspector of electric wiring be appointed by the city.

The meeting, the second held by the electrical contractors and journeymen, was called to order by Robert McNeely, secretary of the building trades of Norwich, who served as chairman. Mr. McNeely stated that about a month ago a meeting had been held for the purpose of considering the appointment of an electrical inspector for Norwich. A meeting of this sort was arranged for tonight, said Mr. McNeely, and the object of the meeting will reveal itself during the discussion. For a long time a number of people have been dissatisfied with old and new wiring in buildings throughout Norwich. There has been an improvement but conditions are not what they should be here in Norwich. Mr. McNeely then presented John J. O'Rourke, secretary of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, who he said would explain what the chamber is doing toward securing a new building code for Norwich.

Mr. O'Rourke stated that the chamber has had a committee at work on the revision of the building code for some months. The present code, he said, was adopted in 1898 and in the minds of many it is time it was revised. The revision of the local code is being based on the national code. It is a tedious job and a long job to prepare the proposed code. When the proposed code is ready, it is proposed to call in the contractors and journeymen for their approval and for whatever suggestions they have to offer after which the code will be brought to the attention of the court of common council, which will probably be within four or five weeks.

Charles W. Taggart, general manager of the local gas and electric department, was then presented by Mr. McNeely. You know what our feelings are on this matter, said Mr. Taggart, Nearly a year ago we prepared an ordinance which we were going to ask the court of common council to put into effect, he said. When the matter of the general ordinance was started up we laid off the electric ordinance as we felt the general ordinance will give us a better result. In conclusion Mr. Taggart said: If you want this ordinance you have got to get back of it.

Mr. Taggart then introduced H. L. Sawyer, district chief of the New England Insurance Exchange, Boston, who gave an interesting and instructive talk on the electrical inspector and his duties. Mr. Sawyer explained the workings of the exchange which he represents. When we are called in we make a thorough investigation of electrical equipment in the city. Then we notify property owners of defects in the equipment and give them 30 days, sometimes 60 days in which to correct these defects. Then we come in again for a second investigation and again notify those who have not complied with the previous request.

In Massachusetts, New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport and other cities the electrical contractors have to undergo an examination for a license for which they pay $25. Then they have to get a permit for any work they do and for this permit they pay one dollar. Mr. Sawyer said that in his opinion, Norwich really needs an inspector. He showed how the inspector's position would be self-supporting through the fees paid for permits. Asked as to how often the code is revised Mr. Sawyer said that the New York board goes over the code every two years.

Mr. O'Rourke raised the question as to whether or not Norwich could support three inspectors, one for plumbing, one for building and one for wiring. Mr Sawyer said it would be pretty difficult to get a man to handle all three positions.

Asked as to how much salary a wiring inspector should be paid, Mr. Sawyer said that the inspector would probably get between $1,500 to $1,800 to start with. Some cities pay as high as $2,500. Mr. Sawyer said there is a general tendency in New England for wiring inspectors. A city with an inspector secures a better rating with the insurance companies, the contractors are better satisfied, the property owners are better satisfied and the fire department feels safe, as far as fires from electrical causes are concerned.

Mr. Sawyer answered a number of questions as to different kinds of wiring in buildings after which Mr. McNeely asked what action the meeting wished to take.

A motion prevailed that the chair and Mr. Taggart name a committee from the electrical contractors and journeymen of Norwich to meet with a committee named by the gas and electrical commission to formulate a plan for the appointment of an electrical inspector and to present the plan to the court of common council for their action. The meeting adjourned about 9:30 o'clock.

The dinner was excellently served under the direction of a committee comprising Miss Barbara F. Allen, chairman, Mrs. Howarth L. Collins, Mrs. Webster D. Copp, Mrs. Frank H. Crowell, Miss Ruth Loring, Miss Fern Broadhurst, Mrs. Lyle H. Fillmore, Mrs. Douglass and Mrs. Beatrice Peterson. The waitresses were Mrs Harry Rushworth, who was in charge of the dining room, the Misses Helen Tirrell, Harriet Geer, Allen Sayles, Margaret Sayles, Janet Blackman, and Helen Risley. The guardians of Camp Fire are Mrs. Louis H. Walden, Mrs. Benedict C. Pullen, Mrs. Webster D. Copp, and Mrs. Wesley C. Pullen, assistant. The flowers on the tables were donated by Scott the florist.

Camp Fires from the United Congregational church and Taftville joined with the Park church Camp Fires for the meeting after the dinner, the three different groups marching into the parlors and being seated in a circle at the front, where a brief ceremonial was conducted which was of much interest to the audience, under the direction of Mrs. Walden there were songs and the lighting of the three candles of work, health and love.

Following this Miss Brown was presented by Mrs. Walden, responding with an earnest and inspiring talk along Camp Fire lines. She described the extensive development of Camp Fire activities in Seattle where there are 3,000 girls enrolled and she encouraged the girls to strive with hope of success for the honors and the rewards of Camp Fire by giving them the slogan, "It's wanting the thing hard enough and keeping at it long enough." She told the girls that there was great value in their group activities, but the most important is the influence upon the individual girl.

The three Camp Fire groups listened with the closest attention and profited greatly by the interesting talk.

MAYOR DENVER DECLARES CHICAGO IS NOT HELPLESS

CHICAGO, March 5.—(AP)—Mayor Denver today redoubled and backed with proof obtained in person" his denial of charges made in Washington by the Chicago Better Government association that the city lies helpless before a criminal alliance of politicians and public officials.

"I know because I have investigated," the mayor said. He issued a statement announcing that in company with Corporation Counsel Francis X. Bush, the executive secretary of the association of commerce and the deputy superintendent of police he yesterday visited five breweries alleged to be in illicit operation.

"The charge is definite and specific that these breweries are in full operation now and are delivering their product as the result of a conspiracy with and under the protection of the city police," the mayor's statement said.

"We found that three of the five breweries have not been operating for eighteen months to two years. The vats were empty. All that fine, expensive machinery has gone to rack and ruin.

"Now they want a special grand jury or an investigation by congress. All they want it for is political effect at the primary. I won't join them. Chicago needs no outside help to take care of its criminal situation, which incidentally, I do not believe is any worse than that of any other city of the United States."

HOTEL "BEAT" TRAILED BY STOLEN CAKE OF SOAP

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Elbert R. Barton was astute enough to hold mining engineering jobs in Mexico and South America but he made a technical error when he took cakes of soap from hotels he left without paying his bills.

Traced by the soap he was brought to trial here and today was sentenced to an intermediate term in the penitentiary for defrauding the Hotel Roosevelt, where he posed as a coast guard officer.

Probation officers told the general sessions court that Barton was a deserter from the coast guard and that he owed bills at the Hotel Vanderbilt, the Mayflower and Raleigh hotels in Washington and the Mohican hotel in New London, Conn.

Barton said he lived in Kansas City, Mo., and that he had a wife and child traveling in Europe.

FIERCE GALES THE LENGTH AND BREADTH OF FRANCE

PARIS, March 5.—(AP)—Fierce gales, roaring the length and breadth of France and accompanied by snow in some places, have come with the advent of the month of March. Even the usually favored southern points, such as Nimes and Montpelier are suffering.

The English channel and the Mediterranean have been lashed to fury forcing fishing boats to remain in port. The harbors are covered with storm-bound shipping.

BORDEAUX RESUMES PLACE IN HEADLINES

Bordeaux, the French seaport, was in favorable news last month, although nothing connected with war was in the dispatch. The Bordeaux stock exchange, one of France's sentimental nerves, was completely destroyed by fire.

The English can be threatened from the north or the east, however, and Bordeaux would doubtless resume its old place in the headlines suggests Bulletin from the Washington D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "During the Franco-Prussian war, when the enemy occupied Paris and again during the early days of the World War, before the Germans had been stopped in their initial rush on the French capital the machinery of government was hastily transferred to the great commercial city on the left bank of the Gironde. At the time of the French Revolution, too, the Girondists used Bordeaux as their chief headquarters.

"Geography is Bordeaux's trump card, not only in time of war but in time of peace as well. Although it is separated from the sea by 60 miles of river that provides adequate docking facilities for ships of deep draught for vessels of many draft. A tidal bore periodically sweeps across the channel, would block entrance and air and land defenses. In the southwestern part of France, the city has prospered almost undisturbed since it first came into prominence as the capital of Aquitaine Secunda in the Romans.

"Bordeaux, however, cannot be regarded only as a governmental purse-fitter. It is a thriving commercial city, the fourth in population in France, and has a foreign trade exceeded among French ports only by Marseilles and Le Havre. With the province of Burgundy to the eastern part of the country, the port's hinterland of France, among other things, the hurried stock crossings of Chateau, on the Rhone call it land-locked, the middle of the 18th century.

"Bordeaux is nearer to terra incognita to the average tourist. None of the large trans-Atlantic lines stop North America terminates here. Although there are many smaller companies, especially those connecting France with South America. Nor is it on any heavily travelled route to other parts of Europe. Bordeaux cannot benefit by waste traffic, as can Marseilles, Nice or Lyons. Travelers to Spain and to the shore resorts around Barritz generally pass through the city without stopping.

"The American doughboy, however knows Bordeaux. When the United States went into the World War the railroads in the northern part of France were greatly overworked and choked with traffic. The northern ports, too, were menaced by the submarine. From Brest southward conditions were better. Brest, St. Nazaire, Nantes, Bordeaux and Bayonne thus sprang suddenly into front-page headlines of American newspapers.

"Docking facilities, even at Bordeaux, were rather poor at that time. It was necessary for American engineers virtually to reconstruct some of the ports. In the spring of 1917 only two large ships could berth for unloading at the same time in Bordeaux, but a year later there were places for fifteen vessels. Basseens, a small village six miles down the Garonne from Bordeaux, was given fine docks and warehouses. A great deal of the supplies and ammunition of the A. E. F. were landed here. Bordeaux was one of the few French cities to benefit by the war.

"Despite the fact that it is largely a commercial city, Bordeaux is in many respects very attractive. The main part of the city curves around the left bank of the Garonne River, which at this point describes a wide semi-circle. Low white houses take the place of the tenements so characteristic of other French cities, while the public buildings are grouped in the center of the city along public gardens, or line the imposing quays of the waterfront. The whole city is surrounded by a circle of boulevards.

"The Cathedral of St. Andre, started in the 11th century, is considered one of the best proportioned Gothic churches in southern France. The Pont de Bordeaux, one of the bridges connecting the city with the right bank of the Garonne, was long considered among the finest in the world. Many of the magnificent private homes of the city were built when the great merchants of Bordeaux were at the height of their wealth and power, and are comparatively modern.

"Around Bordeaux are smiling hills and fresh valleys, covered with vineyards. The wines they produce have made the district famous, and have sent the names of Medoc, Graves, Sauternes, St. Emilion, etc., around the world. Near-by also is the little town of Cognac, which has lent its name to the most potent of French liquids. It is the center of the brandy trade of the district. South of Bordeaux stretch great pine forests and regions of waving grass, like those of our southern Atlantic states."

Westerly High Wins

At Champlin hall on Main street, Westerly, on Friday afternoon the Westerly high school basketball team defeated the Stonington high school basketball team by the score of 18 to 10.

The west is expected to garner the majority of the National A. A. U. senior track and field titles at the annual indoor championship meet which is to be held in Chicago on the night of March 6.

AGGIES CLOSE BASKETBALL AT STORRS TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, March 5—The Connecticut Aggie basketball season will be brough tto a close here tomorrow night, when Rhode Island state will be met in the last of a two-game series. Preliminary to the varsity contest, tahere will be a game between the co-ed and freshman fives of the two institutions.

Tomorrow's contest will be the last college court game for Captain Makofskie, Allard and Bitgood, all of whom are slated to graduate in June.

A week ago Connecticut lost to Rhode Island at Kingston by a 38-27 score in a game that furnished one of the surprising upsets of the season for New England college basketball. Connecticut had won nine of eleven contests defeating Harvard, Tufts, New Hampshire, and, Mass. Aggies among other strong teams. Rhode Island's season had been none too successful, and few conceded the Engineers any chance to trip the Aggies. They did just that, however, giving the Storrs five its third setback of the season.

All of which means tomorrow's game comes to the Connecticut five as an opportunity for redemption. After last Saturday's defeat, the Aggies must gain a decisive victory tomorrow to satisfy their followers. Connecticut showed good form against Trinity Wednesday night, and a repetition of that form against Rhode Island should put the Aggies on the long end of the final score.

LARGE FIELD OF COLLEGE STARS TO COMPETE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—Approximately 350 athletic stars representing 21 eastern colleges and universities will test their speed and brawn in the annual intercollegiate indoor track and field championships tomorrow night at the 102nd engineers armory.

National champions, Olympic stars and record-holders are among the competitors who will seek nine individual titles, in addition to which three relay crowns will be at stake.

Georgetown university, with a majority of its 1925 championship team available, will enter the meet a strong favorite to retain the team title. The Hilltoppers, however, are expected to face strong opposition, particularly from Harvard, which has a well-balanced array.

Pennsylvania, which was held the indoor title twice, also has a capable squad, while Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Penn States, Dartmouth, Boston college and Holy Cross are expected to exhibit strength.

Georgetown's hopes [illegible] pinned chiefly on Emerson Norton and [illegible] Dowding, winners of the high [illegible] broad jumps, respectively last year, along with Ray Hass Tony Plansky, Jimmy Burgess and Vernon Asuher. Harvard also has two of last year's champions in her squad. Al Miller in the 70-yard dash and Willard Tibbetts in the two-mile run. Both are favored to retain their titles.

PENN CONSIDERING BOOSTING PRICE OF FOOTBALL TICKETS

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Alumni and football fans generally throughout the eastern gridiron sector will not have to "dig deeper" to witness college games next fall as a sequel to the increase in prices, fixed for the "Big Three" contests among Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

This was indicated today in a survey of leading eastern colleges and universities by the Associated Press following the decision of the "Big Three" to raise from $3 to $5 the cost of admission to persons outside the "university communities".

The University of Pennsylvania is considering a general increase in its ticket prices for next season, this inquiry disclosed, but such institutions as Cornell, West Virginia, Brown, Dartmouth and Columbia do not contemplate taking similar action.

BROWN PUBLICATION COMMENT ON TICKET RAISING

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 5—(AP)—Commenting on the action of Harvard, Yale and Princeton in raising the price of football tickets for alumni from $3 to $5, the Brown Daily Herald of Brown university will say tomorrow morning:

"Now comes a blow that adroitly puts to flight the false hopes we fostered for the future of athletics."

The editorial follows:

"Commercialism, over-emphasis, stadiamania—football, a contributory cause to the existence of American universities, labored under the constant application of these terms but a few months ago, and then undergraduates at Harvard, originators of much that is worthy in American academic life, gave the public cause to hope that football would be restored to its rightful place. The standards of values in university life were to be set aright by direct action from Cambridge.

This table, prepared at the treasury department, reveals the taxes which will be paid by the largest classes of taxpayers during the calendar year, with the first payment beginning March 15, 1926.

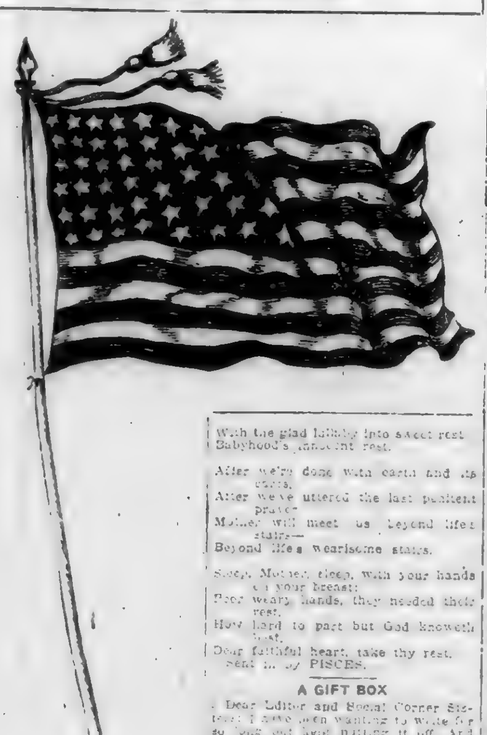
The taxes above were computed on the basis of allowing only personal exemption and credits for dependents on "earned income," such as the $1,500 allowed single persons and $3,500 allowed married persons, or the head of a family, with additional $400 for each dependent. Other exemptions, such as taxes, interest on indebtedness, contributions to church and philanthropic agencies, were not included.

All persons having an earned net income of $5,000, or under, should make returns to the deputy collector of internal revenue, Norwich, or the collector at Hartford, on form 1040A, while persons with earned incomes of more than $5,000 should make returns on form 1040.

A single person having a net income of $1,500 and a married person having a net income of $3,500 must file a return, regardless of whether a tax is due.

16th ANNIVERSARY OF THE SOCIAL CORNER

GREATNESS COMES TO THOSE WHO SEEK TO OVERCOME OBSTACLES



With the glad lullaby into sweet rest
Babyhood's innocent fear.

After we're done with earth and its cares,
After we've uttered the last penitent prayer,
Mother will meet us beyond life's stairs—
Beyond life's wearisome stairs.

Sleep, Mother, sleep, with your hands on your breast;
Poor weary hands, they needed their rest.
How hard to part but God knoweth best,
Dear faithful heart, take thy rest.
Send it, my PISCES.

A GIFT BOX

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have been wanting to write for so long but kept putting it off. And now I'm here to tell you that I have been sick with the grip in the worst form I ever had. This week I am up and around but very weak. So I hope that some of the sisters will be as sick as I have been. I thought of Club No. 5 yesterday and wished I had been with them the same as I was last year. I hope you all had a good time.

Black Eyed Susie: Did you look for me?

If I had gone I would have called for you. I want to thank a Social Corner Member who sent me such a lovely calendar. I have it on my desk and I like to look at those lovely birches.

Now sisters I must tell you what I was doing before I was sick. I have been making a gift box. I took a little old trunk that my father used to have and covered the inside with some bright wall paper. And then I made a few gifts that I had seen around Christmas time and I have made batting for four handkerchiefs and when I see something pretty and useful I buy it and put it in my box so the way I will have some gifts ready all the year round and when Christmas comes it will not take me so long to do my shopping.

Rural Arctic: I am sorry you have had such a cold sir. I think you have a good idea about having a meeting in Danielson. Come someone else report one. I will close with best wishes to all.

ROSY POSY.

MOSQUITOES IN WINTER

Dear Corner Sisters: I will try and get in a few lines for our anniversary. I don't seem to have anything of interest to write about. I see in the editorial notes where they don't hear much about mosquitoes this time of year. Well I for one can say they have been in my house all winter. I never saw so many. There are usually more or less, but this winter they have been around a lot this time. Think goodness they don't bite, for now and then they will sing and when one is hungry they are hungry. Anyone that lives or has been known to be noted for mosquitoes. Take it in the summer, after a rain just at night. Oh, Boy! There are no words to describe and you will realize how far short I am.

To those that have been studying heavenly signs wonder if they have to foot it side walk to keep clear every time it seems to say nothing about the rest of the moths. It makes beautiful curls in the starlight. I say, I want to thank the social corner Member for my dear calendar.

Miss Kit: How are you? Have you got to court that letter yet? I bet you have. Don't be too shocking or as children say.

ANN Z.

GREETINGS FROM JOAN

Dear Social Corner Editor: I thought I would like to take a minute from my busy seven days Saturday evening and Sunday morning to send a few lines to the Social Corner. I have been very busy lately and have not had time to write before. I have been sewing on carpet rags and have made a number of rugs. I have also been busy with my sewing machine. I have made a number of dresses for myself and my little girl. I have also been busy with my knitting. I have knitted a number of sweaters and caps for my little girl. I have also been busy with my crocheting. I have crocheted a number of yokes for my dresses. I have also been busy with my cooking. I have made a number of cakes and pies and cookies. I have also been busy with my housework. I have washed and ironed and cleaned and scrubbed and baked and cooked and mended and darned and knitted and crocheted and sewed and ironed and wash

NEW LONDON MOTHER IS FOUND DEAD IN BED BY HER DAUGHTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 6 —Mrs. Mary Joseph died as she slept this morning for when her daughter entered her room at the family home, 613 Main street, she found the lifeless body of the woman, who had been stricken with apoplexy during the early morning hours and had expired. Mrs. Joseph is survived by three daughters, Misses Belle, Mary and Annie Joseph.

Mrs. Joseph was about, attending to her household duties throughout yesterday and last evening and retired about 10 o'clock apparently in good health for she had not been attended by a physician and neither had she been in a complaining mood. About 8 o'clock this morning when Mrs. Joseph failed to put in an appearance about the house, Miss Belle Joseph went to her mother's room and attempted to rouse her and discovered that Mrs. Joseph was dead. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman was notified and after having visited the Joseph residence and conducted an investigation he stated that death had been caused by apoplexy.

LETTER CARRIER WINTHROP COLLAPSES ON GREEN STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 6—Letter Carrier Henry Winthrop, the oldest carrier of mail in the service of the local post office, collapsed on Green street, corner of Pearl street, this forenoon when in an attempt to carry out his duties in mail delivery Winthrop has been subject to high blood pressure for several years and it was one of several attacks that he has experienced the past year that caused his collapse today. He was taken in charge of by pedestrians and post office officials were notified. The latter had Winthrop taken to his home on Hope street, where he was attended by a physician.

Evidence of fire ravage is to be seen on the principal streets of this city, though the damages were not what might be called great. The building on State street where the Bellevue restaurant and Christopherson's confectionery store were located is in course of repair and the Kane property on lower Bank street is also being remodelled, after fire destroyed a considerable portion of it. Now the Gorden and Sulman building, partially burned this afternoon will be repaired.

Miss Esther Grover of 168 Willetts avenue; Orris Norman, Mystic; Mrs Egita Powers, 350 Bank street, and Edward Mclauth, a member of the crew of the United States Coast Guard destroyer, Mojave, state pier, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed today.

Mary E. Jones has sold a house and lot and an adjoining building lot, corner of Sherman and Sharap streets to Agostino Minucci. The price paid was $15,500.

The funeral of Frederick G. Noon, New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad freight train conductor, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, 15 Culver street and was attended by many mourners, including a large representation of railroad employes. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. The bearers were members of the Order of Railway Conductors. The body, accompanied by mourners and associate members of Mr. Noon, was forwarded by special train, which left at 3 o'clock from the union station, to Lyme, former home of Mr. Noon.

Edward Cornelius Murphy, 23, son of the late Edward and Nora Murphy, died last night at the residence of his aunt, Mrs. Patrick Walsh, 320 Jefferson avenue, after an illness of many months with tuberculosis. He is survived by a brother, Charles Murphy. Mr. Murphy was a graduate of the class of 1923, Bulkeley High school and until his health became impaired, was employed at the office of the Robert Gair company, Montville.

It is a bit strange that drivers do not get the provisions of the traffic ordinances of the city into their heads and thus avoid arrest for violation of the parking rules. Max Ragovin told Judge Prince today that he had been a driver in this city several years, yet he was found with his junk team parked on the north side of Church street in restricted territory. He admitted he had been there a long time before he was found by a police officer. The claim of Max was that he was not aware that an ordinance prohibited leaving a team on the side of the street. Judge Prince suspended judgment, but he warned Max so that he may not anticipate any leniency if he offends again.

Olef Dietrich, a sailor from the United states ship Mojave was presented for operating an automobile without having a license to do so. It turned out that Dietrich never had a license, but that he was moving the car around as an accommodation for Dewey Davis, also a sailor, and the owner of the car. Dietrich was to obtain and deliver mail for the ship and in doing so stopped his car opposite the police station. There was something about his method in handling the car that attracted the attention of Sergeant Hick and then the facts came to light. Judgment was suspended in this case, as the circumstances did not appear to warrant the imposition of a penalty.

New London has gotten rid of the two females who were taken into custody yesterday by Officer Denham. They were given opportunity to leave town and took advantage of their chance to escape a term at the State Farm for Women. The police are of the opinion that they can clean out some of the undesirable residents of this city and they are to make an attempt to do it.

Today has been one of the coldest of the winter. The temperature this morning got down to 8 degrees above zero and it hovered close to that mark throughout the day. The wind was from the northeast, so that the Groton shore was fringed with ice as far as could be seen. Icemen can get another crop if they so desire, for all the ponds and lakes are frozen over.

The engagement of Miss Dorothy S. Hand, of West street, to Albert Cross, Framingham, Mass., formerly of New London, was made at a bridge party last evening at the residence of Miss Ruth Fogwell, 19 Bayonet street. Mr. Cross is employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and is a graduate of Yale. Miss Hand is a graduate from Williams Memorial institute and for several years has been employed in a clerical capacity by the National Bank of Commerce.

Still another continuance was granted late this afternoon in the Waterford town court when Frederick Barrett, manager of the Rotisserie Inn, Waterford, was arraigned on a charge of bigamy, the continuance being until the 15th inst., and was granted by Judge Frederick N. Dimmock upon request of counsel for the accused. The continuance is the third that has been granted by the court since Barrett was arrested nearly a month ago. Barrett furnished a surety on his bond of $1,600 for his appearance a week from next Monday afternoon.

There is no change tonight in the condition of Simon Hess, Hotel Mohican apartment, who has been in a critical condition at Home Memorial hospital for 10 days. The patient still remains on the danger list.

Stanley Goldsmith has returned to his apartment at the Hotel Mohican after having spent a fortnight at Pinehurst, S. C.

Miss Grace A. McGrath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. McGrath, 428 Williams street, and employed as stenographer at the Capitol theater is a patient at a Hartford hospital, where she underwent an operation this week. Because of Miss McGrath's condition only her parents are permitted to visit her.

The New London police this evening received a request from the New Haven authorities to be on the lookout for an Essex coach, which was stolen from the latter city earlier in the day. The machine bears registration of Massachusetts issue, 235884.

A grass fire occurred late this afternoon when youths set fire to decayed grass and underbrush on the Hislop plot, off Fitch avenue. Because of a strong wind the grass burned rapidly and residents of that avenue became alarmed for fear that the blaze would cause structures to be ignited and damaged. The police were notified and Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman William Graham went to the scene of the fire, but before the officers reached there, the boys had extinguished the fire.

The authorities of Milford, Conn., are seeking the whereabouts of Mrs. Elizabeth Civillio, who disappeared from her home Feb. 22nd, accompanied by her three children, Raymond, aged 11; Thomas, 10, and Rosie, 13. It is believed that the woman and her children may come to this city, and a request has been made of the New London police to apprehend her if she puts in an appearance.

Patrick Connelly, 55, whose home is in Milford, Conn., but who has resided in New London and vicinity several years, and who has a long police court record for intoxication, was arrested again this afternoon by Patrolman John Courtney on a like charge. Connelly was at the State street bus station making a nuisance of himself. When searched at the police station Connelly had a flask containing bay rum, which he had been diluting and drinking. The bay rum contained 51 per cent. alcohol.

It is claimed that Bank street has more vacant stores than any street in the city.

Guiseppi Martinelli gave a concert at the armory this evening before a very large audience. He appeared under the auspices of the Connecticut college music department and his numbers were so delightfully rendered that he is sure to have a place in the attractions that are booked for next season. Miss Greenfield, a soprano, was associated with Mr. Martinelli in the program this evening.

Now that the city council is making an investigation of the sewer leads of Mohegan avenue and the vicinity adjacent thereto and that the project of sewering Coleman and Outer Broad street and that vicinity has been practically abandoned there is little heard of the "serving need" of the sewers and the menace to health that was said to exist a few weeks ago. It is claimed that property owners have come to realize that sewers are to cost a very large sum on Mohegan avenue and that fact has lessened the demand very materially.

Arlando Martino, a patient at Home Memorial hospital a short time, was able to return to his home in Waterford this afternoon.

BANK STREET BUILDING DAMAGED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 6—A fire occurred this afternoon that for awhile gave indication of assuming serious proportions, when the three story wooden and brick structure at Nos. 342-348 Bank street, owned by Sulman and Gordon and occupied for commercial and residence purposes, was attacked by flames. The fire was confined to the upper part of the structure and where it originated from a defective chimney and where practically all of the damage resulted. The loss, it is believed will not exceed 2,000.

The building is occupied on the ground floor by the Atlantic restaurant and by the Mohegan Auto Accessory store and the upper floors are occupied as residences by Charles H. Totten and Mrs. Mary Ross.

The fire was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock when clouds of smoke were issuing from the roof and a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters resulting in Chief Charles Rose and the Niagara Engine company and Allen Hook and Ladder company responding. By the time that the firemen reached the building, the flames had broke through the roof close to the chimney and it was then that an alarm was sent in from Box 32, in front of the Allen Hook and Ladder company's house. With the arrival of the additional fire companies the flames were attacked with lines of chemicals, but the fire had entered between partitions and rafters and it became necessary to stretch two lines of hose to the roof and upper floor of the building in order to extinguish the blaze. After a half hour's work the fire was subdued but not until a large section of the roof and a part of the upper building had been burned and also damaged by water used to combat the fire.

The origin of the fire is believed to have been through a defective chimney, which had become clogged with soot and which caught fire and resulted in the fire being communicated to the woodwork surrounding the chimney.

Palace Theatre

If there ever was a show that is one hundred per cent entertainment that will please one hundred per cent of the audience it is at the Palace today. Every act on the bill is a big timer and Harry Hicky Levan is making his audiences howl at every performance. His mugging sets youngsters and adults in spasms. Buddy Walker Williams who travels all by his lonesome goes out and does enough for a whole vaudeville bill. The audience just couldn't seem to get enough of him last night. The Casson Bros. and Marie are a treat to the eyes along with being exceptionally clever dancers with a routine that is novel and new. Russel and Hayes are the surprise of the season. Tripping out on to the stage like a pair of swing card dance men they go through a set of seemingly impossible tricks that keeps the audience gasping. The Oxford Four close the show and send the audience out looking for the manager to tell him what a great bill the whole program is, even down to the picture which by the way is one of the best things we have seen Jack Holt in for some time. It's called the Enchanted Hill. The next to the finals of the Kiddies Charleston will be held this afternoon. The finals in the adult class will be given Monday night.

Picturegoers, who visit the Palace theatre next week to see Paramount's sumptuous comedy-spectacle, "The American Venus", are certain to find the feminine members of the cast quite soothing to the eye. Not only are the principal players plentifully endowed with good looks, but the supporting cast includes seven of the prize-winning beauties in the Atlantic City Bathing Revue.

The woman's side of this spectacular story by Townsend Martin is acted by Esther Ralston, the fetching blonde screen star; Louise Brooks, a diminutive brunette charmer from Ziegfeld's Follies; and Fay Lamphier, who was designated the most beautiful girl in America at the Atlantic City bathing beauty contest, and was awarded the title of "Miss America."

To this array, the Misses Bronx, Newark, San Francisco, Bay Ridge, Birmingham and Seattle, all leading contestants in the recent seashore frolic, add their charm, grace and shapeliness.

In addition to the bathing beauty show the picture boasts a magnificent fashion display in which some of New York's loveliest mannequins wear the latest models before the camera. This fashion show as well as the series of artistic tableaux, which is another lavish feature of the production, were filmed in color.

Broadway Today

Today's three performances marks the conclusion of the finest combination entertainment seen in this city in many a moon. The performance is continuous from 2 till 10:30.

Musical Mack offers a unique novelty.

Johnson & Johnson in "The Cabin Boy and the Steward", is laughable and enjoyable.

Baker & Fry have a real comedy offering in "Sarcasms."

Webb & Hall, two Italian character comedians, not only are funny, but offer instrumental and vocal entertainment.

"Cleverness and Clumsiness" by Bob and Lucy Gillette features the world's greatest woman juggler and real pantomimic comedy.

"Don't flirt with married men—no matter how innocent the pastime may be." This is the lesson, very hilariously expounded, that is taught in "The Teaser," Universal's rollicking new comedy romance starring Laura La Plante with Pat O'Malley in the leading male role and now playing at the Broadway theatre. It is a rapid fire tale of tributions that surround a flapper who draws the fires of an angry lover and a group of jealous wives. Hedda Hopper, Wyndham Standing, Walter McGrail, Vivian Oakland and a large cast of well-known artists appear in the new offering.

Broadway Theatre

The Broadway management has arranged for Sunday the finest two feature attraction ever seen in the state.

A woman of iron against a girl of steel; a strong willed, hide-bound Puritan in mortal strife with the young wife of her weak-willed son. This is the situation dealt with in the Universal-Jewel production, "Seige," from the famous novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, which comes to the Broadway theater Sunday, is the main feature.

The battle eternal—between the young wife and her husband's relatives, who are bent on ruling her home and her very existence; this epic struggle for the right to life and liberty forms a tremendous drama, gripping in the extreme, with a climax that is thrilling beyond words in the screen version directed by Svend Gade, the noted Danish director, referred to by many critics as the greatest drama of the year.

Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien are co-starred in this production, in which Miss Alden plays a distinguished characterization in the role of "Aunt Augusta," dominant and cruel, whose unyielding will clashes with the unyielding personality of the clear-eyed girl of today.

If you like exciting melodrama, the Broadway theatre promises all the excitement you can stand when it shows "The Pay-Off" for Sunday only as the second feature. It is a Lackaye-Kibbee picture that deals with payroll bandits. The cast includes Dorothy Drew, Otis Harlan and Robert McKim. Del Henderson directed.

A revival of Charlie Chaplin's greatest comedy is also scheduled. Come and laugh with him in "Caught in a Cabaret." A new Kinograms completes the extraordinary program.

Watch for Monday's announcement for local talent show.

Breed Theater

For the first time in the history of motion pictures the picture-goers have exercised their rights and created a star without the consent of a film producer.

Norma Shearer, who has risen from the extra ranks, is the star of the picturegoers.

Many other picture stars are worthy of stardom and the public has granted recognition because their artistry was approved, but it was Mr. and Mrs. Public, alone, who elevated Norma Shearer to stardom and regarded her as a great star long before Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced she had been granted all the rights and prerogatives which go with this classification.

Exhibitors from all classes of towns, ranging from New York city to Podunk, have found that Miss Shearer's name outside a theater invariably draws the picture-goer to the box office. Recognizing that the public has certain rights with its film favorites, Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, has announced that from now on Miss Shearer will be seen only in starring roles.

She will appear Sunday at the Breed theater in The Tower of Lies, in which she shares honors with Lon Chaney, also a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star. The picture is a screen adaptation of Selma Lagerof's prize-winning Swedish novel, The Emperor of Portugallia, and was adapted for film purposes by Agnes Christine Johnston.

Under her contract with Louis B. Mayer, Miss Shearer has played the featured feminine roles in many pictures.

Protect Fruit Trees

A few days ago the writer received an "S. O. S." call from a fruit grower who said the rabbits were already beginning to damage his young fruit trees. Several other cases of girdling young trees by mice have also been observed this fall.

Most of these calls, however, usually come in the spring after the mice and rabbits have taken their toll of fruit trees. It is then a question of doing everything possible to save the trees from death. It is much easier, more satisfactory and cheaper to prevent the injury from taking place than it is to try to save the trees after the girdling has occurred.

Young fruit trees are in danger as soon as the cold weather has destroyed the green vegetation upon which the mice and rabbits feed. One rabbit can girdle a dozen trees in a day unless precautions are taken to prevent it. Rabbits usually attack trees from one to six or eight years of age. Mice injure trees of any age although the young trees are given preference.

There are various means of protection which the fruit grower can use but the most important are: (1) Clearing away the dead grass and trash which have accumulated about the base of the tree trunks and mounding with dirt; (2) applying repellant paints and washes to the trunks; (3) placing mechanical protectors about the trees; (4) killing the mice by means of poison; (5) pruning the trees (at least partially, in the fall and leaving the prunings on the ground until spring.—W. H. Darrow.

DON'T ABUSE YOUR EYES

The best eye in the world can easily be made the reverse by persistent strain and abuse.

Your eyes may be normal, or nearly so—and probably are—but the safe and wise course is to know, not guess, and you can only know by having an occasional examination.

Why neglect so important a matter as the condition of your eyes? Have them examined NOW.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Two fires and the trial of a $10,000 damage suit against the city of Norwich were the outstanding happenings in this city 50 years ago this week. The fires occurred at the barn and lumber shop of N. S. Gilbert & Sons and in a tenement house on Broadway. The damage suit was an action brought against the city by the Thames River Worsted company to recover damages to their stock caused by the overflow of the Franklin street brook. Items taken from the files of The Bulletin of February-March 1876 are as follows:

Monday, February 28, 1876 — An alarm was struck from box 25, at the corner of Franklin and Chestnut streets Saturday night by order of the chief engineer to give the firemen a short run. The department responded promptly and in accordance with orders.

A barn owned by Elisha Kellogg, in Colchester, was set on fire by sparks from a passing locomotive Thursday afternoon and was entirely consumed together with 14 tons of hay. This is the first fire from such a cause in the history of the place.

A very pleasant entertainment was given on Saturday evening at the residence of the Misses Meeker on Washington street, by the young ladies who are there at school. The exercises consisted of a French play in which the pure accent and pronunciation of the pupils showed most decidedly the thorough instruction they have had in the French language. Music and readings of compositions varied the programme.

Tuesday, February 29, 1876 — On Sunday evenings during the Lenten season the Rev. Dr. Olney at Christ church will preach a series of sermons on the Lord's prayer. The seats in the church will be free to all. There will also be services in the church Thursday evenings the same as Sunday evenings.

Mr. George Davis of the firm of C. D. Noyes and company, has in his possession two Mexican silver pieces coined in 1717 and 1718, both of which are in excellent state of preservation.

The ladies of the East Main street M. E. church will give a social in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon and evening, with a New England supper.

The members of Independence Hose company had a very pleasant dance in Steiner's hall last night.

Wednesday, March 1, 1876—A suit demanding $10,000 damages brought by the Thames River Worsted company against the city of Norwich, is now on trial in the court house before the Hon. O. S. Seymour and the Hon. William C. Crump, as a committee appointed by the superior court to try the case.

The suit is brought to recover damages to the stock of wool, yarn, etc., by water on the night of August 9th, 1874, caused by the overflow of the Franklin street brook into the premises of the plaintiff. It is claimed that the city had unlawfully used this brook as a part of a general drainage system and had constructed sewers in various streets in the city, conducting into the brook, by means of which large quantities of water were gathered up, together with the contents of sinks and cesspools, were discharged into the brook above the plaintiff's premises, and that no sufficient or proper means were taken for its proper discharge below the plaintiffs premises, thereby causing the damage.

About half past two o'clock yesterday morning Lieut. Gordon and Officer Button discovered a fire in the barn and lumber shop of N. S. Gilbert & Sons, on Chestnut street. An alarm was struck from box 32, at the city hall and a few moments later a general alarm was struck. The barn and store house were entirely consumed with their contents.

One of the largest and pleasantest of the Silber Gard's masquerades was held in Steiner's hall last night. The floor was covered with masks in all sorts of costumes who enjoyed themselves as our German friends know how to do.

Thursday, March 2, 1876—A light snow storm began early last evening and continued until after midnight. The prospect at the latter hour for sleighing was good, though the sun is now so high that the snow cannot last long. There has really been only one day of good sleighing this winter.

At a meeting of the Provident association last evening it was voted to appeal to the ladies of Norwich in behalf of the association, confident that they will ever prove ministering angels when suffering and sorrow implore their relief. The ladies and gentlemen of the committee of the Otis library entertainments are therefore earnestly invited to meet at the mayor's office on Monday, the 6th inst. at four p. m. to devise ways for the support of the association.

A train on the Northern road ran into a cow the other day. It didn't hurt the cow but it threw the engine off the track. People accustomed to the beefsteak furnished in the boarding houses of this section, express much surprise at the slight damage done to the train.

Friday, March 3, 1876—A curious looking bird was found on the Trestow bridge yesterday morning. Some thought it was a hen hawk and others an eagle but it was finally concluded that it was an ornament dropped from a lady's bonnet.

The engine invented by W. T. Chamberlain of this city in 1868, being in use on some of the western roads, Mr. Chamberlain has taken action to recover damages for infringement of his patent.

The officers and directors of the New London county agricultural society held their first meeting for this season yesterday, and made partial arrangements for the coming fair exhibition. The meeting was adjourned two weeks for the purpose of appointing judges in the several classes and numbers.

Saturday, March 4, 1876—At a quarter past nine last evening an alarm was struck from box 32, at the city hall, caused by the burning of a small shed in the rear of the tenement house on Broadway next the church. The flames shot high up in the air and gave the appearance of a big fire but the department gathered promptly and in four minutes after the alarm was given the fire was out. The damage was very slight.

Major Manning of this city, a veteran of the war of 1812, says that the winter of 1818-19 was very much like the present one until March when severe cold set in and on the 27th there was two feet of snow on the ground.

The case of the Thames Worsted company against the city was continued yesterday before Judges Crump and Seymour. The evidence was closed and the arguments postponed for two weeks, to which time the court adjourned.

REAPPOINTMENT FOR BRUNDAGE AS 4-H SCHOOL DIRECTOR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, March 5—A. J. Brundage, state leader in 4-H club work, has been reappointed director of the international 4-H leader training school, which is held each year in connection with the Eastern States exposition at Springfield, according to the announcement here today. Further announcement was also made to the effect that Horace A. Moses of Mittineague, Mass., had given $4,000 to continue and expand the training school, which he founded in 1923.

This will be Mr. Brundage's fourth appointment as director, he being the first to hold the position when the school was established four years ago. As director, he will have full charge in the planning of courses and all administrative work in connection with the project. Assisting him will be faculty members from nearby agricultural colleges, particularly Connecticut and Massachusetts Agricultural colleges.

Dates for the 1926 school are from Sept. 13-25 inclusive. Invitations will be extended to a boy and a girl former club members, from each of the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Oklahoma, Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. Moses, the founder of the international 4-H leader training school, is a successful business man and president of the Strathmore Paper Co., of Mittineague, Mass. Himself a farm boy, he in later years became much interested in 4-H club work for young people in rural communities, and strongly supported it. His purpose in starting the leader training school was to fit some of the old club members for leadership in 4-H club work. This, he believed, would provide club work with an inspired leadership.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

In this week's Catholic Transcript (Hartford) Rev. Felix J. O'Neill, pastor of St. Edward's church, Stafford Springs, has a clever verse entitled "The Bad Nickel," setting forth the sentiment of the man who laments that he cannot pass the coin on a trolley car, that it is useless for the movies, would not buy so much as a glass of ginger ale—"So I'll drop it in the basket, if I ever go to church." It is always claimed that clergymen get to own the biggest collection of plugged and spurious coins, gravy buttons, etc., etc., of any citizens in the community.

If a woman didn't have a better opinion of a man than he deserves she would never fall in love with him.

There are now in Norwich council about 1,000 boys who are anxious to receive the benefits of the scout program and troops are being reorganized and new troops built up as fast as leaders can be secured. There is a need for men to act as scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters for the troops. In the troops themselves the patrol system is being organized, which is a great aid to the scoutmaster who can use the older boys of his troop to a greater degree than before.

To keep the troops in closer touch with the organizations which they represent, active troop committees composed of, three or more men for each troop are being set up.

To keep the troops of the council that are outside the city in closer touch with scout headquarters and council activities a district organization is being developed, the council being divided into geographical districts, with a deputy commissioner at the head of each. This district organization will serve to intensify scouting in those parts of the council which are ten or more miles away from the city.

To the many types of civic services which the troops have taken an active part, such as clean up week, fire prevention week and civic good turns, have been added forest and bird conservation and an annual toy repair. Toy repair work has successfully been carried out in other councils and has been the means of making many children happy at Christmas time, who otherwise would not be reached by Santa. The Scouts of Norwich will repair this year more than 300 toys which will be distributed amongst the needy children of the city.

A drive will soon be made by the local troops to clean Norwich of the nests of the last caterpillars which are a menace to all fruit trees. For older boy's work the organization of a sea scout committee is being carried on by Frederick B. Craven, who is laying plans for an active sea scout troop composed of older scouts who have met the requirements of the sea scout program and who in addition have been first class scouts with a certain number of merit badges.

Scout Executive Bielefield has recently completed the standardization of the local council records and a thorough check-up has been made and the books audited by Frank J. Royce.

In inter-council activity, Norwich council will take an active and major part. Thirty scouts will attend the patrol leaders pow-wow, an intensive course in outdoor activity, to be held on the twenty-first, twenty-second and twenty-third of May. The scout executive is also on a committee to arrange for a scout leaders conference, which is held annually and will be held this year at Middletown, and at which two thousand scout leaders from Connecticut will be present.

The scouts are always willing to help in any community work, and any civic organization wishing the help of scouts can receive it by telephoning to or calling at scout headquarters, Shannon building.

OBSTINATE DRIVERS SHOW THEIR CHILDISH TRAITS

The recent deep snows throughout Connecticut resulted in the receipt by the state vehicle department of a unique class of complaints, some of which are still arriving there.

In many parts of the state, the drifts were so high that a path wide enough for only one car to pass at a time was provided. When cars going in opposite directions met in such paths, trouble frequently arose, judging from the complaints received at the capitol, and an obstinate driver or two blocked all traffic.

One driver on reaching the crest of a hill met another just coming over the top of it. The one headed down the hill refused to back up a short distance into a turnout and insisted on the other one backing all the way down the grade. An argument ensued and the uphill driver was asked to show his operator's license. He not only complied, but passed over the license for inspection and the other driver, who happened to be a woman declined to rel se it until the non-pulsed uphill driver had backed down the hill and let her pass. Under the circumstances he had to choose between standing still or operating without a license and decided to commit a technical violation of the law to get out of his difficulty.

On another road, one man in his car reached a turnout in the heavy snows and took a position which he considered allowed space enough in which traffic coming in the opposite direction could pass. The driver of the second car of the opposite line decided that the space was not sufficient, although another car had just passed. He demanded of the driver of the waiting car why he had not backed up a bit.

"I said it was none of their business," wrote this driver to the motor vehicle department. "With that they got into their car and blocked the highway and said 'Now you will either back up or stall where you are.' I said, I had the time and would stay there until Doom's Day; and shut off my motor. They did likewise but evidently got tired of waiting after ten minutes and then started up their car and drove by me without any trouble whatsoever. What I want to know is this: Can a party block the highways of a state through meanness and spite without getting punished for it? My time is valuable and I cannot afford to waste it just because some one wants to be obstinate and mean."

Such actions are childish, but they actually occur among grownups. They are to a great degree outside of the operation of the law as they fall into the class of emergency cases that ought to be solved in the most reasonable and convenient manner, or a basis of mutual consideration. They are cited in this article merely to emphasize the need of a spirit of accommodation in dealing with unusual conditions.

Bowser the Hound Is Afraid

When unknown danger happens near,
I feel no shame in showing fear.
—Bowser the Hound.

Perhaps you don't agree with Bowser, but there is considerable wisdom in that saying of his, nevertheless. If one is afraid of something there is reason to be afraid of there is no shame in admitting that fear. Bowser the Hound was on his way with his master, Farmer Brown's Boy, to the sugar house over in the Green Forest. Bowser dearly loves to go over in the Green Forest, but he isn't at ease outside the city in closer touch with his master is with him. So when this morning at daylight Farmer Brown's Boy called to Bowser he was so tickled he wiggled all over. He knew where they were going. He knew that they were going to the sugar house. There was only one thing he didn't understand, and that was why Farmer Brown's Boy was carrying a gun. He had hitched Old Dobbin to a sled and on this he stood as he drove, Bowser running along beside and occasionally jumping up at Old Dobbin's nose.

"Sic him, Bowser!" said he. "Go, get him!"

Farmer Brown's Boy was thinking of how sure he had been the night before that Puma the Panther had been following him. No, in daylight and after a good night's sleep, he wasn't so sure. So when they had entered the Green Forest Farmer Brown's Boy tied Old Dobbin to a tree and then went into the woods a short distance on the right-hand side of the road. He was looking for footprints. Not finding any there, he went on the left side of the road. Almost at once he found what he was looking for. He found prints like those of Black Pussy the Cat, but many times bigger.

"It wasn't imagination!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "I was followed. Puma the Panther was following alongside the road, but back among the trees, where I couldn't see him. If he tries that again I'll be ready for him. "Here Bowser! Come here sir! Come here and tell me what you think of these tracks."

Wagging his tail, Bowser ran over to where Farmer Brown's Boy stood. Farmer Brown's Boy pointed down at the tracks in the snow. "Sic him, Bowser!" said he. "Go, get him!" Bowser took a long sniff. His tail stopped wagging. Instead of wagging, it went down between his legs. Turning, Bowser sneaked out to the road his tail between his legs. He said just as plainly as if he could talk, "I am afraid."

Farmer Brown's Boy was not altogether surprised. It simply confirmed his belief that those were the footprints of Puma the Panther. He went back to the sled, untied Dobbin and started on. Bowser kept close to the sled for a short distance. Then he began running ahead. He seemed to have forgotten his recent fear. By and by he went over in among the young hemlocks quite a little distance ahead of the sled.

Farmer Brown's Boy saw Bowser disappear and thought nothing of it. But a moment later out of those young hemlocks came Bowser, running as fast as he could, his tail between his legs and his eyes rolled back, as if he were trying to watch behind him as he ran. He jumped up on the sled beside his master, and trembling as if shaking with the cold, whimpering and whining. He was a perfect picture of fear.

Just then Old Dobbin snorted and plunged forward. For a few minutes Farmer Brown's Boy had his hands full. At last he got Old Dobbin quieted.

"That Panther was back in that hemlock thicket!" said Farmer Brown's Boy as he drove into the clearing where the sugar house was. Bowser made straight for the sugar house, and for a while he couldn't be persuaded to come out again.

Short Romances of Every Day Life

The Infallible Formula

By Hazel Courtney

KATE TRESCOTT was "all in" to such a degree that "The Very Tired Girl" of the story was by comparison as fresh as a daisy. She was also "hard up" to such an extent that instead of going for a de luxe eclair she stopped in a nearer place for a glass of buttermilk. She felt she looked so old and homely that it would be little short of a calamity if she ran across anybody who knew her, especially—well, yes, especially Roger Beck.

Ugh! How she disliked that sour glassful; but if it was the best nourishment for the least money—Perhaps now she would mind the sultriness of the day less; that was rather a sickening whiff off the perfumery bottles, though, and here at the cosmetic counter was a crowd which she must skirt in order to get to an exit. What were those women gaping at? Such a drab, dreary lot of frights as they were—Heavens! That was her own face she had seen in a mirror!

Miss Trescott found herself hemmed in by the fast increasing group and also pushed to the front of it. Ah! That was what they were so frantic to see—a clerk displaying the efficacy of her wares by dolling herself up with them.

"You can take it from me, ladies, these articles are all as advertised. I'm 40 years old and I have a family to support. I got to looking so woebegone that I knew no one would hire me unless I helped nature out a bit; and ever since I tried this (on went a layer of cold cream) I have felt it is not the end of a perfect day if I haven't told some sister how she can, in ten minutes, look ten years younger. Watch me!" Whereupon a sifting of powder was followed by a suspicion of rouge.

Murmurs of admiration began to be heard from the crowd.

"And don't forget your eyebrows, ladies; make them arched as I am making mine—very light touch, remember. If you have a pencil like this you will not blunder as my friend did one Sunday morning.

"She thought her face hadn't any expression, and so she tried to add some, but in her haste she caught up an indelible pencil, with the result that she appeared in church with purple eyebrows.

"Oh—and use a lipstick, of course. You can borrow your daughter's? There!" And she turned away from the mirror before which she had been standing while she worked, and bowed gayly as the women broke into applause and laughter.

"Who else wants to be prettied up? I will make up somebody free of charge. You have good possibilities—good features—" She gazed straight at Kate Trescott, and K. T., Katee, as her intimates called her, walked right into the hands of the convincing demonstrator.

Twenty minutes later there stepped out of the store's side door a young lady, who paused as if a trifle dazed, then rapidly walked up Beacon street, glancing neither to right nor left.

But one of the city's rising physicians, Dr. Beck, striding along on the other side to his office, looked across and looked again, and ejaculated to himself:

"Well, I'd forgotten what a peach that girl is!"

And in about half an hour's time the telephone rang in the State House department where she was substituting for a week, and a voice asked for Miss Trescott.

Oh, that's you, isn't it? Don't you bow to your friends any more? Oh, yes, you did; but I don't wonder that a blooming young lady cut a wilted old medic. What do you say to cooling off by going down the harbor? Round trip—just stay on deck and get a breath of air. I know a place where they put up first rate lunches to take out, and I'll buy some on my way to the car. Meet me at the subway entrance by quarter of five? Good, K. T.!"

For Kate, who had wondered how she could bear for hours the inspection of a doctor's keen eyes, had ended by accepting the invitation delightedly, and by going out and buying herself a yard of something in which to mask herself.

All the world and his wife were probably Fording that hot, late afternoon, for the steamboat carried comparatively few passengers, and Dr. Beck and Miss Trescott had the breezy bow to themselves. She had to stand considerable chaffing as to her persistence in being a veiled lady.

"What's the good of seeing that fine sunset darkly?" Dr. Roger teased; though, if I had a complexion like yours, I'd, save it," he ended gallantly; and Kate felt herself blushing guiltily through her war paint.

"You cannot eat through those meshes, though," he declared later, when he produced the lunch boxes, tapping them as he remarked: "I have the requisite calories here, and we can get frills like candy and drinks on board."

But Kate no longer felt reluctance in baring her face, for the great yellow disk rising in the sky was shedding that glamor which every woman knows is favorable to her looks; and though much has changed in this old world, moonlight and a maid still have their sure-enough influence upon a man.

Therefore it is not strange the vote was unanimous which was passed by the couple as they tossed their last crumbs overboard for the gulls: "Resolved, if there is anything that beats a banquet, it is a picnic."

Also, was it natural that when the outing was nearly over, Kate should exclaim:

"What a good time we've had! What a good time!" and that Roger Beck should reply, "We'll do it again tomorrow. I want to see some more of you, and then some, little Katee; Katee; yes, please?"

Up in her boarding house room again, she snapped on the light and hurried to the glass; the face which looked back at her still sparkled and glowed.

"Oh, a 'good-looker,' no doubt," she laughed rather hysterically to herself. "He would not have telephoned that invitation if I hadn't been metamorphosed into one—that's sure, sure, sure! But is a lark any less a lark when got under false pretences? Heigho! tomorrow I return to my pale and wan condition. Now to get off my make-up. My! but these are fast colors that demonstrator put on me."

At last they yielded to soap and water, but scarcely before Kate had herself succumbed to sleep; for the heat of the day was over, a sea-turn had followed excursionists in from the harbor, and a good night's rest was being vouchsafed to everybody in Boston.

Miss Trescott rather hated to wake into full consciousness the next morning.

"It's much pleasanter to lie here and think of myself as an alluring young lady. Time's up, though!"

But the mirror, even in the bright light, held no terrors. That was a bonny lassie in there—it certainly was; eyes shining, no sagging lines, a happy expression, roses in her cheeks—"genuine ones, too," murmured Kate, rubbing her finger over them.

"But how, in the name of all that's lucky, so I happen to look attractive still? I know," she twinkled, "I have always heard that love works wonders in one's appearance; but wouldn't Roger Beck be mystified and horrified if I spoke of him as a beauty doctor? Thanks be! There will be no need of wearing a veil tonight."

Which was fortunate, considering what happened. You know strained ones are pretty poor variety. And seeing that we are on the subject of Kate and kisses, we may as well dismiss her case by stating that from this last chapter of pretty girlhood she went right on to being the mighty good-looking wife of the most successful of Boston's younger practitioners.

Want the formula? It was French originally, and is very ancient:

"Les levres qui se baissent souvent ne vieilleont pas:"

"Lips which are kissed often do not grow old."

"You raised your hat to that girl who passed. You don't know her, do you?"

"No, but my brother does, and this is his hat."

"Don't you like a man with enterprise about him, Miss Pert?"

"Some kind of enterprise. I certainly like one with some get-up-and-go about him."

The Shadow of Suspicion

By Joella Johnson

FOR several days Louise Gilbert, the newlywed Mrs. Thomas Maitland, had been distrait. And it had all come about so quickly, and unexpectedly, well—Louise, herself, just couldn't tell how.

Louise had been married only three weeks when she conceived the notion that her matrimonial venture had been a grave mistake. At any rate, situations came about that had cast a gloom of disappointment over her expectant happiness as Tom's young wife, and these situations had led her to a distrust of her husband's affections for her.

Now, Louise was not altogether observing; nevertheless, she sometimes fancied that periods of moodiness possessed her husband, and she noted that whenever these periods occurred, there always had resulted a tendency to spend his evenings apart from her, somewhere, away from home. But the situations had grown so acute, had plunged her into such utter loneliness, that she began to reason with herself concerning it, and out of her reasonings an investigation was made that had brought about the climax, or rather, the starting point of her abstraction, namely, the discovery of a letter in her husband's pocket written in a feminine hand.

To Louise, the presence of the letter itself was a trivial thing for, as confidential clerk in the counting house of John Gilbert, her father, Tom had handled scores of like communications for private investigation, but in this instance the familiarity of the writer in addressing her husband "My Darling Boy" had made her furious. There was some mention of money in the letter that Louise did not understand, and a reference to a certain 10 o'clock train that was mystifying. The letter was signed with the single initial "E."

Of course, Louise was determined that Tom would explain all when he came home for luncheon. But noontime came and he did not appear.

All that afternoon Louise nursed an aching head. It grew worse when, at 3 o'clock, her husband was still absent. When 9 o'clock came, Louise arose from the couch on which she had been lying, and paced the floor of her room in nervous agitation. She was puzzling her tired brain what to do when the telephone rang.

"Mr. Maitland's residence?"

It was a woman who was calling, and in the tenseness of the situation Louise was not quite sure of the message. It was an urgent call, a request for Mr. Maitland's presence immediately, a prearranged meeting with her for that evening, at 9 o'clock.

She cut off quickly.

Louise weakened. Her thoughts ran wildly and she fancied all sorts of things. She even pictured to herself the bold headlines of the daily press, shrieking her name among the central figures in a divorce scandal—a disgraceful aftermath, she thought, to an ostentatious wedding ceremony.

She wondered what her dearest friend, Ella, would say, when she read the account in the newspapers. She would have done better, she thought, if she had married Mort Chandler. The latter was a trusty clerk in her father's employ, and had once proposed to her.

Suddenly it occurred to her that her husband had quietly disappeared from the house that morning, had left without his accustomed "good-by" kiss. She recalled that someone had said that Tom had married her for her money, that he was not sincere

Why couldn't she have seen it before? It was plain to her now. Tom was a deceiver!

The sound of voices in the street caused her to draw near the window and pull the curtains aside. People were rushing toward the railroad station. Something unusual had happened. She raised the window and the remark of a passerby caused her to shrink back in alarm:

"He was caught with the goods. The police are on their way now."

Louise closed the window quickly, and hurriedly dressed herself. If Tom had been arrested, why had they not notified her before this? After all, her place was at her husband's side.

As she stepped out into the evening air she felt revived and her courage returned to her.

A crowd had assembled at the depot. A man and a woman, pale and mournful-looking, were the central figures in the crowd. When Louise looked, she stood aghast. Ella and Mort were in the custody of two plain-clothes men. Louise did not understand. There must be some mistake. It was her husband who was the guilty one.

She tried to reach the officers to explain, but the train pulled into the depot and the surging crowd pressed her back. She weakened as she watched the prisoners and officers get aboard. A white-haired man strode quickly across the tracks to a group of citizens standing near her.

"It was a clever piece of work, Tom," he said, extending his hand to a young man who stood with his back to her. In her excitement Louise had not observed her husband, though he stood within reaching distance of her. He looked tired, but he took Mr. Gilbert's hand warmly.

Louise drew apart from the dispersing crowd, and caught up with her husband on the way home. She took his cold hand in her own and together they walked in silence.

"It's been one exciting day," he finally broke out.

Louise didn't tell him how exciting it had been for her. She feared her husband was ill, and revealed her anxiety.

"Why, Tom, you're cold. Where's your coat?" she asked.

"I let Chandler have it," he replied. "I wore his home by mistake last night and forgot to wear it back to the office this morning."

Louise was beginning to understand.

"Poor Chandler. He had been stealing from the safe for some time. Johnson's Detective Agency had taken the affair over and had done excellent work to get them before they connected by boat for South America in the morning. I had promised Mrs. Johnson to assist her more ably, but I was detained by a peculiar situation. I tried to keep the affair from you, Louise, because of your friendship with Ella."

But Louise was not thinking of that just then. She was revelling in a new-found happiness in her husband.

"I've missed you so much, today, dear," she whispered.

"Your Friend Wheeler is a crank on punctuality, isn't he?" said Smith.

"I should say he is," replied Brown. "Why, he even carries his watch in the hip pocket of his trousers to prevent his ever being behind time."

At Two A. M.

By Clyde Weldon

UILA found it on the hall floor. She picked it up before she turned off the light. Marie had, no doubt, left the light burning. It was a habit of hers over which she and the landlady had many a serious conversation. She had, perhaps, dropped the bit of folded paper. Luckily for her, Ulla had discovered both offenses and thus saved her a tongue lashing from Mrs. McNabb.

To make certain that she was not harming Marie in her absence, Ulla listened for a moment outside her door. Yes, Marie was in, moving stealthily about. Ulla went quietly on to her own room. It was late—almost 2 o'clock. Tomorrow was Sunday. No performance. No rehearsal. Only rest and time for entertainment.

It was after she had taken off her coat that she re-discovered the paper she had picked up in the hall, crushed in the palm of her hand. It was greenish blue—a bit off one of the theater programs. It was folded so carefully that Ulla looked at it again before she put it in the wastebasket. It might be folded around a coin. She opened it slowly and saw writing upon it. Holding it toward the light, she read:

"Sweetie—I'm leaving town on the 2 a. m. If you're in earnest, meet me at the corner of Market and Bond streets. Have your light burning at 2 sharp, when I go by. I'll understand and wait for you."

There was no signature. Ulla needed none to know who wrote it. So it had come to this? In spite of her vigilance, in spite of her precaution it had come to this? Had Marie read it? Was she at this moment hurrying, packing, preparing to go with him to—what?

Opening the door, Ulla crept down the hall to Marie's room. Knocking softly, she waited. Would Marie let her in?

"I thought it was you, Ulla!" The door opened quickly and Marie beckoned her in. "I want you to help me find something. A little bit of folded green blue paper. A bit of the program for tonight's performance. I must have dropped it when I took my handkerchief out of my pocket. See if you can see it. I've looked so much everything's turned green-blue."

"Something folded in it?" asked Ulla, stepping in.

"No. Something written. I hadn't read it. That's the worst of it. I—I think it was an invitation for an auto ride tomorrow. Can't afford to miss it, if it is."

Both girls began to search carefully. They shook out gloves and handkerchiefs, moved powder boxes and cold cream jars on the dresser and turned magazines inside out.

"Too bad," said Ulla. "But probably whoever wrote it will 'phone you. Who gave it to you, anyway?"

"One of the stage hands. I don't know who gave it to him."

"Oh!" Ulla almost laughed aloud at this unexpected bit of information.

"I know I had it when I unlocked the door. You didn't see it lying on the step, did you?" Folded square, about so big." Marie measured with her hands.

"Nothing on the steps when I came in."

The clock on the bureau said five minutes of two.

"Have your light burning at two, sharp, when I go by."

Was he out there, waiting, watching at this moment? If he was, little did he know who was within, ready to frustrate his plans, ready to save the silly, little girl from a fate she little realized.

"I've got to find it," said Marie. "I'm going to look all over the room again. You get busy in the corner there, Ulla."

"Don't get so excited over an auto ride that, perhaps, isn't lost after all," advised Ulla, going to her appointed place. "Oh, the gas! I've caught my hair net in the cord that hangs from the pilot light. Come untangle me, Marie."

"Pull up the curtain. I can't see even to cross the room."

Two girls, fumbling about in the darkness. A dark head bent towards a light one. Hands meeting, passing each other—accomplishing nothing.

"There! I've broken the cord. Get a match. Over there on the table. No, no! Let me find it. I know just where they are."

"I'll help," said Ulla. "I have the match safe. Oh, how clumsy. Spilled!"

Another moment of fumbling, reaching, clutching.

"I've got one," cried Marie, in triumph.

"So have I," added Ulla. They tumbled against each other, searching for the gas jet in the shadow.

"One! Two!" The clock in the City Hall tower!

"One, Two!" The clock in the Cathedral.

"One! Two! One! Two!" Clocks echoing and re-echoing from all parts of the city. But no light signalling consent to a solitary figure waiting across the street.

"Never mind lighting up, after all. The arc light is enough to find my bed by. I'm tired. Perhaps, as you say, whoever wrote me will 'phone in the morning."

"If he doesn't you haven't lost much, I guess," said Ulla. "Good night!"

"Good night!"

Solitary footsteps echoed down the street. A man's form turned the corner and blurred in the darkness.

Ulla, in her own room, took an envelope from an open drawer. She took from it a bit of folded paper. It was worn and old and had been kept for some time. She held it up to the light and read the words upon it.

"Sweetie: I'm leaving town on the 5 o'clock. Meet me at the corner of Broad and Menis streets and we'll go away together. If I see your light burning at 8, I'll know it's a go."

She tore the note in bits and with them, she put the fragments of green-blue. Opening the window, she held them out. The strong wind caught them and whirled them away, mingling them with rain drops that had begun to fall.

In the distance, faint, retreating footsteps grew still more indistinct. Ulla shut the window and turned off the light.

"Young lady," said her mother to little Muriel, who had been naughty, "I'm tired of spanking you, because it does no good. So I'm going to let your father do it now."

"What are you goin' to do when daddy gets tired?" asked Muriel innocently.

Overheard in the drawing-room of a profiteer's wife:

"Jane, my love, just sing that song the New York professor charged $10 an hour to teach you."

Horseshoes and Hazel

By Phil Moore

HORSESHOES for luck! Hazel's had brought her only misfortune ever since, spurred by tradition, she had tacked it up over the door of her little room at the boarding house. She had lost her job, because the season being dull, they were "laying off" help, and Hazel had been an extra. Then as a climax the horseshoe had fallen with a thud on Hazel's dark, bobbed, despairing little head, and she had lain in a ward bed at the City Hospital fighting for her life for nearly four long weeks.

Today the young interne—she called him Happy because he always joked and laughed to make her forget the terrible pain and buzzing in her head—had told her that all danger was over, and pretty soon she would be rolled out in the wheel chair to the balcony in the warm Spring sunshine. She adored Happy. In fact, the whole ward did.

Hazel could close her eyes and describe him accurately—the light in the gray eyes, the straight aristocratic nose, the close-cropped mustache over the finely chiseled lips always parted in a welcoming smile for each patient, the fresh whiteness of his uniform, the stethoscope dangling from his long, tapering, sensitive fingers—every little detail Hazel saw as soon as she closed her eyes.

Happy was interested in the things people told him. He always had time to listen, except when there was an operation going on. He claimed that in order to know his patient's case well enough to cure it as well as diagnose it, he must know his patient. Hazel had involuntarily told him about her short life, about the death of her parents within three weeks of each other, of her leaving high school in the third year to come to the city and shift for herself, of being laid off at the mill, and finally of the horseshoe calamity.

He in turn had told her a little about himself, of some of his funny experiences as a bellhop and waiter in which capacities he had put himself through college and medical school, and of the little Vermont farm where his mother and father and 10-year-old sister were. There were two brothers between, both married. He brought her books to read, and puzzles to work out.

The days passed only too quickly for Hazel. When she was moved out on the balcony she did not see him so often, but she was so busy making friends with other patients that she did not have time to miss him.

After seven weeks her discharge came in. Happy was waiting for her down in the office.

"I am off duty," he explained to her, "and I'm going to see you home. I've been reckless and ordered a taxi."

It was in the taxi that it happened. He laid a long sensitive hand over her little frail, transparent one. She looked up at him, startled, and the reassuring grin which had earned him his name was still there.

"Hazel," he said, "I'm going to marry you, and take care of you. You're such a child. I couldn't let you battle alone. I'm going to send you down to the little farm, and to my mother. In the Fall I will come down to you and hang up my shingle in the little old home town. Do you think you could care enough for a nondescript country doctor?"

The mute adoration in the soft eyes raised to his was reply enough, and very gently he kissed her. She was like a small bird, that trusted him. He saw her safely into her little room, paid the landlady for the week that she would stay there, and left her, promising to return for a while in the evening.

When he returned he found a very different Hazel from the tremulous, misty-eyed one he had left in the morning. She was on the floor on her knees before a heap of newspapers, a brush in one hand, and a bottle of gold-leaf in the other, dabbling away gaily at the horseshoe. The eyes she lifted to his danced and sparkled so did the horseshoe spread out on the newspaper in its holiday dress.

"Well, I never!" he ejaculated, sitting down on the edge of her couch to watch her.

"It's pure gold," sang Hazel not pausing for an instant, "pure, pure gold. It helped me to find you, and you do find me. I don't mind a bit that it thumped me on the head. When it's done, it's going to be my first gift to you."

She wiped the brush on the newspapers, rose and surveyed her work with satisfaction. Then she perched shyly on his knee.

"And here is mine for you," said he, drawing a marriage license and a little plain gold band ring from his pocket. "Some day you shall have a diamond. I wish you might have it now."

"Don't want one," she whispered, resting her cheek against his. "All I want is just you, Happy, and to keep you always like your name."

Inside her heart was singing:

"Horseshoes for luck! Horseshoes for luck!"

"Mr. Appel is certainly well read. He repeated an exquisite quotation last night."

"What was it?"

"I can't give you the exact words, but he said he'd rather be a something in a something than a something or other in a something else."

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

New York

Stocks irregular; merger rails rally 3 to 11 points.

Bonds steady; rail issues extend recovery.

Foreign exchanges mixed; Norwegian kroner resume advance.

Cotton easier; bearish government carry over, figures.

Sugar lower; trade selling.

Coffee barely steady; disappointing spot demand.

Chicago

Wheat barely steady; favorable crop outlook.

Corn easy; larger country offerings.

Cattle steady; good demand for choice grades.

Hogs lower.

MARKET WAS UNSTEADY.

NEW YORK, March 5—(AP)—The rally in the industrial shares was checked around the end of the first hour in today's stock market but the rails forged steadily ahead under the leadership of the Van Sweringen issues. Trading steadied down considerably, and total sales barely exceeded 3,100,000 shares, as compared with 2,626,400 yesterday and 3,785,700 in Wednesday's record breaking session.

There was a fair sized overnight accumulation of buying orders for both rails and industrials, with the result that opening prices were 1 to nearly 9 points higher. Strong financial interests who had come to the support of the market yesterday, relaxed their efforts to stimulate the rally and as prices began to sag from their high bears traders started a series of attacks against the motors, public utilities and high priced industrial specialties.

American Can, which opened 3 3-4 points higher at 317 3-4 as against Wednesday's low of 290, was hammered down to 306, closing a point above that figure. United States Cast Iron Pipe fell from 174 1-2 to 170, but rallied to 174, where it was off 5 1-4 points on the day. General Electric dropped from 320 to 323, closing at 323 1-2, off 5 1-2. Hudson Motors dipped from 114 3-4 to 110 1-2, but snapped back to 113 1-2, off 2 1-4.

United States Steel common closed 5-8 lower at 124 5-8 after having mucluated between 123 3-8 and 125 1-4. So-called "secondary selling" also was effective in Cushman and Sons, Detroit Edison, Du Pont, Remington Typewriter, Sears, Roebuck and Loca tractions, all of which closed 2 to 4 1-2 points lower.

Further recoveries took place in American Bosch Magneto, American Sugar, American Linseed, Columbia Carbon, Electric Storage Battery, Federal Mining and Smelting preferred, Kelsey Wheel, McCrory Stores B, Pathe, Railway Steel Spring, F. G. Shattuck, South Porto Rican Sugar and Union Bag and Paper, up 2 to 7 points. National Tea jumped 25 1-4 points on two sales.

Special buying also was apparent in the oil shares in anticipation of favorable earnings, merger and dividend developments. General Petroleum, General Asphalt, Pan-American Producing and Refining, and Tidewater Oil preferred showed net gains of 2 to 3 points.

"Nickel Plate" common was the outstanding feature in the railroad group, soaring 24 points to 159, and then easing to 155. Chesapeake and Ohio, was bid up nearly 8 points to 127 7-8, closing within a small fraction of the top. Pere Marquette recorded a net gain of 7 3-8 at 81 7-8 and Reading improved 5.

Pittsburgh and West Virginia rallied six points to 109, Lackawanna 4 1-2 to 143 1-2 and Erie common and first preferred, New York Central, Reading, Wabash common, Delaware and Hudson, Southern Railway and several others moved up two points or more.

Most of the commodity markets lost ground May and July wheat futures closed about 2 and 3 1-4 cents a bushel higher, respectively, with smaller changes in other active options. Cotton closed 3 to 11 points lower and coffee sold off 11 to 24 points. Raw sugar dropped 1-32 of a cent a pound, and moderate recessions took place in the futures.

Call money held steady at 4 1-2 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were firm. Demand sterling and French francs held steady around $4.85 1-2 and 3.75 cents, respectively. Danish kroner and Polish zloty were substantially higher.

HIBERNIANS ARE STARTING ON MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Daniel O'Connell and Robert Emmett branch of Ancient Order of Hibernians held Sunday afternoon at Buckingham hall for the purpose of outlining a meeting enthusiasm for the campaign for members which is to start on March 15 and continue for about six weeks.

The meeting was opened by President Edward J. Sullivan of the O'Connell branch who immediately turned the meeting over to County President Thomas N. Kennedy of New London.

James J. O'Connell of Bridgeport, treasurer and chairman of the state membership campaign committee spoke at length concerning the campaign and urged the eastern Connecticut counties to get behind the drive and make a success in this section of the state.

Talks along the lines of membership were made by representatives of the several branches in eastern Connecticut, among the speakers being President Kennedy, John Sullivan and Dennis Griffin, for Division 1 of Lower City, Joseph Newfield, Timothy Haskins, Joseph Hutton and John McVeigh, Clement Branch of Norwich and Daniel J. Sullivan, Patrick Barry, William Michael O'Connor and Thomas J. Malone, for the O'Connell branch of this city.

MISSIONARY TO INDIANS SENDS GRATEFUL LETTER

A letter of appreciation has been received by a Norwich branch of the National Council of Catholic Women from the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions, Washington, from Rev. Francis Weber. Father Woods spoke in this city months ago in the interest of his work.

Father Woods is now on his return to the west from visits to missions in Europe and is surprised and pleased to learn the Norwich branch had responded so generous check to the burse of his guide: "As the amount was the result of a lecture and the pictures I showed a couple of months ago in Norwich, it was really a surprise, because I had told man you could devote a similar amount to the upbuilding of your local work."

Father Woods also mentions the box of clothing forwarded from the Norwich council to Sister Catherine, of the Blackfeet mission. He asks for a list of the Norwich council members, that he may have sent free to each a copy of the number of "The Indian Sentinel," the mission publication of the Washington bureau. He expresses thanks for the council, not alone for the check but for several fine boxes of work, but for kindness to him during his visit to Norwich.

Miss Roderick F. Sullivan is president of the local council and Mrs. John [illegible] is the corresponding secretary.

JEWISH RELIEF DRIVE TO OPEN MARCH 21

The Norwich United Jewish Relief committee was greatly encouraged by the receipt of the following letter accompanied with five dollars.

Norwich, Conn.
March, 5, 1926.

Mr. Abner Schwartz,
Dear Sir:

I wish to contribute to your Jewish Relief Fund $5.00. My heart is full of sympathy for this afflicted people.

Yours truly,
MRS. R. W. GALLUP,
R. F. D. No. 1, Norwich, Conn.

With the opening date of the drive set for March 21, and with voluntary contributions beginning to come in so early the relief committee can foresee success in the coming drive.

They are in the hope that the entire quota of $25,000 alloted to Norwich by the national officers of the $15,000,000 United Jewish campaign can be subscribed. They base their forecast upon the knowledge of the generosity of the people of Norwich and upon previous achievements.

Keeping his promise made a month ago not to extend leniency to drunken automobile drivers, Judge William C. Hungerford in police court of New Britain, imposed a jail sentence of 30 days on Harold A. Keller, aged 37, of 710 New Britain avenue, Hartford, who, the police said, was drunk while he was driving his car.

SUPERINTENDENT HUTCHINS PRESENTS RESIGNATION AT BACKUS HOSPITAL

Friday afternoon at a meeting of the executive board of the William W. Backus hospital, at which President H. A. Tirrell presided, Superintendent F. Leon Hutchins presented his resignation, being moved to this step by his desire to be relieved from the cares of an active business life. For some time he has had the matter under consideration as he desired to retire to private life in this city where his home has been for 38 years, and he feels that now is an opportune time to do so. His resignation will not become effective until the early part of May. In the intervening time the executive board will take steps, said Mr. Tirrell Friday night, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Hutchins.

It is with much regret that the hospital authorities learn that they are to lose the services of such an able executive as Mr. Hutchins has proved to be in 14 years that he has been superintendent. Changes and additions have been made at the hospital in that time that have greatly enlarged its scope and field of work. When he became superintendent, as successor to the late Frederick Symington, the capacity of the hospital was 65 beds. This has been increased to 90 beds and there have been additions to the wards, a new laboratory, and the latest addition the new nurses' home for which the money was raised in a great popular campaign. In all of this expansion, the business experience and executive ability of Superintendent Hutchins has been a most valuable asset to the progress of the institution and in his contact with the public his policies have maintained a cordial relation with the community. The standard of the hospital service and equipment has been kept at a high mark that has made the institution in the front rank of those in the state.

LIQUOR RAID PRODUCES FIRST MARCH ARREST

After the police headquarters blotter had gone for the first five days of this month without having a mark on it, the night force Friday, made the first score about 7.30 o'clock when they arrested Annie Rojkowski, alias Rose, at the home 469 North Main street on the charge of violation of the liquor law. Sergeant John Casey, with Officers William Sharvan and Joseph Gendron, made entrance to the place and found there two alleged customers, a father and his son. The officers seized six cases of bottled goods, alleged to be home brew beer, and also took as evidence several glasses containing small portions of alleged intoxicating liquor.

Y. M. C. A. News for Sunday

There will be no services at the Y. M. C. A. on the coming Sunday, on account of the special union meetings under the leadership of Dr. Charles O. Judkins of Glens Falls, N. Y., who will deliver two addresses. At 4 o'clock, Dr. Judkins will deliver his final message to the young people of Norwich in the United Congregational church when it is expected that a very large audience will gather, as the speaker is a specialist in religious work with young people. At 7:30 o'clock, Dr. Judkins will deliver his final address, and judging by the deep interest in his addresses on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday it will not be necessary to urge a large attendance. Let it be understood, however, that the public generally is invited to this closing service of the series. This service should be the climax, both in interest and attendance.

China has formally applied for a permanent seat on the council of the league of nations.

FAITH IN GOD MAKES POWER FOR THE FUTURE

If a comparison could be made in the heart to heart talks by Dr. J. Romeyn Danforth in his Friday Lenten services at the local Y. M. C. A. the third which was given this week was the best thus far, though every talk he gives is filled with inspiration. The topic was "The Power of the Future." The meeting opened with the singing of the impressive hymn, "O' Love that will not let me go" and this was followed by a prayer by Rev. Allan Shaw Bush of Gales Ferry, after which Hugh Kinder rendered pleasingly a vocal solo.

At this point Hugh Campbell voiced the feelings of all present when he told of the deep appreciation they all felt in having such unusual spiritual messages from Dr. Danforth. He then announced the topic of the day and presented the speaker, who spoke in part as follows:

"In the vision of the poet the inscription over the gate of hell was, "Leave hope behind, all ye who enter here." The loss of hope is itself torment for anyone. If you ever lost it, even for a little while, you know.

Hope is the strong cord by which God draws us forward. The church of Jesus Christ is the home of unspeakable expectation. "We believe that thou shalt come." As Freeman, the historian, wrote, "The most decadent and superstitious form of Christianity has always within itself the perennial power of regeneration. For it has at its heart the redeeming Christ." "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

We all know that the entrance of the United States into the war had much to do with the surrender of the foe. It was not wholly due to the regiments that had already come into the field, but the knowledge that millions of men could follow them that took away all hope of further resistence. The men of blood and iron saw the future, and it held no hope for them. Then they were done. So many of our young men were disappointed in not getting across. They feel they had nothing to do with the result. They really had much to do with it.

Our hopes invited; our fears repel. And, as we view the future it is for us to decide whether it shall mean hope or fear. In the three things which abide, faith, hope and love, hope stands between faith and love. It holds them together. And together they make the ladder by which we climb.

The past is a dead certainty. The present is a living reality. The future is an invitation or a despair, a promise or a threat, and it is for us to decide which it shall be for each of us. It depends upon the company with which we travel. They who walk with God walk with confidence. They may have many troubles but they always have the power to surmount them. And they know it, and so they face them accordingly. They have hope.

The real test of the individual life is its expectancy. At the close of our life here below we do not write, "The End," but rather, "To be continued in the next world."

FORMER MORGANTIC WIFE IS SUING PRINCE CAROL

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 5.—(AP)—Much astonishment was created here by the news that Mme. Zizi Lambrino, former Morgantic wife of Prince Carol, had brought suit against him in Paris for ten million francs. Before her departure for Paris, Mme. Lambrino gave no inkling of the suit, and if it was planned at that time, the secret was kept.

The extent of Carol's private fortune is not known exactly. His inheritance from his grandfather, King Carol, is understood to have been of considerable proportions, comprising lands and money. Some of the land, however, was expropriated under the agrarian reform laws, and the compensation received for it thus far, is insignificant. The money has shrunk on account of the currency depreciation. It is presumed that the liberal spending allowance from the government has been discontinued since Carol renounced his throne rights, although nothing official has been made known.

The government's allowance to Mme. Lambrino, payable in French francs, has also shrunk through currency depreciation and now equals about $5,000 annually. There are certain strings attached to the allowance, such as non-interference in political affairs and court life.

WARRANT OUT FOR ARREST OF POLICE CHIEF OF PASSAIC

Shopkeepers Charge That Chief Zober Assaulted Them During the Strike Disorders—Five Constables Have Refused to Serve the Warrants on Chief Zober and Two of His Subordinates—Strike Has Entered Its Seventh Week.

PASSAIC, N. J., March 7.—(AP)—Quiet reigned today as the textile strike entered its seventh week. There were no mass meetings or parades, no strikers picketted before the empty mills, and not signs of excitement and disorder such as have marked the last few days of the strike gave way to sabbath repose.

Chief of Police Richard J. Zober, for whom a warrant has been issued on charges of assault in connection with strike activities, received newspaper men at his home, where he has been ill with grip, and announced that he would be out of bed in a day or two. As soon as he can leave the house, he said, he will give himself up.

The warrant for Zober and two of his subordinates were sworn out Friday but five constables declined to serve them. Shop keepers were the complainants, alleging that the police had assaulted them during the strike, with which they had no connection.

Chief Zober said today that the assault charges were a "frame-up," but that he was anxious to face them so that they might be quickly disposed of. He said there was no reason why the warrants should not have been served.

Action took notice of an open question addressed to him yesterday at one of the meetings by Albert Weisbord, organizer of the strikers. Weisbord asked if it was not true that Zober had got in legal difficulties in Germany in his youth.

Though saying he saw "no need of dignifying" the questions by a direct denial, the police chief pointed out that he had come to America in 1895, a year before the time questioned. He indicated that such insinuations were merely part of the burden which has to be borne by every man in public office and said that he would make no formal disavowal, preferring to stand on his record.

Weisbord attended several meetings today for the discussion of relief measures and possible mediation. He announced that $20,000 had already been contributed to the relief fund for families of the strikers. He conferred with the executive committee of the Federated Textile union, which endorsed the strike. He announced and promised to ask its members to contribute financial relief for the strikers.

After a meeting of the executive committee of the general strike committee, Weisbord said that it had been decided to accept the offer of four New Yorkers to act as mediators in the strike as representatives of the strikers in negotiations with the mill owners. The four are Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, John Lovejoy Elliott, head of the Ethical Culture society of New York, the Rev. John Howard Melish, rector of Trinity church, in Brooklyn, and Paul U. Kellogg, editor of the Survey. He also said that the strikers appreciated the attitude of Governor Moore and would look with favor on any action he might take to improve conditions.

Killed in Motorcycle Race

ROME, March 7.—(AP)—Gabriele D'Annunzio's motorcyclist, Basso, was killed today by a fall while taking part in a motorcycle race. Two other contestants, Biondetti and Brois, collided with Basso's machine and are thought to be mortally injured.

Skull of Oldest Scandinavian

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, March 7.—(AP)—The skull of the oldest Scandinavian has been unearthed at Ro, in the Swedish province of Bohuslan. According to Dr. H. Hagg, of the Stockholm Rigsmuseum and Professor C. M. Furst, it is the only known human skull of the Ancylus period, 9,000 years ago, when the Baltic was a fresh water lake. Dr. K. Jessen, the well known Danish geologist, has confirmed that the skull probably belongs to one of the oldest inhabitants of northern Europe.

George Brown Robinson

Mr. Robinson who in his early life was in the diplomatic service, was born in Kingston, R. I., and educated in Providence, R. I., at the Friends' school. After serving as a lieutenant in the Civil war he went to New York and made a fortune in the wholesale flour and grain business. He is survived by four sons and three daughters. Death occurred late last night.

BODY OF EUGENE FIELD IN SPECIALLY BUILT TOMB

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP)—With the last stanza of his famous poem "Little Boy Blue," sounding as his requiem, the body of Eugene Field, the children's poet was today simply, yet beautifully enshrined for posterity in a specially built tomb of the Episcopal church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth.

Grown children, who read and wept over the joys and sorrows of Field's host of characters almost a generation ago, even as do children today, and who included in their number scores of prominent literary and journalistic personages followed the body of the children's poet from an obscure grave in Graceland cemetery to the cloister in the Holy Comforter church. There, as Field himself would have wished, scores of little children mingled with the throngs.

Judge Jesse Holdom, of the Cook county superior court, a personal friend of Field's for many years, delivered the eulogy and at its close as he recited the immortal "Little Boy Blue."

"Asleep, faithful to Little Boy Blue they stand.
"Each in the same old place
"Awaiting the touch of a little hand
And the smile of a little face
And they wonder, as waiting these long years through,
In the dust of that little chair
What has become of our Little Boy Blue
Since he kissed them and put them there."

With these words, the body was lowered to the tomb built to receive it and as the marble slab with its plain inscription, "Eugene Field, 1850-1895, the children's poet," was lowered into place, the Rev. Leland Hubert Danforth, rector of the church pronounced a blessing.

Expressions of appreciation for the memorial and enrichment came from all parts of the country.

"I am deeply touched," Field's widow wrote, "with the unfolding of your plan to forever enshrine my husband's memory in this picturesque spot."

Field's remains were borne into the church by officers of the parish. A vested choir, local and national personages and clergy made up the processions. The Rev. Danforth celebrated a requiem Holy Eucharist.

TO SELECT SECRETARY OF THE CONNECTICUT C. OF C.

HARTFORD, March 7.—(AP)—Ernest E. Rogers, treasurer of the state, and president of the Connecticut chamber of commerce, has selected the past presidents of the state chamber to act as a special committee to consider the question of a permanent secretary to succeed George B. Chandler, who is now secretary of the Ohio chamber of commerce.

The committee includes Charles E. Chase, chairman of the board of directors of Hartford; Edward P. Jones, of Winsted; Charles A. Pease of Hartford; Alton T. Minor, of New London; Frank H. Johnston, of New Britain, and Stanley H. Bullard of Bridgeport. Mr. Rogers is the seventh member of the committee.

President Rogers has sent the following letter to the past presidents:

"On February 25 at the Hartford club, our directors accepted Mr. Chandler's resignation and unanimously elected Mr. Belden acting secretary at least until July 1.

"At the same meeting our directors authorized me to appoint a committee of seven to consider the matter of a permanent secretary.

"After considerable thought I have come to the conclusion that the judgment of the past presidents of this organization would be very helpful in this connection because of their actual experience and close contact over a period of years with the affairs of the Connecticut chamber of commerce.

NEW YORK CENTRAL LOSES TWO VETERAN ENGINEERS

HARMON, N. Y., March 7.—(AP)—By retirement and death New York Central railroad today lost two veteran enkineers who between them have driven trains a distance of 3,250,000 miles during a combined service of 100 years.

William G. Weaver, who has seen 53 years of railroading and was the oldest locomotive engineer on the New York Central lines, retired today on pension. He is 73 years old and lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. When he began his railroad career the locomotives burned wood. He had piloted engines for 1,750,000 miles.

William J. Bovlan, 63 years old, who had been employed by the railroad nearly 48 years during which time he had traveled over 1,500,000 miles of track, died today in his Peekskill home.

Luther Burbank, "plant wizard", who recently proclaimed himself an infidel, on the eve of his 77th birthday, addressed a message Saturday to "the children of the world," telling that their happiness will be in direct proportion to their loving thoughts, "toward every person and animal and even toward stars, planets, oceans, rivers and hills."

Calls for radio compass bearings were recived tonight from eight vessels to steal into New York harbor through dense fog.

Discord Threatens League Of Nations

European Statesmen Disagree Over Terms By Which Germany May Become Member.

GENEVA, March 8.—(AP) — Both Locarno and the league of nations, with the hopes of mankind they embody, stand imperilled, for tonight Europe's leading statesmen separated without reaching an accord on the conditions under which German would enter the league of nations.

These statesmen have gathered in Geneva to attend the meeting of the league assembly and council, opening tomorrow, the chief business of which is to consider Germany's entry and the possible enlargement of the council. No agreement was reached on the problem of the reconstruction of the council created by the demand of various nations for ipermanent seats; German was inflexible in refusing to accept any binding obligations in advance as to what she would do when she was elected to the council.

France and Great Britain, particularly France, pressed for an agreement to admit Spain to a permanent seat, and all the more insistently as the Spanish delegation had announced during the day that if Spain were not elected to a permanent place concurrently with Germany she would resign her league membership.

M. Briand, the retiring French premier, Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, Count Skrzynski, of Poland, and an imposing Spanish delegation all arrived at an early hour from Paris. They had hardly time to discover their hotel rooms before there was launched an almost frenzied series of conversations and consultations. Speed was deemed a great essential because M. Briand announced that he was returning to Paris tonight to confer with President Doumergue tomorrow in an attempt to solve the French ministerial crisis.

Geneva's streets were primarily dominated by swarms of journalists representing all sections of the globe, Germany alone sending one hundred. They moved swiftly between the various hotels trying to keep in touch with official Europe, which with seven premiers, 13 foreign ministers, scores

10 TO 12 HOURS AIR SERVICE BETWEEN N. Y. AND HAMBURG

BERLIN, March 7.—(AP)—A ten to twelve hours air service between Hamburg and New York is the aim of a newly formed scientific research society for aviation in higher altitudes, known as the "Gesellschaft Fuer Hochenflugforschung," established in Berlin.

By finding a means of flying at an altitude of from six to seven miles the scientists of the society hope to solve the transoceanic aviation problem. It is pointed out that in the lower atmospheric regions airplanes are seriously hampered by vertical squalls, fogs and thunder clouds, to which are added, off the American coast, blizzards, hurricanes and cyclones, none of which occur in the highest strata. It is expected also that an altitude would increase the speed of airplanes to 270 miles or more an hour.

The society is planning to investigate atmospheric conditions seven miles above the earth by means of a specially constructed combination of flying laboratory and observatory. The pilot would be installed in a specially heated cabin and the members of the expedition clothed in rubber suits against cold and intensified rays of the sun in the rarified atmosphere.

Prof. Reinhard Suering, head of the Potsdam observatory and one of the experts of the new society, foresees a probably revolution in certain physical laws, if it proves possible to keep an airplane at an altitude of from six to nine miles.

REMARKABLE SAFETY RECORD BY RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP)—Without death or injury to a single person, the American Railway association announced tonight, American and Canadian railroads during 1925 handled more than 500,000,000 pounds of commercial explosives — approximately 375,000 car loads.

Explosions of toy torpedoes, the association's bureau of explosives said, were responsible for twenty-four of twenty-six accidents in transporting fireworks, none of which, however, proved fatal or injurious.

Only 13 were killed and 57 injured, the bureau asserted, in the railroad's handling of millions of pounds of acids, inflammable liquids, compressed cases, poisonous liquids and similar articles. Ten of these deaths and 16 of the injuries were due to explosions of gasoline, and the bureau added, "one half the deaths and more than one half of the injuries due to such accidents were the direct consequences of trespassers entering empty tank cars.

"WOLF OF LA SALLE STREET" LEFT AN ESTATE OF $250,000

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP)—Alice Worthington, daughter of John W. Worthington, the "wolf of LaSalle street" who died in the federal prison at Atlanta last Tuesday, told the Chicago Tribune that reports of her father leaving a $3,000,000 estate were untrue.

She said she had the only will her father made and that she is given the entire estate which she said amounted to about $250,000. She added that she will contest any other will produced.

At the time Worthington surrendered here last fall and was started for prison, there were reports that he had made a will disposing of an estate of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. When he died his attorney here reported there was such a will and that he received $250,00 of the estate.

U. S. THE LEAST FREE OF ALL CIVILIZED NATIONS

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—The steady increase of prohibitory laws has made the United States the "least free of all civilized nations," William Sulzer, former governor of New York, declared today.

Speaking in St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie in commemoration of the birthday of Guiseppe Mazzini, the Italian statesman, Mr. Sulzer urged the repeal of more than half of the 331,000 laws on the statute books of the country. Most of them, he said, are obsolete.

Trans-Atlantic Chat By Newspaper Men

In Celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary Yesterday of the Patents For Telephone.

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—British listeners-in were treated today to a radio-telephone chat across the Atlantic between a group of British newspapermen in the general post office in London and a group of Americans in New York.

It was a fitting celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the issuance to Alexander Graham Bell of the basic patients on the telephone. Three thousand miles were eliminated today by the radio telephone, the conversations being heard distinct and with as much ease as a telephone talk within the city of London.

Experiments in telephonic communication between London and New York have been in progress several weeks but today for the first time a definite schedule of communication between two distant cities was carried out with forms groups of men participating in the outgoing and listening to the responsive incoming conversations.

Through a linking-up of the land line between Rugby and London, the broadcasting station at Rugby was able to relay portions of the outgoing conversation while a similar arrangement was made between London and Wroughton whereby the eastbound conversation was picked up and relayed on a different wave length in such a manner that no manipulation of switches was necessary. Consequently the flow of conversation was uninterrupted and audible to a large group of listeners at the general post office as to countless private radio users.

As there is much more experimentation necessary before regular commercial service between England and America can be established, it seems likely that nothing in the nature of a public service between the two continents can be effected before autumn at the earliest.

Atmospheric conditions were ideal today for the experiments which extended over several hours. A representative of Reuters chatted over the Atlantic with a representative of The Associated Press and extended the greetings of the London bureau of Associated Press to the general manager and the New York staff.

The tests began at one p. m., London time, which is eight a. m., New York time, and too early for many Manhattan listeners-in. So the cheery voiced young woman in New York, who was originating explained to the London crowd that it was raining there and apologized for the lateness of her crowd. The young woman was so cheery that many of the listeners at the general post office assured her they didn't care whether other talkers ever arrived, and urged her to keep up the conversation.

The speakers in London stood in a booth, while the listeners sat about a great room with receivers on their heads.

PATENT FOR TELEPHONE WAS GRANTED 50 YEARS AGO

BOSTON, March 7.—(AP)—The patient for the telephone, considered the most valuable ever issued by the U. S. patent office, was granted to Alexander Graham Bell in this city 50 years ago today.

That date, March 7, 1876, marked the beginning of a new era in communication which now forms a web of 16,000,000 telephones reaching into every office and most of the homes in the United States.

The story of the development of the telephone is a romance of perseverance and pluck rewarded. Professor Bell got his idea while specializing in the instruction of his father's system of visible speech by which a deaf mute might learn to talk.

The first words spoken over the telephone were from Professor Bell to his faithful assistant, Thomas A. Watson, who built the first instrument to transmit speech. They were spoken in a little garret at 109 Court street on March 10, 1876. Shortly before his death in 1922, Professor Bell referred to his first telephone message.

"I shall never forget the occasion," he said. "The message was this: 'Mr. Watson, come here, I want you.' And his immediate appearance in the room was a great gratification.

"I tried that same experiment with a duplicate of the instrument used on that occasion. Mr. Watson was on the other end of the wire, in San Francisco. I was in New York. Again I said: 'Mr. Watson, come here, I want you.' But he didn't appear and he said: 'It would take me a week to get there now.'"

This second telephone conversation took place on March 13, 1916. The first time Mr. Bell talked to Mr. Watson, the latter was two flights downstairs; 40 years later the telephone wires spanned the continent.

CAILLAUX MAY SUCCEED BRIAND IN FRENCH CABINET

There as a Demand in Some Quarters For a Herriot-Poincare "Sacred Union" Ministry—Paris Remains Undisturbed by Serious Political Assemblies—President Domergue Will Select New Premier Today.

PARIS, March 7.—(AP)—A quiet Sunday undisturbed by serious political assemblies served to clarify to some extent the problems involved in the latest cabinet crisis. But as yet there is little to indicate what leader President Doumergue will select when he calls them to him tomorrow to choose a successor for Aristide Briand in the premiership.

There is not a political group nor leader but admits that the president's task is a hard one. Since he became chief executive he has been faced by constant depreciation of the franc and urgent demands for financial equilibrium. Successive premiers have been seeking some road that would lead from chaos to safety, but all efforts have ended in vain, and M. Briand's desperate attempts to hold his ministery together and enact some solution for the financial problems has made that problem even graver, for the fall of his cabinet now throws the solution even farther into the future.

How President Doumergue will go about to restore order can only be a matter of conjecture, but on the one hand there are calls for dissolution and the summoning of a new parliament, wheer a cohesive majority might be given to one party or group; on the other a dozen or more combinations in the present chamber are suggested, if only a leader can be found who can bind them together and hold them in line. The names mentioned range from former Premier Herriott to Raymond Poincare, who has held both the presidency and the premiership, with Joseph Caillaux, former finance minister, and Raoul Peret, former president of the chamber of deputies, spoken of as most likely to be able to succeed.

There is even a demand from some quarters for a Herriot-Poincare leadership of a "sacred union" ministry, such as existed in wartime, and the suggestion has found a certain amount of favor among the friends of the two, who, it is pointed out, have remained close friends through all political strife, and command a wide range of political support.

Dissolution is still looked upon only as a last resort and it is certain that M. Doumergue will exhaust every other means to form a ministry before he consents to it.

The possibility that M. Caillaux will be called upon to undertake to increase today, political experts basing their forecasts upon the word that he had already been closeted with M. Briand before the latter's departure for Geneva, and that M. Peret had agreed to submit to the government as premier minister, so as to carry through to a conclusion the important external affairs now pending.

Such a cabinet, it is asserted, could command most of the support which M. Briand received in the closing hours of his ministry, in addition to receiving sufficient additions from the centre and right to secure a majority.

POLA NEGRI TO MARRY RUDOLPH VALENTINO

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 7.—Pola Negri, the vivacious Polish actress, who once was to have married Charlie Chaplin is now to marry screendom's sheik, Rudolph Valentino, for he alone can stand the test of four months separation.

"I think he is the supreme man. He is perfection," she said of him. "I take marriage very seriously, very seriously. If I am ever married again, I am sure it will be for all time.

"So first I want to prove my love. I am going away soon to Europe. (She will be away four months). True love ought to outlive this separation. If I feel the same when I return as I do now, and his feelings are the same, there is nothing to prevent our marriage."

Valentino could not be reached today to discuss the betrothal.

IMPROVEMENT IN OPERATIONS OF THE RUBBER COMPANY

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—Remarkable improvement in operations of the United States Rubber company during 1925, compared with recent years, was revealed today in the annual report which showed sales of $246,473,757, an increase of $24,259,3534 over 1924 and net income of $17,309,-[illegible]. After all charges and federal taxes more than double the net income of $8,368,085 in the preceding year. The figures are exclusive of any income from rubber plantations owned by the company which cover 124,-[illegible] acres in the far east.

The company paid $6,228,425 in interest on its funded indebtedness, federal taxes were estimated at $1,500,-000 for which reserve was made, and dividends on the preferred stock amounted to $5,227,518 which left surplus of $12,083,352 in contrast to surplus of $3,140,817 at the end of 1924. YOUNG BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY HIS BROTHER

WINSTED, March 7.—(AP)—Eugene Chipman, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Chipman, of Winchester Center, is a patient in the Litchfield county hospital, suffering a bullet wound in his right lung inflicted by his 7-year-old brother, Erwin. The boy's condition is considered very serious.

Erwin and his mother, who witnessed the shooting in the family home living room, both told Medical Examiner Dr. Jean S. Hulbert that it was accidental.

The boy said that after going to an upstairs room and loading the revolver, he returned downstairs and a few minutes later pointed the weapon at his younger brother and pulled the trigger.

Questioned further by the medical examiner, the boy said he had forgotten that he had loaded the revolver fifteen minutes earlier. The medical examiner expressed the opinion that the shooting was accidental and no complaint was made to the police.

COMMITTEE TO RECEIVE BIDS FOR MUSCLE SHOALS

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP)—Final action on the resolution proposing the appointment of a congressional committe to receive bids for Muscle Shoals is to be taken tomorrow by the senate. The Gooding long and short haul railroad bill will follow that on the calendar and then the Italian debt settlement will be called up.

Both the senate and house agriculture committees will continue hearings during the week on farm relief measures, the senate committee considering the house co-operative marketing bill and the house committee continuing hearings on the Dickinson export surplus measure.

Prohibition is expected to furnish more fireworks in the house as the ways and means committee goes forward with consideration of the administration bill to create a separate bureau of prohibition in the treasury. The senate finance committee probably will await house action before taking up this measure, although a similar bill has been introduced in the senate.

Final decisions by the senate elections committee in two election contests are expected this week. The subcommittee considering the Steck-Brookhart contest will resume inspection tomorrow of the contested ballots in that case, while the sub-committee on the Johnson-Schall contest from Minnesota expects to conclude hearings tomorrow with a view to making a report to the entire committee before the end of the week.

GOOD YEAR FOR THE N. Y. CENTRAL RAILROAD

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—Operation of the New York Central railroad and its affiliated lines in 1925 procured substantially better results than the year before, excepting the Ruland Railroad company which had a small decrease in surplus of $35,396, it was shown today in a statement, preliminary to the pamphlet report.

Net income of the New York Central, including the Boston & Albany and the Ohio Central lines, amounted to $48,-637,223, a gain of $9,376,823, over 1924. Gross income was $93,430,020, an increase of $4,508,716. Surplus for the year carried to profit and loss increased $3,866,811 to $21,768,272.

Patrick E. Crowley, president of the road, informed stockholders that although the outstanding capital stock was increased during the year by $78,-000,000, largely through the conversion into stock of its 6 per cent debentures, of which $11,611,300 were converted in 1924 and $76,240,000 in 1925, the company earned almost as much per share in 1925, $12.09 as it did in 1924, which was $12.88 a share

Operating revenues amounted to $365,994,505, an increase of $16,387,-574. Railway operating expenses showed an increase of $10,470,796, leaving net revenue from railway operations of $95,553,546, a gain of $5,916,770.

MEXICO USING AIRPLANES AGAINST GRASSHOPPERS

MEXICO CITY, March 7.—(AP)—Mexico's newest war is one of airplanes against grasshoppers.

The government has detailed aviators for service in the annual campaign against locusts and grasshoppers, starting this month. The planes will be used for rapid transportation of men and supplies to regions where the insect pests appear. GILPATIC BELIEVES HE GAVE CONSIDERABLE ASSISTANCE

PUTNAM, March 7.—(AP)—G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer and defaulting cashier of the wrecked First National bank, of this place, expressed the opinion tonight, on the eve of his return to Atlanta prison, that he had given considerable assistance in clearing up many of the transactions that caused the crash at the banking institution.

The former banker, who is serving a 15-year sentence at Atlanta for embezzlement, has been in Connecticut for the past three weeks. He was brought back on a writ of habeas corpus to aid if possible in the unscrambling of the tangled affairs he left and to give information, if it was within his power, to assist his creditors in recovering some of their lost funds.

George M. Coffin, receiver of the wrecked bank, said today that Gilpatric had answered freely every question put to him and, according to the receiver's judgment, as fully and correctly as a person could while laboring under the handicap of blindness and the mental and physical strain that he had undergone.

The actual recoveries in money by reason of the investigation, Mr. Coffin said, would amount to several times the cost of bringing Gilpatric back from the federal penitentiary.

The cost of Gilpatric's return to Connecticut will be under $400, according to the former banker's guard, George E. Hughes. The expenses were kept to a minimum during the prisoner's presence in this state as he has been staying at the home of his father here.

Gilpatric and his guard will leave here tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, arriving at Hartford at noon. Tomorrow afternoon, Gilpatric will be taken to a specialist there to have his eyes examined. He has been told that the left eyeball soon will have to be removed. The former banker's eyesight was shattered when he attempted to take his life when his embezzlements were discovered in August, 1924.

The journey back to Atlanta will be continued tomorrow night, Gilpatric and his guard leaving Hartford at 10 o'clock.

SERGT. THOMAS E. REED, HAS SUFFERED SHOCK

HARTFORD, March 7.—(AP)—Sergeant Thomas E. Reed, pistol instructor of the Connecticut state police department since 1921, suffered a shock while on duty at the police headquarters on Washington street, shortly before noon today and was taken to the Hartford hospital. He was attended by Dr. Emil G. Reinert, of the hospital staff, who said tonight that Sergeant Reed's condition had not materially changed since his admission to the hospital. He was conscious all during the day and was said to be resting comfortably tonight.

Sergeant Reed, whose home is at 39 Spring street, is generally recognized as one of the finest marksmen in the state and holds more than ninety medals for records in marksmanship. He was appointed by Supt. Robert T. Hurley to be instructor in firearms in 1921, after three years as instructor of the Hartford police department.

NEW ISSUE OF THIRTY-YEAR 3 3-4 GOVERNMENT BONDS

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP)—An offering of $600,000,000 in 30-year bonds was announced today by Secretary Mellon in connection with the regular March financing program of the treasury.

The new bonds will bear interest of 3 3-4 per cent and are intended, with balances already on hand and the March tax receipts, to meet the retirement of almost $750,000,000 in outstanding government securities on March 15 and cover the treasury's further cash requirements until June, when further financing will be necessary.

This is the first issue of long term securities offered by the treasury in a year, and the interest rate is lower than on any government bond issued since before the war with the exception of the first Liberty bonds, which were wholly exempt from taxation.

Edward Krump, motorman and Herbert Courtney, conductor, were burned to death when a Lake Shore Electric freight train jumped the tracks three miles west of Lorain, Ohio.

NEWSPAPER DISREGARDED ORDER FROM A JUDGE

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss., March 7.—(AP)—Newspapers appeared in Bay St Louis, county seat of Hancock county, today containing portions of the testimony introduced yesterday in the trial of Jesse Favre, charged with murder. An order was issued by Judge Walter A. White, presiding on February 27, that newspapers "having a circulation in Hancock county" refrain from publishing such testimony.

At the opening of the trial, Judge White had his order read from the court minutes and emphasized it in remarks from the bench. He explained the order was based on the presumption that other cases probably will be tried on the same facts as those developed in the Favre trial, and publication of the testimony would handicap the court in its efforts to procure a fair and impartial jury for trial of these later cases.

During the trial Judge White was asked on what statute he based his order and replied that it was not on any statute but on the "inherent power of the court."

Although the trial was begun Thursday, two days were occupied in the selection of a jury and the first testimony was introduced yesterday. Afternoon newspapers containing testimony reached Bay St. Louis after adjournment of court for the day. Tomorrow's session of the court will be the first since the judicial order hae been violated.

Judge White declined to say in advance what course he would pursue in the event the order should be disregarded.

The most widely circulated daily newspapers in Hancock county are published in New Orleans, 53 miles from Bay St. Louis.

Favre is being tried on a charge of murder resulting from the deaths of T. A. McLemore and W. M. Mingee, federal etomologists, slain February 18, near Picayune, Miss., while on a hunting exedition. The defendant is charged in his case with the murder of McLemore.

SEARCHING FOR THE AUTOIST WHO KILED MRS. KNOWLTON

NEW HAVEN, March 7.—(AP)—The police today were unsuccessful in their search for an unidentified autoist whose machine struck and fatally injured Mrs. Anna Knowlton, 55, of 107 Kimberly avenue. The accident occurred last night as she was crossing the highway near her home. Witnesses said the autoist, snapped off the lights of his machine and disappeared down Lamberton street.

Two suspects were taken to police headquarters but were released when they had proven that they were passengers in a sedan near the scene of the accident while the car that struck the woman was a runabout.

Mrs. Knowlton was taken to New Haven hospital, where she died ten minutes after the accident. Her skull was fractured and she suffered internal injuries.

AMERICAN MUSICAL PLAYS ARE POPULAR IN LONDON

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—Revues have been displaced in the more important theatres of London by musical plays, and chiefly by musical plays from America. The crop of English plays and plays from the continent apparently did not strike managers as being what the public wanted.

A few months ago there were seven revues running but only one has survived. "No, No, Nanette," "Kid Boots," "The Student Prince," "Rose Marie," "Mercenary Mary," "The Blue Kitten" and "Wildflower," all musical lays first produced in the United States, are drawing crowds which refused to patronize revues.

ALARM EARLY SUNDAY FOR WALNUT STREET BLAZE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 7.—A triple bell alarm from Box 28, corner of Walnut and Summit streets brought out the apparatus of Engine Company No. 1 and many spectators, at 1:50 o'clock, Sunday morning, for a slight fire which started from defective plumbing and wiring in the residence at 162 Walnut street, owned by M. Eugene Lincoln and occupied by Arad Robinson and family. The fire burned a small hole through the ceiling of the first floor and was extinguished with six gallons of chemicals. A hot steam pipe had burned the insulation from an electric wire which rested against it, causing the blaze. Mr. Robinson told members of the fire department that he had trouble in trying to give the alarm by telephone and he was forced to run out and pull in the bell alarm. Recall was sounded as soon as the firemen arrived at the fire.

Sunday morning's incident has led Fire Chief Henry J. Kelley to recommend the use of the bell alarm without hesitancy when there is the slightest doubt of making proper telephone connections with the department. Telephone alarms are often very unsatisfactory. Some of the common errors are to fail to give the correct address during the excitement, causing the fire trucks to hurry off to the wrong section of the city, or to forget to tell the nature of the blaze. If the fire is a chimney fire, or a more serious blaze, the department should be told so, in order that the proper apparatus respond to the call. If a man calls and says, "This is John Jones, my house is afire" the firemen must take time ascertaining which John Jones called, or else take a chance of rushing to the house of another John Jones. "The bell alarm is there," announces Chief Kelley. "It is dependable. Use it without fear when in doubt or being delayed."
